

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

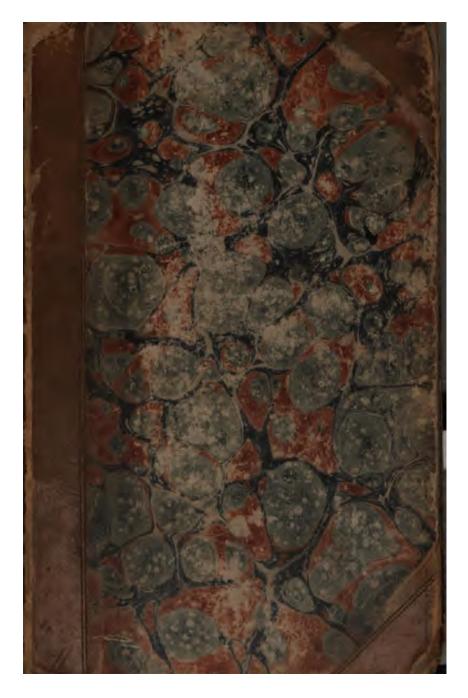

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

28.

.

,

,

THE LIFE 7. /828.

OF

MANSIE WAUCH,

TAILOR IN DALKEITH.

WRITTEN BY HIMSELF.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD, EDINBURGH: AND T. CADELL, LONDON.
MDCCCXXVIII.

66.

		,
	•		•
	•
•

JOHN GALT, Esq.

OF GUELPH, UPPER CANADA,

AUTHOR OF "THE ANNALS OF THE PARISH," &c. &c. &c.

THE FOLLOWING SKETCHES,

PRINCIPALLY OF HUMBLE SCOTTISH CHARACTER,

ARE DEDICATED,

BY HIS SINCERE FRIEND AND ADMIRER,

THE EDITOR.

3

CONTENTS.

Preliminaries,	5
Chap. I.—Auld Granfaither,	9
II.—My Ain Faither,	15
III.—Coming into the World,	29
IV.—Calf-Love,	34
V.—Cursecowl,	39
VI.—Pushing my Fortune,	4 3
VII.—The Forewarning,	56
VIII.—Letting Lodgings,	67
IX.—Benjie's Christening,	75
X.—The Resurrection Men,	82
XI.—Taffy with the Pigtail,	94
Song.—Song of the South	99
Curate of Suverdsio; a Tale of the Swedish Revolution	104

CONTENTS.

Chap. XII.—Volunteering,	186
XIII.—The Chincough Pilgrimage,	195
XIV.—My Lord's Races,	201
XV.—The Return,	213
XVI.—The Bloody Business,	226
XVII.—My First and Last Play,	240
XVIII.—The Barley Fever—and Rebuke,	254
XIX.—The Awful Night,	268
XX Adventures in the Sporting Line,	287
XXI.—Anent Mungo Glen,	304
XXII.—A Philistine in the Coal-Hole,	322
XXIII.—Benjie on the Carpet,	342
XXIV.—Serious Musings,	359
XXV.—Conclusion,	368

PRELIMINARIES.

HAVING, within myself, made observation of late years, that all notable characters, whatsoever line of life they may have pursued, and to whatever business they might belong, have made a trade of committing to paper all the surprising occurrences and remarkable events that chanced to happen to them in the course of providence, during their journey through life-that such as come after them might take warning and be benefitted,—I have found it incumbent on me, following a right example, to do the same thing; and have set down, in black and white, a good few uncos, that I should reckon will not soon be forgotten, provided they make as deep an impression on the world as they have done on me. To this decision I have been urged by the elbowing on of not a few judicious friends; among who: I would particularly remark James Batter, who has been most earnest in his requeesht, and than whom a truer judge on anything connected with book-lear, or a better neibour, does not breathe the breath of life: both of which positions will, I doubt not, appear as clear as daylight to the reader, in the course of the work: to say nothing of the approval the scheme met with from the pious Maister Wiggie, who has now gone to his account, and divers other advisers, that wished either the general good of the world, or studied their own particular profit.

Had the course of my pilgrimage lain just on the beaten track, I would not-at least I think so-have been o'ercome by ony perswasions to do what I have done; but, as will be seen, in the twinkling of half an ee, by the judicious reader, I am a man that has witnessed much, and come through a great deal, both in regard to the times wherein I have lived, and the out-o-the-way adventures in which it has been my fortune to be engaged. Indeed, though I say it myself, who might as well be silent, I that have never stirred, in a manner so to speak, from home, have witnessed mair of the world we live in, and the doings of men, than many who have sailed the salt seas from the East Indies to the West; or, in the course of nature, visited Greenland, Botany-Bay, or Van Dieman's Land. The cream of the matter, and to which we would solicit the attention of auld and young, rich and poor, is just this, that, unless unco doure indeed to learn, the inexperienced may glean from my pages sundry grand lessons, concerning what they have a chance to expect in the course of an active life; and the unsteady may take a hint concerning what it is possible for one of a clear head and a stout heart to go through with.

Notwithstanding, however, these plain and evident conclusions, even after writing the whole out, I thocht I felt a kind of a qualm of conscience about submitting an account of my actions and transactions to the world during my lifetime; and I had almost determined, for decency's sake, not to let the papers be printed till after I had been gathered to my fathers; but I took into consideration the duty that one man owes to another; and that my keeping back, and withholding these curious documents, would be in a great measure hindering the improvement of society, so far as I was myself personally concerned. Now this is a business, which James Batter agrees with me in thinking is carried on, furthered, and brought about, by every one furnishing his share of experience to the general stock. Let-a-be this plain truth, another point of argument for my bringing out my bit book at the present time, is, that I am here to the fore bodily, with the use of my seven senses, to give day and date to all such as venture to put on the misbelieving front of Sadducees, with regard to any of the accidents, mischances, marvellous escapes, and extraordinary businesses therein related; and to shew them, as plain as the bool of a pint stoup, that ilka thing set down by me within its boards, is just as true, as that a blind man needs not spentacles, or that my name is Mansie Wauch.

Perhaps, as a person willing and anxious to give every man his due, it is necessary for me explicitly to mention, that, in the course of this book, I am indebted to my friend James Batter, for his able help in assisting me to spell the kittle words, and in rummaging out scraps of poem-books for head-pieces to my different chapters.

constitute and to a manufacture, so a surface of the distribution of the property of the prope

LIFE

OF

MANSIE WAUCH.

CHAPTER I.

OUR AULD GRANFAITHER.

The sun rises bright in France,
And fair sets he;
But he has tint the blithe blink he had
In my ain countree.

ALLAN CUNNINGHAM.

Some of the rich houses and great folk pretend to have histories of the auncientness of their families, which they can count back on their fingers amaist to the days of Noah's ark, and King Fergus the First; but, whatever may spunk out after, on this point, I am free to confess, with a safe conscience, that it is not in my power to come up within sight of them; having never seen or heard tell of ony body in our connexion, farther back than auld granfaither, that I mind of when a laddie; and who it behoves to have belonged by birthright to some parish or other; but where-away, gude kens. James Batter mostly blinded both his een, looking all last winter for one of our name in the book of Martyrs, to make us proud of; but his search, I am free to confess, waur than failed—as the only man of the name he could find out, was a Serjeant Jacob Waugh, that lost his lug and his left arm, fighting like a Russian Turk against the godly, at the bluidy battle of the Pentland Hills.

Auld grandfaither died when I was a growing callant, some seven or eight year auld: yet I mind him full well; it being a curious thing how early matters take haud of one's memory. He was a straught, tall, auld man, with a shining bell-pow, and reverend white locks hinging down about his haffets; a Roman nose, and twa cheeks blooming through the winter of his lang age like roses, when, puir body, he was sand-blind with infirmity. In his latter days, he was hardly able to crawl about alone; but used to sit resting himself on the truff seat before our door, leaning forit his head on his staff, and finding a kind of pleasure in feeling the beams of God's ain sun beaking on him. A blackbird, that he had tamed, hung above his head in a whand-cage of my faither's making; and he had taken a pride in learning it to whistle twa three turns of his ain favourite sang, "Oure the water to Charlie."

I recollect, as well as yesterday, that, on the Sundays, he wore a braid bannet with a red worsted cherry on the tap o't; and had a single-breasted coat, square in the tails, of light Gilmerton blue, with plaited white buttons, bigger than crown-pieces. His waistcoat was low in the neck, and had flap pouches, wherein he kept his mull for rappee, and his tobacco-box. To look at him, wi' his rig-andfur Shetland hoes pulled up oure his knees, and his big glancing buckles in his shoon, sitting at our doorcheek, clean and tidy as he was kept, was just as if one of the auncient patriarchs had been left on earth, to let succeeding surveevors witness a picture of hoary and venerable eld. Puir body, many a bit Gibraltar-rock and gingebread did he give to me, as he would pat me on the head, and prophesy I would be a great man yet; and sing me bits of auld sangs about the bloody times of the Rebellion, and Prince Charlie. There was nothing that I liked so well as to hear him set a-going with his auld-warld stories and lilts; though my mother used sometimes to say, "Wheesht, granfaither, ye ken it's no canny to let out a word of thae things; let byganes be byganes, and forgotten." He never liked to gie trouble, so a rebuke of this kind would put a tether to his tongue for a wee; but, when we were left by ourselves, I used aye to egg him on to tell me what he had come through in his far-away travels beyond the broad seas; and of the famous battles he had seen and shed his precious blood in; for his pinkie was hacked off by a dragoon of Cornel Gardener's, down by at Prestonpans, and he had catched a bullet with his ankle over in the north at Culloden. So it was no wonder that he liked to crack about these times, though they had brought him muckle and no little mischief, having obliged him to skulk like another Cain among the Hieland hills and heather, for many a long month and day, homeless and hungry. No dauring to be seen in his own country, where his head would have been chacked off like a sybo, he took leg-bail in a ship, over the sea, among the Dutch folk; where he followed out his lawful trade of a cooper, making girrs for the herring barrels, and so on; and sending, when he could find time and opportunity, such savings from his wages as he could afford, for the mainteenance of his wife and small family of three helpless weans, that he had been obligated to leave, dowie and destitute, at their native home of pleasant Dalkeith.

At lang and last, when the breeze had blown oure, and the feverish pulse of the country began to grow calm and cool, auld granfaither took a longing to see his native land; and, though not free of jeopardy from king's cutters on the sea, and from spies on shore, he risked his neck over in a sloop from Rotterdam to Aberlady, that came across with a valuable cargo of smuggled gin. When granfaither had been obliged to take the wings of flight for the preservation of his life and liberty, my faither was a wean at grannie's breast: so, by her fending-for she was a canny industrious body, and kept a bit shop, in the which she sold oatmeal and red herrings, needles and prins, potatoes, and tape, and cabbage, and what not-he had grown a strapping laddie of eleven or twelve, helping his two sisters, one of whom perished of the measles in the dear year, to gang errands, chap sand, carry water, and keep the housie clean. I have heard him say, when auld granfaither came to their door at the dead of night, tirling, like a thief o' darkness, at the windowbrod to get in, that he was so altered in his voice and lingo, that no living soul kenned him, not even the wife of his bosom; so he had to put grannie in mind of things that had happened between them, before she would allow my faither to lift the sneck, or draw the bar. Many and many a year, for gude kens how long after, I've heard tell, that his speech was so Dutchified as to be scarcely kenspeckle to a Scotch European; but Nature is powerful, and, in the course of time, he came in the upshot to gather his words together like a Christian.

Of my auntie Bell, that, as I have just said, died of the measles in the dear year, at the age of fourteen, I have no story to tell but one, and that a short ane, though not without a sprinkling of interest. Among her other ways of doing, grannie kept a cow, and sold the milk round about to the neibours in a pitcher, whiles carried by my faither, and whiles by my aunties, at the ransom of a ha'penny the mutchkin. Well, ye observe, that the cow ran yeild, and it was as plain as pease that she was with calf:—Geordie Drouth, the horse-doctor, could have made solemn affidavy on that head. So they waited on, and better waited on for the prowie's calfing, keeping it upon draff and ait-strae in the byre; till one morning every thing seemed in a fair way, and my auntie Bell was set out to keep watch and ward.

Some of her companions, howsoever, chancing to come by, took her out to the back of the house to have a game at the pallall; and, in the interim, Donald Bogie, the tinkler from Yetholm, came and left his little jackass in the byre, while he was selling about his crockery of cups and saucers, and brown plates, on the auld ane, thro' the town, in two creels.

In the middle of auntie Bell's game, she heard an unco noise in the byre; and, kenning that she had neglected her charge, she ran round the gable, and opened the door in a great hurry; when, seeing the beastie, she pulled it to again, and fleeing, half out of breath, into the kitchen, cried—"Come away, come away, mother, as fast as ye can. Ay, lyst, the cow's cauffed,—and it's a cuddie!"

CHAPTER II.

MY AIN FAITHER.

The weaver he gied up the stair, Dancing and singing; A bunch o' bobbins at his back, Rattling and ringing.

Old Song.

My own faither, that is to say, auld Mansie Wauch, with regard to myself, but young Mansie, with reference to my granfaither, after having run the errands, and done his best to grannie during his early years, was, at the age of thirteen, as I have heard him tell, bound a prentice to the weaver trade, which, from that day and date, for better for worse, he prosecuted to the hour of his death:—I should rather have said to within a fortnight o't, for he lay for that time in the mortal fever, that cut through the thread of his existence. Alas! as Job says, "How time flies like a weaver's shuttle!"

He was a tall, thin, lowering man, blackaviced, and something in the physog like myself, though-

scarcely so weil-faured; with a kind of blueness about his chin, as if his beard grew of that colour—which I scarcely think it would do—but might arise either from the dust of the blue cloth, constantly flying about the shop, taking a rest there, or from his having a custom of giving it a rub now and then with his finger and thumb, both of which were dyed of that colour, as well as his apron, from rubbing against, and handling the webs of checkit claith in the loom.

Ill would it become me, I trust a dutiful son, to say that my faither was any thing but a decent, industrious, hard-working man, doing every thing for the good of his family, and winning the respect of all that kenned the value of his worth. As to his decency, few-very few indeed-laid beneath the mools of Dalkeith kirk-yard, made their beds there, leaving a better name behind them; and as to industry, it is but little to say that he toiled the very flesh off his bones, casing the shuttle from Monday morning till Saturday night, from the rising up of the sun, even to the going down thereof; and whiles, when opportunity led him, or occasion required, digging and delving away at the bit kail-yard, till moon and stars were in the lift, and the dews of heaven that fell on his head, were like the oil that flowed from Aaron's beard, even to the skirts of his garment. But what will ye say there? Some are born with a silver spoon in their mouths, and others with a parritch-stick. Of the latter was my faither; for, with all his fechting, he never was able much more than to keep our heads above the ocean of debt. Whatever was denied him, a kind providence, howsoever, enabled him to do that; and so he departed this life contented, leaving to my mother and me, the two survivors, the prideful remembrance of being, respectively, she the widow, and me the son of an honest man. Some left with twenty thousand cannot boast as much; so ilka ane has their comforts.

Having never entered much into public life, farther than attending the kirk twice every sabbath—and thrice when there was evening service—the days of my faither glided over like the waters of a deep river that make little noise in their course; so I do not know whether to lament or to rejoice at having almost nothing to record of him. Had Buonaparte as little ill to account for, it would be well this day for him:—but, losh me! I had amaist skipped over his wedding.

In the five-and-twentieth year of his age, he had fallen in love with my mother, Marion Laverock, at the Christening of a neibour's bairn, where they both happened to forgather, little, I daresay, jealousing, at the time their een first met, that fate had destined them for a pair, and to be the honoured parents of me, their only bairn. Seeing my faither's heart was catched as in the net of the fowler, she took every lawful means, such as adding another knot to her cockernony, putting up her hair in screw curls, and so on, to follow up her advantage; the result of all which was, that, after a three months' courtship, she wrote a letter out to her friends at Loanhead, telling them of what was more than likely to happen, and giving a kind invitation to such of them as might think it worth their whiles, to come in and be spectators of the ceremony.—And a prime day I am told they had of it, having, by advice of more than one, consented to make it a pennywedding; and hiring Deacon Laurie's maltbarn for five shillings, for the express purpose.

Many yet living, among whom are James Batter, who was the best-man, and Duncan Imrie, the heelcutter in the Flesh-Market Close, are yet above board to bear solemn testimony to the grandness of the occasion, and the unaccountable numerousness of the company, with such a display of mutton-broth, swimming thick with raisins,-and roasted jiggets of lamb,-to say nothing of mashed turnips and champed potatoes,-as had not been seen in the wide parish o' Dalkeith in the memory of man. It was not only my faither's bridal-day, but it brought many a lad and lass together by way of partners at foursome reels and hieland jigs, whose courtship did not end in smoke, couple above couple dating the day of their happiness from that famous forgathering. There were no less than three fiddlers, two of them blind with the sma'-pox, and one naturally, and a piper with his drone and chanter, playing as many pibrochs as would have deaved a mill-happer,—all skirling, scraping, and bumming away through-ither, the whole afternoon and night, and keeping half the country-side dancing, capering, and cutting, in strathspey step and quick time, as if they were without a weary, or had not a bone in their bodies. In the days of darkness, the whole concern would have been imputed to magic and glamour; and douce folk, finding how they were transgressing over their usual bounds, would have looked about them for the wooden pin that auld Michael Scott the warlock drave in behind the door, leaving the family to dance themselves to death at their leisure.

Had the business ended in dancing, so far well, for a sound sleep would have brought a blithe wakening, and all be tight and right again; but, alas and alackaday, the violent heat and fume of foment they were all thrown into, caused the emptying of so many ale-tankers, and the swallowing of so muckle toddy, by way of cooling and refreshing the company, that they all got as fou as the Baltic; and many ploys, that shall be nameless, were the result of a sober ceremony, whereby two douce and decent people, Mansie Wauch, my honoured faither, and Marion Laverock, my respected mother, were linked thegither, for better for worse, in the lawful bonds of honest wedlock.

It seems as if Providence, reserving every thing famous and remarkable for me, allowed little or nothing of consequence to happen to my father, who had few cruiks in his lot: at least I never learned. either from him or any other body, of any adventures likely seriously to interest the world at large. I have heard tell, indeed, that he once got a terrible fright by taking the bounty, during the American war, from an Eirish corporal, of the name of Dochart O'Flaucherty, at Dalkeith Fair, when he was at his prenticeship: he, no being accustomed to malt-liquor, having got fouish and frisky-which was not his natural disposition—over a half a bottle of porter. From this it will easily be seen, in the first place, that it would be with a fecht that his master would get him off, by obleeging the corporal to take back the trepan money; in the second place, how long a date back it is since the Eirish began to be the death of us; and, in conclusion, that my honoured father got such a fleg, as to spain him effectually, for the space of ten years, from every drinkable stronger than good spring-well water. Let the unwary take caution; and may this be a wholesome lesson to all whom it may concern.

In this family history it becomes me, as an honest man, to make passing mention of my faither's sister, auntic Mysie, that married a carpenter and undertaker in the town of Jedburgh; and who, in the course of nature and industry, came to be in a prosperous and thriving way; indeed, so much so, as to be raised from the rank of a private head of a family, and at last elected, by a majority of two votes, a member of the town-council itself.

There is a good story, howsoever, connected with this business, with which I shall make myself free to wind up this somewhat fusty and fushionless chapter.

Well, ye see, some great lord,—I forget his name, but no matter,—that had made a most tremendous sum of money, either by foul or fair means, among the blacks in the East Indies, had returned, before he died, to lay his bones at home, as yellow as a Limerick glove, and as rich as Dives in the New Testament. He kept flunkies with plush small-clothes, and sky-blue coats with scarlet-velvet cuffs and collars,—lived like a princie,—and settled, as I said before, in the neighbourhood of Jedburgh.

The body, though as brown as a toad's back, was as prideful and full of power as auld King Nebuchadneisher; and how to exhibit all his purple and fine linen, he aye thought and better thought, till at last the happy determination came over his mind like a flash of lightning, to invite the bailies, deacons, and town-council, all in a body, to come and dine with him.

Save us! what a brushing of coats, such a switching of stoury trowsers, and bleaching of white cotton stockings, as took place before the catastrophe of the feast, never before happened since Jeddert was a burgh. Some of them that were forward, and gevan bold in the spirit, crawed aloud for joy, at being able to boast that they had received an invitation letter to dine with a great lord; while others, as proud as peacocks of the honour, yet not very sure as to their being up to the trade of behaving themselves at the tables of the great, were mostly dung stupid with not kenning what to think. A council meeting or two took place in the gloamings, to take such a serious business into consideration; some expressing their fears and inward doun-sinking, while others cheered them up with a fillip of pleasant consolation. Scarcely a word of the matter for which they were summoned together by the town offisher-and which was about the mending of the old bell-rope-was discussed by any of them. So after a sowd of toddy was swallowed, with the hopes of making them brave men, and good soldiers of the magistracy, they all plucked up a proud spirit, and, do or die, determined to march in a body up to the gate, and forward to the table of his lordship.

My uncle, who had been one of the ringleaders of the chicken-hearted, crap away up among the rest, with his new blue coat on, shining fresh from the ironing of the goose, but keeping well among the thick, to be as little kenspeckle as possible; for all the folk of the town were at their doors and windows to witness the great occasion of the town-council, going away up like gentlemen of rank to take their dinner with his lordship. That it was a terrible trial to all cannot be for a moment denied; yet some of them behaved themselves decently; and, if we confess that others trembled in the knees, as if they were marching to a field of battle, it was all in the course of human nature.

Yet ye would wonder how they came on by degrees; and, to cut a long tale short, at length found themselves in a great big room, like a palace in a fairy tale, full of grand pictures with gold frames, and looking-glasses like the side of a house, where they could see down to their very shoes. For a while they were like men in a dream, perfectly dazzled, and dumbfoundered; and it was five minutes before they could either see a seat, or think of sitting down. With the reflection of the lookingglasses, one of the bailies was so possessed within himself, that he tried to chair himself where chair was none, and landed, not very softly, on the carpet; while another of the deacons, a fat and dumpy man, as he was trying to make a bow, and throw out his leg behind him, stramped on a favourite Newfoundland dog's tail, that, wakening out of its slumbers with a yell that made the roof ring, played drive against my uncle, who was standing abaft, and wheeled him like a butterflee, side foremost, against a table with a heap o' flowers on't, where, in trying to kep himself, he drove his head, like a batteringram, through a looking-glass, and bleached back on his hands and feet on the carpet.

Seeing what had happened, they were all frightened; but his lordship, after laughing heartily, was politer, and kent better about manners than all that; so, bidding the flunkies hurry away with the fragments of the china jugs and jars, they found themselves, sweating with terror and vexation, ranged along silk settees, cracking about the weather and other wonderfuls.

Such a dinner! the fume of it went round about their hearts like myrrh and frankincense. The landlord took the head of the table, the bailies the right and left of him; the deacons and councillors were ranged along the sides, like files of sodgers; and the chaplain, at the foot, said grace. It is entirely out of the power of man to set down on paper all that they got to eat and drink; and such was the effect of French cookery, that they did not ken fish from flesh. Howsoever, for all that, they laid their lugs in every thing that lay before them, and what they could not eat with forks they supped with spoons; so it was all to one purpose.

When the dishes were removing, each had a large blue glass bowl full of water, and a clean calendered damask towel, put down by a smart flunky before him; and many of them that had not helped themselves well to the wine, while they were eating their steaks and French frigassees, were now vexed to death on that score, imagining that nothing remained for them, but to dight their nebs and flee up.

Ignorant folk should not judge rashly, and the worthy town-council were here in error; for their surmises, however feasible, did the landlord wrong. In a minute they had fresh wine decanters ranged down before them, filled with liquors of all variety of colours, red, green, and blue; and the table was covered with dishes full of jargonelles and pippins, raisins and almonds, shell-walnuts, and plumdamases, and nut-crackers, and every thing they could think of eating; so that after drinking "The King, and long life to him," and "The constitution of the country at home and abroad," and "Success to trade," and "A good harvest," and "May ne'er waur be among us," and "Botheration to the French;" and "Corny toes and short shoes to the foes of old Scotland," and so on, their tongues began at length not to be so tacked; and the weight of their own dignity, that had taken flight before his lordship, came back and rested on their shoulders.

In the course of the evening, his lordship whispered to one of the flunkies to bring in some things—they could not hear what—as the company might like them. The wise ones thought within themselves that the best aye comes hindmost; so in brushed a powdered valet, with three dishes on his arm of twisted black things, just like sticks of Gibraltar-rock, but different in the colour.

Bailie Bowie helped himself to a jargonelle, and Deacon Purvis to a wheen raisins; and my uncle, to shew that he was not frighted, and kent what he was about, helped himself to one of the long black things, which without much ceremony he shoved into his mouth, and began to. Two or three more, seeing that my uncle was up to trap, followed his example, and chewed away like nine-year olds.

Instead of the curious-looking black thing being sweet as honey-for so they expected-they soon found they had catched a Tartar; for it had a confounded bitter tobacco-taste. Manners, however, forbade them laying them down again, more especially as his lordship, like a man dumfoundered, was ave keeping his eye on them. So away they chewed, and better chewed, and whammelled them round in their mouths, first in one cheek, and then in the other, taking now and then a mouthful of drink to wash the trash down, then chewing away again, and syne another whammel from one cheek to the other, and syne another mouthful, while the whole time their een were staring in their heads like mad, and the faces they made may be imagined, but cannot be described. His lordship gave his eyes a rub, and thought he was dreaming; but no-there they were bodily, chewing, and whammelling, and making faces; so no wonder that, in keeping in his laugh, he sprung a button from his waistcoat, and was like to drop down from his chair, through the floor, in an ecstacy of astonishment, seeing they were all growing sea-sick, and pale as stucco-images.

Frightened out of his wits at last, that he would be the death of the whole council, and that more of them would pushion themselves, he took up one of the segars—every one knows segars now, for they are fashionable among the very sweeps—which he lighted at the candle, and commenced puffing like a tobacco-pipe.

My uncle and the rest, if they were ill before, were worse now; so when they got to the open air, instead of growing better they grew sicker and sicker, till they were waggling from side to side like ships in a storm; and, no kenning whether their heels or heads were uppermost, went spinning round about like pieries.

"A little spark may make muckle wark." It is perfectly wonderful what great events spring out of trifles, or what seem to common eyes but trifles. I do not allude to the nine days' deadly sickness, that was the legacy of every one that ate his segar, but to the awful truth, that, at the next election of councillors, my poor uncle Jamie was completely blackballed—a general spite having been taken to him in the town-hall, on account of having led the magistracy wrong, by doing what he ought to have let alone, thereby making himself and the rest a topic of amusement to the world at large, for many and many a month.

Others, to be sure, it becomes me to make mention, have another version of the story, and impute the cause of his having been turned out to the implacable wrath of old Bailie Bogie, whose best black coat, square in the tails, that he had worn only on the Sundays for nine year, was totally spoiled, on their way home in the dark from his lordships, by a tremendous blash, that my unfortunate uncle happened, in the course of nature, to let flee in the frenzy of a deadly upthrowing.

CHAPTER III.

COMING INTO THE WORLD.

At first the babe
Was sickly; and a smile was seen to pass
Across the midwife's cheek, when, holding up
The feeble wretch, she to the father said,
"A fine man child!" What else could they expect?
The father being, as I said before,
A weaver.

Hogg's Poetic Mirror.

I have no distinct recollection of the thing myself, yet there is every reason to believe that I was born on the 15th of October, 1765, in that little house, standing by itself, not many yards from the eastmost side of the Flesh-Market Gate, Dalkeith. My eyes opened on the light about two o'clock in a dark and rainy morning. Long was it spoken about that something great and mysterious would happen on that dreary night; as the cat, after washing her face, gaed mewing about, with her tail sweeing behind her like a ramrod; and a corbie, from the Duke's woods, tumbled down Jamie Elder's lum, when he had set the little still a-going—giving them a terrible fright, as they first took it for the deevil, and then for an exciseman—and fell with a great cloud of soot, and a loud skraigh, into the empty kail-pot.

The first thing that I have any clear memory of, was my being carried out on my auntie's shoulder, with a leather cap tied under my chin, to see the Fair Race. Oh! but it was a grand sight! I have read since then the story of Aladdin's Wonderful Lamp, but this beat it all to sticks. There was a long row of tables, covered with carpets of bonny patterns, heaped from one end to the other with shoes of every kind and size, some with polished soles, and some glittering with sparribles and cuddyheels; and little red worsted boots for bairns, with blue and white edgings, hinging like strings of flowers up the posts at each end; -and then what a collection of luggies! the whole meal in the market-sacks on a Thursday did not seem able to fill them ;-and horn-spoons, green and black freckled, with shanks clear as amber, -and timber caups, -and ivory eggcups of every pattern. Have a care of us! all the eggs in Smeaton dairy might have found resting places for their doups in a row. As for the gingerbread, I shall not attempt a description. Sixpenny and shilling cakes, in paper, tied with skinie; and roundabouts, and snaps, brown and white quality, and parliaments, on stands covered with calendered linen, clean from the fold. To pass it was just impossible; it set my teeth a-watering, and I skirled like mad, until I had a gilded lady thurst into my little nieve; the which, after admiring for a minute, I applied my teeth to, and of the head I made no bones; so that in less than no time, she had vanished, petticoats and all, no trace of her being to the fore, save and except long treacly daubs, extending east and west from ear to ear, and north and south from cape neb of the nose to the extremity of beardyland.

But what, of all things, attracted my attention on that memorable day, was the show of cows, sheep, and horses, mooing, basing, and neighering; and the race-that was best! Od, what a sight!-we were jammed in the crowd of auld wives, with their toys and shining ribbons; and carter lads, with their blue bonnets; and young wenches, carrying home their fairings in napkins, as muckle as would hold their teeth going for a month ;-there scarcely could be muckle for love, when there was so much for the stomach; -and men, with wooden legs, and brass virls at the end of them, playing on the fiddle,-and a bear that roared, and danced on its hind feet, with a muzzled mouth,-and Punch and Polly,-and puppie-shows, and mair than I can tell,-when up came the horses to the starting-post. I shall never forget the bonny dresses of the riders. One had a napkin tied round his head, with the flaps fleeing behind him; and his coat-tails were curled up into a big hump behind; it was so tight buttoned ve wadna thought he could have breathed. His cordurov trowsers (such like as I have often since made to growing callants) were tied round his ankles with a string; and he had a rusty spur on one shoe, which I saw a man take off to lend him. Save us! how he pulled the beast's head by the bridle, and flapped up and down on the saddle when he tried a canter! The second one had on a black velvet huntingcap, and his coat stripped. I wonder he was not feared of cauld, his shirt being like a riddle, and his nether nankeens but thin for such weather; but he was a brave lad; and sorry were the folks for him, when he fell off in taking ower sharp a turn, by which auld Pullen, the bell-ringer, wha was holding the post, was made to coup the creels, and got a bloody nose.-And but the last was a wearyful one! He was all life, and as gleg as an eel. Up and down he went; and up and down gaed the beast on its hind-legs and its fore-legs, funking like mad; yet though he was not aboon thirteen, or fourteen at most, he did not cry out for help more than five or six times, but grippit at the mane with one hand, and at the back of the saddle with the other, till daft Robie, the hostler at the stables, claught hold of the beast by the head, and off they set. The young birkie had neither hat nor shoon, but he did not spare the stick; round and round they flew like daft. Ye would have thought their een would have loupen out; and loudly all the crowd were hurraing, when young hatless came up foremost, standing in the stirrups, the long stick between his teeth, and his white hair fleeing behind him in the wind like streamers on a frosty night.

CHAPTER IV.

CALF-LOVE.

Bonny lassie, will ye go, will ye go, will ye go, Bonny lassie, will ye go to the Birks of Aberfeldy?

BURNS.

For a tailor is a man, a man, a man, And a tailor is a man.

Popular Song.

THE long and the short is, that I was sent to school, where I learned to read and spell, making great progress in the Single's and Mother's Carritch. Na, what is more, few could fickle me in the Bible, being mostly able to spell it all over, save the second of Ezra and the seventh of Nehemiah, which the Dominie himself could never read through twice in the same way.

My father, to whom I was born, like Isaac to A-braham, in his old age, was an elder in the Relief Kirk, respected by all for his canny and douce behaviour, and, as I have observed before, a weaver to his trade. The cot and the kail-yard were his own, and had been auld granfaither's; but still he had to ply the shuttle from Monday to Saturday, to keep all right and tight. The thrums were a perquisite of my own, which I niffered with the gundy-wife for Gibraltar rock, cut-throat, gib, or bulls-eyes.

Having come into the world before my time, and being of a pale face and delicate make, Nature never could have intended me for the naval or military line, or for any robustious trade or profession whatsoever. No, no, I never liked fighting in my life; peace was aye in my thoughts. When there was any riot in the streets, I fled, and scougged myself at the chumley-lug as quickly as I dowed; and, rather than double a nieve to a school-fellow, I pocketed many shabby epithets, got my paiks, and took the coucher's blow from laddies that could hardly reach up to my waistband.

Just after I was put to my 'prenticeship, having made free choice of the tailoring trade, I had a terrible stound of calf-love. Never shall I forget it. I was growing up, long and lank as a willow-wand. Brawns to my legs there were none, as my trowsers of other years too visibly effected to show. The long yellow hair hung down, like a flax-wig, the length of my lantern jaws, which looked, notwithstanding my yapness and stiff appetite, as if eating and they had broken up acquaintanceship. My blue jacket seemed in the sleeves to have picked a quarrel with the wrists, and had retreated to a tait below the elbows. The haunch-buttons, on the contrary, appeared to have taken a strong liking to the shoulders, a little below which they showed their tarnished brightness. At the middle of the back the tails terminated, leaving the well-worn rear of my corduroys, like a full moon seen through a dark haze. Oh! but I must have been a bonny lad.

My first flame was the minister's lassie, Jess, a buxom and forward quean, two or three years older than myself. I used to sit looking at her in the kirk, and felt a droll confusion when our een met. It dirled through my heart like a dart, and I looked down at my psalm-book sheepish and blushing. Fain would I have spoken to her, but it would not do; my courage ave failed me at the pinch, though she whiles gave me a smile when she passed me. She used to go to the well every night with her twa stoups, to draw water after the manner of the Israelites at gloaming; so I thought of watching to give her the two apples which I had carried in my pouch for more than a week for that purpose. How she laughed when I stappit them into her hand, and brushed bye without speaking! I stood at the bottom of the close listening, and heard her laughing till she was like to split. My heart flap-flappit in my breast like a pair of fanners. It was a moment of heavenly hope; but I saw Jamie Coom, the blacksmith, who I ave jealoused was my rival, coming down to the well. I saw her give him one of the apples; and hearing him say, with a loud gaffaw, "Where is the tailor?" I took to my heels, and never stopped till I found myself on the little stool by the fireside, and the hamely sound of my mother's wheel bum-bumming in my lug, like a gentle lullaby.

Every noise I heard flustered me, but I calmed in time, though I went to my bed without my supper. When I was driving out the gaislings to the grass on the next morn, who was it my ill fate to meet but the blacksmith. "Ou, Mansie," said Jamie Coom, "are ye gaun to take me for your best man? I hear you are to be cried in the kirk on Sunday?"

" Me!" answered I, shaking and staring.

"Yes!" said he, "Jess the minister's maid told me last night, that you had been giving up your name at the manse. Ay, it's ower true—for she showed me the apples ye gied her in a present. This is a bonny story, Mansie, my man, and you only at your prenticeship yet."

Terror and despair had struck me dumb. I stood as still and as stiff as a web of buckram. My tongue was tied, and I could not contradict him. Jamie faulded his arms, and gaed away whistling, turning every now and then his sooty face over his shoulder, and mostly sticking his tune, as he could not keep his mouth screwed for laughing. What would I not have given to have laughed too!

There was no time to be lost; this was the Saturday. The next rising sun would shine on the Sabbath. Ah, what a case I was in! I could mostly have drowned myself, had I not been frighted. What could I do? My love had vanished like lightning; but oh, I was in a terrible gliff! Instead of gundy, I sold my thrums to Mrs. Walnut for a penny, with which I bought at the counter a sheet of paper and a pen; so that in the afternoon I wrote out a letter to the minister, telling him what I had been given to hear, and begging him, for the sake of mercy, not to believe Jess's word, as I was not able to keep a wife, and as she was a leeing gipsy.

CHAPTER V.

CURSECOWL.

From his red poll a redder cowl hung down;
His jacket, if thro' grease we guess, was brown;
A vigorous scamp, some forty summers old;
Rough Shetland stockings up his thighs were rolled;
While at his side horn-handled steels and knives
Gleamed from his pouch, and thirsted for sheep's lives.

Oddersty's Miscellanea Classica.

But, losh me! I have come on ower far already, before mentioning a wonderful thing that happened to me when I was only seven year old. Few things in my eventful life have made a deeper impression on me than what I am going to relate.

It was the custom, in those times, for the different schools to have cock-fighting on Fastern's E'en; and the victor, as he was called, treated the other scholars to a football. Many a dust have I seen rise out of that business—broken shins and broken heads, sore bones, and sound duckings—but this was none of these.

Our next neighbour was a flesher; and right before the window was a large stone, on which auld wives with their weans would sometimes take a rest; so what does I, when I saw the whole hobbleshaw coming fleeing down the street, with the kickba' at their noses, but up I speels upon the stone, (I was a wee chap with a daidley, a ruffled shirt, and leather cap edged with rabbit fur,) that I might see all the fun. This one fell, and that one fell, and a third was knocked over, and a fourth got a bloody nose; and so on; and there was such a noise and din, as would have deaved the workmen of Babel-when, lo! and behold! the ball played bounce mostly at my feet, and the whole mob after it. I thought I should have been dung to pieces; so I pressed myself back with all my might, and through went my elbow into Cursecowl's kitchen. It did not stick long there. Before ye could say Jack Robison, out flew the flesher in his killing-claiths; his face was as red as fire, and he had his pouch full of bloody knives buckled to his side. I skreighed out in his face when I looked at him, but he did not stop a moment for that. With a girn that was like to rive his mouth, he twisted his nieve in the back of my hair, and off with me hinging by the cuff of the neck, like a kittling. My een were like to loup out of my head, but I had no breath to cry. I heard him thraw the key, for I could not look down, the skin of my face was pulled so tight; and in he flang me like a pair of auld boots into his booth, where I landed on my knees upon a raw bloody calf's skin. I thought I would have gone out of my wits, when I heard the door locked upon me, and looked round me in sic an unvearthly place. It had only one sparred window, and there was a garden behind; but how was I to get out? I danced round and round about, stamping my heels on the floor, and rubbing my begritten face with my coat-sleeve. To make matters worse, it was wearing to the darkening. The floor was all covered with lappered blood, and sheep and calf skins. The calves and the sheep themselves, with their cuttit throats, and glazed een, and ghastly girning faces, were hanging about on pins, heels uppermost. Losh me! I thought on Bluebeard and his wives in the bloody chamber!

And all the time it was growing darker and darker, and more dreary; and all was quiet as death itself. It looked, by all the world, like a grave, and me buried alive within it; till the rottens came out of their holes to lick the blood, and whisked about like wee evil spirits. I thought on my father, and my mother, and how I should never see them more; for I was sure that Cursecowl would come in the dark, tie my hands and feet thegither, and lay me across the killing-stool. I grew more and more frightened; and it grew more and more dark. I thought all the sheepheads were looking at ane anither, and then girngirning at me. At last I grew desperate; and my hair was as stiff as wire, though it was as wet as if I had been douking in the Esk. I began to bite through the wooden spars with my teeth, and rugged at them with my nails, till they were like to come off-but no, it would not do. At length, when I had greeted myself mostly blind. and cried till I was as hoarse as a corbie, I saw auld Janet Hoge taking in her bit claiths from the bushes, and I reeled and screamed till she heard me .- It was like being transported into heaven; for, in less than no time, my mother, with her apron at her een, was at the door; and Cursecowl, with a candle in the front of his hat, had scarcely thrawn the key, when out I flew, and she lifted up her foot, (I dare say it was the first and last time in her life, for she was a douce woman,) and gave him such a kick and a push, that he played bleach over, head foremost; and, as we ran down the close, we heard him cursing and swearing, in the dark, like a devil incarnate.

CHAPTER VI.

PUSHING MY FORTUNE.

Oh, love, love, lassie,

Love is like a dizziness,

It winna let a puir bodie

Gang about their business.

JAMES HOGG.

The days of the years of my 'prenticeship having glided cannily over on the working-board of my respected maister, James Hosey, where I sat working cross-legged like a busy bee, in the true spirit of industrious contentment, I found myself, at the end of the seven year, so well instructed in the tailoring trade, to which I had paid a near-sighted attention, that, without more ado, I girt myself round about with a proud determination of at once cutting my mother's apron string, and venturing to go without a hold. Thinks I to myself "faint heart never won fair lady;" so, taking my stick in my hand, I set out towards Edinburgh, as brave as a Hielander, in search of a journeyman's place. When I think how many have been out of bread, month after month, making vain application at the house of call, I may set it down to an especial providence, that I found one, on the very first day, to my heart's content, in by at the Grassmarket, where I stayed for the space of six calendar months.

Had it not been from a real sense of the duty I owed to my future employers, whomsoever they might be, in making myself a first-rate hand in the cutting, shaping, and sewing line, I would not have found courage in my breast to have helped me out through such a long and dreary time. The change from our own town, where ilka face was friendly, and where I could ken every man I saw, by the cut of his coat, at half a mile's distance, to the bum and bustle o' the High Street, the tremendous cannons of the Castle packed full of soldiers ready for war, and the filthy, ill-smelling abominations of the Cowgate, where I put up, was amaist more than could be tholed by man of woman born. My lodging was up six pair of stairs, in a room of Widow Randie's, which I rented for half-a-crown a-week, coals included; and many a time, after putting out my candle, before stepping into my bed, I used to look out at the window, where I could see thousands and thousands of lamps, spreading for miles adown streets and through squares, where I did not ken a living soul; and dreeing the awful and insignificant sense of being a lonely stranger in a foreign land. Then would the memory of past days return to me; yet I had the same trust in heaven as I had before, seeing that they were the dividual stars above my head which I used to glour up at in wonder at Dalkeith—pleasant Dalkeith! aye how different, with its bonny river Esk, its gardens full of gooseberry bushes and pear trees, its grass parks, spotted with sheep, and its grand green woods, from the bullying blackguards, the comfortless reek, and the nasty gutters of the Netherbow.

To those, nevertheless, that take the world as they find it, there are pleasures in all situations; nor was mine, bad though I allow it to be, entirely destitute of them; for our work-room being at the top of the stairs, and the light of heaven coming down through sky-lights, three in number, we could, by putting out our heads, have a vizzy of the grand auncient building of George Heriot's Hospital, with the crowds of young laddies playing through the green parks, with their bit green coaties, and shining leather caps, like a wheen puddocks ;-and all the sweet country out by Barrowmuirhead, and thereaway; together with the Corstorphine Hillsand the Braid Hills-and the Pentland Hills-and all the rest of the hills, covered here and there with tufts of blooming whins, as yellow as the beaten gold-spotted round about their bottoms with green trees, and growing corn, but with tops as bare as a gaberlunzie's coat-kepping the rowling clouds on their awful shouthers on cold and misty days; and freckled over with the flowers of the purple heather, on which the shy moor-fowl take a delight to fatten and fill their craps, through the cosey months of the blythe summer time.

Let nobody take it amiss, yet I must bear witness to the truth, though the de'il should have me. My heart was sea-sick of Edinburgh folk and town manners, for the which I had no stomach. I could form no friendly acquaintanceship with a living soul; so I abode by myself, like St. John in the isle of Patmos, on spare allowance, making a sheep-head serve me for three days' kitchen. I longed like a sailor that has been long at sea, and wasted and weather-beaten, to see once more my native home; and, bundling up, flee from the noisy stramash to the loun dykeside of domestic privacy. Every thing around me seemed to smell of sin and pollution, like the garments of the Egyptians with the ten plagues; and often, after I took off my claes to lie down in my bed, when the watchmen that guarded us through the night in blue dreadnoughts with red necks, and battons, and horn-bouets, from thieves, murderers, and pickpockets, were bawling "half-past ten o'clock," did I commune with my own heart, and think within myself, that I would rather be a sober, poor, honest man in the country, able to clear my day and way by the help of providence, than the Provost himself, my lord though he be, or even the Mayor of London, with his velvet gown trailing for yards in the glaur behind him—do what he likes to keep it up; or riding about the streets—as Joey Smith the Yorkshire jockey, to whom I made a hunting-cap, told me—in a coach made of clear crystal, and wheels of the beaten gold.

It was an awful business; dog on it, I ave wonder yet how I got through with it. There was no rest for soul or body, by night or day, with police officers crying "one o'clock, an' a frosty morning," knocking Eirishmen's teeth down their throats with their battons, hauling limmers by the lug and horn into the lock-up-house, or over by to Bridewell, where they were set to beat hemp for a small wage, and got their heads shaved; with carters bawling, " ye yo, yellow sand, yellow sand," with mouths as wide as a barn-door, and voices that made the drums of your ears dirl, and ring again like mad; with fishwives from Newhaven, Cockenzie, and Fisherrow, skirling "roug-a-rug, warstling herring," as if every one was trying to drown out her neibour, till the very landladies at the top of the seventeen storey houses, could hear, if they liked to be fashed, and might come down at their leisure to buy them at three for a-penny; men from Barnton, and thereaway on the Queensferry road, halloing "Sour douk, sour douk;" tinklers skirmishing the edges of brown plates, they were trying to make the auld wives buy—and what not. To me it was a real hell upon earth.

Never let us repine, howsomever, but consider that all is ordered for the best. The sons of the patriarch Jacob found out their brother Joseph in a foreign land, and where they least expected it; so it was here—even here where my heart was sickening unto death, from my daily and nightly thoughts being as bitter as gall—that I fell in with the greatest blessing of my life, Nanse Cromie!

In the flat below our workshop lived Mrs. Whitterraick, the wife of Mr. Whitteraick, a dealer in hens and hams in the poultry market, that had been fallen in with, when her gudeman was riding out on his bit sheltie in the Lauder direction, bargaining with the farmers for their ducks, chickens, gaislings, geese, turkey-pouts, howtowdies, guinea-hens, and other barn-door fowls; and, among his other calls, having happened to make a transaction with her father, anent some Anchovy-ducks, he, by a warm invitation, was kindly pressed to remain for the night.

The upshot of the business was, that, on mounting his pony to make the best of his way home, next morning after breakfast, Maister Whitteraick found he was shot through the heart with a stound of love; and that, unless a suitable remedy could be got, there was no hope for him on this side of time, let alone blowing out his brains, or standing before the minister. Right it was in him to run the risk of deciding on the last; and so well did he play his game, that, in two months from that date, after sending sundry presents on his part to the family, of smeaked hams and salt tongues,-acknowledged on theirs, by return of carrier, in the shape of sucking pigs, jargonelle pears, and such like,-matters were southered; and Miss Jeanie Learig, made into Mrs. Whitteraick, by the blessing of Dr. Blether, rode away into Edinburgh in a post-chaise, with a brown and a black horse, one blind, and the other lame, seated cheek-by-jowl with her loving spouse, who, doubtless, was busked out in his best, with a Manchester superfine blue coat, and double gilt buttons, a waterproof hat, silk stockings, with open-steek gushats, and bright yellow shamov gloves.

A stranger among strangers, and no kenning how she might thole the company and conversation of town-life, Mrs. Whitteraick, that was to be, hired a bit wench of a lassie from the neighbourhood, that was to follow her, come the term. And who think ye should this lassie be, but Nanse Cromie,—afterwards, in the course of a kind providence, the honoured wife of my bosom, and the mother of bonny Benjie.

In going up and down the stairs—it being a common entry, ye observe—me maybe going down with my everyday hat on to my dinner, and she coming up, carrying a stoup of water, or half a-pound of pouthered butter on a plate, with a piece paper thrown over it,-we frequently met half-way, and had to stand still to let one another pass. Nothing came out of these foregatherings, howsomever, for a month or two, she being as shy and modest as she was bonny, with her clean demity short-gown, and snow-white morning mutch, to say nothing of her cherry mou, and her glancing een; and me unco douffie in making up to strangers. We could not help, nevertheless, to take ave a stoun look of each other in passing; and I was a gone man, bewitched out of my seven senses, falling from my claes, losing my stomach, and over the lugs in love, three weeks and some odd days before ever a single syllable passed between us.

Gude kens how long this Quaker-meeting-like silence would have continued, had we not chanced to foregather one gloaming; and I, having gotten a dram from one of our customers with a hump-back, at the Crosscausey, whose fashionable new coat I had been out fitting on, found myself as brave as a Bengal tiger, and said to her, "This is a fine day, I say, my dear Nancy."

The ice being once broken, every thing went on as smoothly as ye like; so, in the long run, we went like lightning from twa-handed cracks on the stairhead, to stown walks, after work-hours, out by the West Port, and thereaway.

If ever a man loved, and loved like mad, it was me, Mansie Wauch,-and I take no shame in the confession; but, kenning it all in the course of nature, declare it openly and courageously in the face of the wide world. Let them laugh who like ; honest folk, I pity them; such know not the pleasures of virtuous affection. It is not in corrupted, sinful hearts that the fire of true love can ever burn clear. Alas, and ohon orie! they lose the sweetest, completest, dearest, truest pleasure that this world has in store for its children. They know not the bliss to meet, that makes the embrace of separation bitter. They never dreamed the dreams that make wakening to the morning light unpleasant. They never felt the raptures that can dirl like darts through a man's soul from a woman's ee. They never tasted the honey that dwells on a woman's lip, sweeter than yellow marygolds to the bee; or fretted under the fever of bliss that glows through the frame in pressing the hand of a suddenly met, and fluttering sweetheart. But tuts-tuts-hechhow! my day has long since past; and this is stuff to drop from the lips of an auld fool. Nevertheless, forgive me, friends: I cannot help all-powerful nature.

Nanse's taste being like my own, we amused one another in abusing great cities, which are all chokefull of the abominations of the Scarlet Woman; and it is curious how soon I learned to be up to trap—I mean in an honest way; for, when she said she was wearying the very heart out of her to be home again to Lauder, which she said was her native, and the true land of Goshen, I spoke back to her by way of answer—" Nancy, my dear, believe me that the real land of Goshen is out at Dalkeith; and if ye'll take up house wi' me, and enter into a way of doing, I daursay in a while ye'll come to think so too."

What will ye say there? Matters were by-and-bye settled full tosh between us; and, though the means of both parties were small, we were young, and able and willing to help one another. Nanse, out of her wages, had hained a trifle; and I had, safe lodged under lock-and-key in the bank of Scotland, against the time of my setting up, the siller which was got by selling the bit house of granfaither's, on the death of my ever-to-be-lamented mother, who survived her helpmate only six months, leaving me an orphan lad in a wicked world, obliged to fend, forage, and look out for myself.

Taking matters into account, therefore, and considering that it is not good for man to be alone, Nanse and me laid our heads together towards the taking a bit house in the fore-street of Dalkeith; and at our leisure kept a look-out about buying the plenishing—the expense of which, for different littles and littles, amounted to more than we expected; yet, to our hearts content, we made some most famous second-hand bargains of sprechery, amongst the old-furniture warehousemen of the Cowgate. I might put down here the prices of the room-grate, the bachelor's oven, the cheese-toaster, and the warming-pan especially, which, though it had a wheen holes in it, kept a fine polish; but, somehow or other, have lost the receipt, and cannot make true affidavy.

Certain it is, whatever cadgers may say to the contrary, that the back is aye made for the burden; and, were all to use the means, and be industrious, many, that wyte bad harvests, and worse times, would have, like the miller in the auld sang, "A penny in the purse for dinner and for supper," or better to finish the verse, "Gin ye please a guid fat cheese, and lumps o' yellow butter."

For two three days, I must confess, after Maister Wiggie had gone through the ceremony of tying us together, and Nanse and me found ourselves in the comfortable situation of man and wife, I was a wee dowie and desponding, thinking that we were to have a numerous small family, and where trade was to come from; but no sooner was my sign nailed up, with four iron haudfasts, by Johnny Hammer, painted in black letters on a blue ground, with a picture of a jacket on one side, and a pair of shears on the other,—and my shop-door opened to the public, with a wheen ready-made waistcoats, gallowses, leathercaps, and Kilmarnock cowls, hung up at the window, than business flowed in upon us in a perfect torrent. First one came in for his measure, and then another. A wife came in for a pair of red worsted boots for her bairn, but would not take them for they had not blue fringes. A bare-headed lassie, hoping to be handsel, threw down twopence, and asked tape at three yards for a halfpenny. The minister sent an old black coat beneath his maid's arm, prinned up in a towel, to get docked in the tails down into a jacket; which I trust I did to his entire satisfaction, making it fit to a hair. The Duke's butler himself patronized me, by sending me a coat which was all hair powder and pomate, to get a new neck put to it. And James Batter, ave a staunch friend of the family, despatched a barefoot cripple lassie down the close to me, with a brown paper parcel, tied with skinie, and having a memorandum letter sewed on the top of it, and wafered with a wafer. It ran as follows: "Maister Batter has sent down, per t bearer, with his compliments to Maister Wauch, a cuttikin of cordurov, deficient in the instap, which please let out, as required. Maister Wauch will also please be so good as observe, that three of the buttons have sprung the thorls, which he will be obliged to him to replace, at his earliest convenience. Please send me a message what that may be; and have the account made out, article for article, and duly discharged, that I may send down the bearer with the change; and to bring me back the cuttikin and the account, to save time and trouble. I am, dear sir, your most chedient friend, and ever most sincerely,

"JAMES BATTER."

No wonder than we attracted customers, for our sign was the prettiest ye ever saw, though the jacket was not just so neatly painted, as for some sand-blind creatures not to take it for a goose. I daresay there were fifty half-naked bairns glowring their een out of their heads at it, from morning till night; and, after they all were gone to their beds, both Nanse and me found ourselves so proud of our new situation in life, that we slipped out in the dark by ourselves, and had a prime look at it with a lantera.

CHAPTER VII.

THE FOREWARNING.

I had a dream which was not all a dream.

Byzow.

Coming events cast their shadows before.

On first commencing business, I have freely confessed, I believe, that I was unco solicitous of custom, though less from sinful, selfish motives, than from the, I trust, laudable fear I had about becoming in a jiffy the father of a small family, every one with a mouth to fill and a back to cleid—helpless bairns, with nothing to look to or lean on, save and except the proceeds of my daily handiwork. Nothing, however, is sure in this world, as Maister Wiggie more than once took occasion to observe, when lecturing on the house built by the foolish man on the sea-sands; for months passed on, and better passed on; and these, added together by simple addition, amounted to three years; and still neither word nor wittens of a family, to perpetuate our name to future generations, appeared to be forthcoming.

Between friends, I make no secret of the matter, that this was a catastrophe which vexed me not a little, for more reasons than one. In the first place, youngsters being a bond of mutual affection between man and wife, sweeter than honey from the comb, and stronger than the Roman cement, with which the old Picts built their briggs, that will last till the day of doom. In the second place, bairns toddling round a bit ingle, make a house look like itself, especially in the winter time, when hailstanes rattle on the window, and winds roar like the voices of mighty giants at the lum-head; for then the maister of the dwelling finds himself like an ancient patriarch, and the shepherd of a flock, tender as young lambs, yet pleasant to his eye, and dear to his heart. And in the third place, (for I'll speak the truth; and shame the De'il,) as I could not thole the gibes and idle tongues of a wheen fools, that, for their diversion, would be asking me, "How the wife and bairns were; and if I had sent my auldest laddie to the school yet?"

I have swithered within myself for more than halfan-hour, whether I should relate a circumstance bordering a wee on the supernatural line, that happened to me, as connected with the business of the bairns of which I have been just speaking; and, were it for no other reason, but just to plague the scoffer that sits in his elbow-chair, I have determined to jot down the whole miraculous paraphernally in black and white. With folk that will not listen to the voice of reason. it is needless to be wasterful of words; so them that like, may either prin their faith to my coat-sleeve, about what I am going to relate, or not-just as they choose. All that I can say in my defence, and as an affidavy to my veracity, is, that I have been thirty year an elder of Maister Wiggie's kirk-and that is no joke. The matter I make free to consider is not a laughing concern, nor any thing belonging to the Merry-Andrew line; and, if folk were but strong in the faith, there is no saying what may come to pass for their good. One might as well hold up their brazen face, and pretend not to believe ony thing-neither the Witch of Endor raising up Samuel; nor Cornel Gardener's vision; nor Johnny Wilkes and the De'il; nor Peden's prophecies.

Nanse and me aye made what they call an anniversary of our wedding-day, which happened to be the fifth of November, the very same as that on which the Gunpowder Plot chances to be occasionally held,—Sunday's excepted. According to custom, this being the third year, we collected a good few friends to a tea-drinking; and had our cracks and a glass or two of toddy. Thomas Burlings, if I mind, was there, and his wife; and Deacon Paunch, he was a bachelor; and likewise James Batter; and David Sawdust and his wife, and their four bairns.

guid customers; and a wheen more, that, without telling a lie, I could not venture to particularize at this moment, though maybe I may mind them when I'm no wanting,—but nae matter.—Well, as I was saying, after they a' gaed away, and Nanse and me, after locking the door, slipped to our bed, I had one of the most miraculous dreams recorded in the history of man; more especially if we take into consideration where, when, and to whom it happened.

At first I thought I was sitting by the fireside, where the cat and the kittling were playing with a mouse they had catched in the meal-kit, cracking with James Batter on check-reels for yarn, and the cleverest way of winding pirns, when, all at once, I thought myself transplanted back to the auld world,-forgetting the tailoring trade, broad and narrow cloth, worsted boots and Kilmarnock cowls, pleasant Dalkeith, our late yearly ploy, my kith and kindred, the friends of the people, the Duke's parks, and so on, -and found myself walking beneath beautiful trees, from the branches of which hung apples, and oranges, and cocky-nuts, and walnuts, and raisins, and plumdameses, and corrydanders, and more than the tongue of man can tell, while all the birds and beasts seemed as tame as our bantings; in fact, just as they were in the days of Adam and Eve,tigers passing by on this hand, and Russian bears on that, rowing themselves on the grass, out of fun; while peacocks, and magpies, and parrots, and cockysweet voice and fair feather, sported among the woods, as if they had nothing to do but sit and sing in the sweet sunshine, having dread neither of the net of the fowler, the double-barrelled gun of the gamekeeper, nor the laddie's girn set with moolings of bread. It was real paradise; and I found myself fairly lifted off my feet and transported out of my seven senses.

. While sauntering about at my leisure, with my Sunday hat on, and a pair of clean white cotton stockings, in this heavenly mood, under the green trees, and beside the still waters, out of which beautiful salmon-trouts were sporting and leaping, methought in a moment I fell down in a trance, as flat as a flounder, and I heard a voice visibly saying to me, "Thou shalt have a son: let him be Christened Benjamin!" The joy that this vision brought my spirit thrilled through my bones, like the sounds of a blind man grinding "Rule Britannia" out of an organ, and my senses vanished from me into a kind of slumber, on rousing from which I thought I found myself walking, all dressed, with powdered hair, and a long tye behind, just like a grand gentleman, with a valuable bamboo walking-stick in my hand, among green yerbs and flowers, like an auncient hermit far away among the hills, at the back of beyont; as if broadcloth and buckram had never been heard tell of, and serge, twist, pocket-linings, and shamby leather, were matters with which mortal man had no concern.

Speak of auld-light or new-light as ye like, for my own part I am not much taken up with any of your warlock and wizard trade: I have no brew of your auld Major Weir, or Tam o' Shanter, or Michael Scott, or Thamas the Rhymer's kind, knocking in pins behind doors to make decent folk dance, jig, cut, and shuffle themselves to death,—splitting the hills as ye would spelder a haddy, and playing all manner of evil pranks, and sinful abominations, till their crafty maister, Auld Nick, puts them to their mettle, by setting them to twine ropes out of sea-sand, and sic like. I like none of your paternosters, and saying of prayers backwards, or drawing lines with caulk round ye, before crying,

"Redcowl, redcowl, come if ye daur; Lift the sneck, and draw the bar."

I never, in the whole course of my life, was fond of lending the sanction of my countenance to any thing that was not canny; and, even when I was a wee smont of a callant, with my jacket and trowsers buttoned all in one, I never would play, on Hallo'e'en night, at any thing else but douking for apples, burning nuts, pulling kail-runts, foul water and clean, drapping the egg, or trying who was to be your sweetheart out of the lucky-bag.

As I have often thought, and sometimes taken occasion to observe, it would be well for us all to profit by experience,-" burned bairns should dread the fire," as the proverb goes. After the miserable catastrophe of the playhouse, for instance-which I shall afterwards have occasion to commemorate in due time, and in a subsequent chapter of my eventful life-I would have been worse than mad, had I persisted, night after night, to pay my shilling for a veesy of vagrants in buckram, and limmers in silk, parading away at no allowance—as kings and queens, with their tale-speaking havers that only fools have throats wide enough to swallow, and giving themselves airs to which they have no more earthly title than the man in the moon; I say nothing, besides, of their throwing glamour in honest folks een; but I'll no deny that I have been told by them who would not lee, and were living witnesses of the transaction, that, as true as death, they had seen the tane of these ne'erdoweels spit the other, through and through, with a weel-sharpened, auld, hieland, forty-second Andrew Ferrary, in single combat; whereupon, as might reasonably be expected, he would, in the twinkling of a farthing rushlight, fall down as dead as a bag of sand; yet, by their rictum-ticktum, rise-up-Jack, slight of hand, hocuspocus way, would be on his legs, brushing the stour from his breek knees, before the green curtain was half-way down. James Batter himself once told me, that, when he was a laddie, he saw one of these clanjamphrey go in behind the scenes with nankeen trowsers, a blue coat out at the elbows, and fair hair hinging over his ears, and in less than no time come out a real negro, as black as Robison Crusoe's man Friday, with a jacket on his back of Macgregor tartan, and as good a pair of buckskin breeches as jockey ever mounted horse in at a Newmarket race. Where the silk stockings were wrought, and the Jerusalem sandals made, that he had on his feet, James Batter used doucely to observe he would leave every reasonable man to guess at a venture.

A good story not being the worse of being twice told, I repeat it over again, that I would have been worse than daft, after the precious warning it was my fortune to get, to have sanctioned such places with my presence, in spite of the remonstrances of my conscience—and of Maister Wiggie—and of the kirk-session. Wherever any thing is carried on out of the course of nature, especially when accompanied with dancing and singing, toot-tooing of clarionets, and bumming of bass-fiddles, ye may be as sure as you are born, that ye run a chance of being deluded out of your right senses—that the sounds are by way of lulling the soul asleep—and that, to the certainty of a-without-a-doubt, you are in the heat and heart of one of the devil's rendevooses.

To say no more, I was once myself, for example, at one of our Dalkeith fairs, present in a hay-loft—

I think they charged threepence at the door, but let me in with a grudge for twopence, but no matter—to see a punch and puppie-show business, and other slight-of-hand work. Well, the very moment I put my neb within the door, I was visibly convinced of the smell of burnt roset, with which I understand they make lightning, and kent, as well as maybe, what they had been traffecking about with their black-art; but, nevertheless, having a stout heart, I determined to sit still, and see what they would make of it, kenning well enough, that, as long as I had the Psalm-book in my pouch, they would be gay and clever to throw any of their blasted cantrips over me.

What div ye think they did? One of them, a wauf, drucken-looking scoundrel, fired a gold ring over the window, and mostly set fire to the thack house opposite—which was not insured. Yet where think ye did the ring go to? With my living een I saw it taen out of auld Willie Turneep's waistcoat pouch, who was sitting blind fou, with his mouth open, on one of the back seats; so, by no earthly possibility could it have got there, except by whizzing round the gavel, and in through the steeked door by the key-hole.

Folk may say what they chuse by way of apology, but I neither like nor understand such on-going as changing sterling silver half-crowns into copper penny-pieces, or mending a man's coat—as they did mine, after cutting a blad out of one of the tails by the black-art.

Into to own advant to colored a to make two, of real

But, hout-tout, one thing and another coming across me, had almost clean made me forget explaining to the world the upshot of my extraordinary vision; but better late than never,—and now for it.

Nanse, on finding herself in a certain way, was a thought dumfoundered; and instead of laughing, as she did at first, when I told her my dream, she soon came to regard the matter as one of sober earnest. The very prospect of what was to happen threw a gleam of comfort round our bit fireside; and, long ere the day had come about which was to crown our expectations, Nanse was prepared with her bit stock of baby's wearing apparel, and all necessaries appertaining thereto-wee little mutches with lace borders, and side knots of blue three-ha'penny ribbon-long muslin frockies, vandyked across the breast, drawn round the waist with narrow nittings, and tucked five rows about the tail-Welsh-flannel petticoaties-demity wrappers-a coral gumstick, and other uncos, which it does not befit the like of me to particularize. I trust, on my part, as far as in me lay, I was not found wanting; having taken care to provide a famous Dunlop cheese, at fivepence ha'penny the pound-I blief I paled fifteen, in Joseph Gowdy's shop, before I fixed on it;to say nothing of a bottle, or maybe two, of real peet-reek, Farintosh, small-still Hieland whisky—Glenlivat I think is the name o't—half a peck of shortbread, baken by Thomas Burlings, with three pounds of butter, and two ounces of carvie-seeds in it, let alone orange-peel, and a penny-worth of ground cinnamon—half a mutchkin of best cony brandy, by way of change—and a Musselburgh ankerstoke, to slice down for tea-drinkings and posset cups.

Every one has reason to be thankful, and me among the rest; for many a worse provided for, and less welcome down-lying has taken place, time out of mind, throughout broad Scotland. I say this with a warm heart, as I am grateful for all my mercies. To hundreds above hundreds such a catastrophe brings scarcely any joy at all; but it was far different with me, who had a Benjamin to look for.

If the reader will be so kind as look over the next chapter, he will find whether or not I was disappointed in my expectations.

The The cold in the cold is a control of the cold in t

CHAPTER VIII.

LETTING LODGINGS.

Then first he ate the white puddings,
And syne he ate the black, O;
Though muckle thought the Gudewife to herself,
Yet ne'er a word she spak, O.
But up then started our Gudeman,
And an angry man was he, O.

Old Song.

It would be curious if I passed over a remarkable meident, which at this time fell out.—Being but new beginners in the world, the wife and I put our heads constantly together to contrive for our forward advancement, as it is the bounden duty of all to do. So our housie being rather large, (two rooms and a kitchen, not speaking of a coal-cellar, and a hen-house,) and having as yet only the expectation of a family, we thought we could not do better than get John Varnish the painter, to do off a small ticket, with "A Furnished Room to Let" on it, which we nailed out at the window; having collected into it the choicest of our furniture, that it might fit a genteeler lodger and produce a better rent— And a lodger soon we got.

Dog on it! I think I see him yet. He was a blackavised Englishman, with curled whiskers and a powdered pow, stout round the waist-band, and fond of good eating, let alone drinking, as we found to our cost. Well, he was our first lodger. We sought a good price, that we might, on bargaining, have the merit of coming down a tait; but no, no—go away wi'ye; it was dog-cheap to him. The half-guinea a week was judged perfectly moderate; but if all his debts were—yet I must not cut before the cloth.

Hang expenses! was the order of the day. Ham and eggs for breakfast, let alone our currant-jelly. Roast-mutton cold, and strong ale, at twelve, by way of chack, to keep away wind from the stomach. Smoking roast-beef, with scraped horse-raddish, at four preceesely; and toasted cheese, punch, and porter, for supper. It would have been less, had all the things been within ourselves. Nothing had we but the cauler new-laid eggs; then, there was Deacon Heukbane's butcher's account; and John Cony's spirit account; and William Burling's bap account; and deevil kens how many more accounts, that came all in upon us afterwards. But the crowning of all came in at the end. It was no farce at the time, and kept our heads down at the water edge for many a day. I was just driving the hot guse along the seams of a Sunday jacket I was finishing for Thomas Clod the ploughman, when the Englisher came in at the shop door, whistling "Robin Adair," and "Scots wha ha'e wi' Wallace bled," and whiles, maybe, churming to himself like a young blackbird ;-but I have not patience to go through wi't. The long and the short of the matter, however, was, that, after rummaging among my two or three webs of broad-cloth on the shelf, he pitched on a Manchester blue, five quarters wide, marked CXD.XF, which is to say, three-and-twenty shillings the yard. I told him it was impossible to make a pair of pantaloons to him in two hours; but he insisted upon having them, alive or dead, as he had to go down the same afternoon to dine with my Lord Duke, no less. I convinced him, that if I was to sit up all night, he could get them by five next morning, if that would do, as I would also keep my laddie, Tammy Bodkin, out of his bed; but no-I thought he would have loupen out of his seven senses. "Just look," he said, turning up the inside seam of the leg-" just see-can any gentleman make a visit in such things as these? they are as full of holes as a coal-sieve. I wonder the devil why my baggage has not come forward. Can I get a horse and boy to ride express to Edinburgh for a ready-made article?"

A thought struck me; for I had heard of wonderful advancement in the world, for those who had been so lucky as help the great at a pinch. "If ye'll no take it amiss, sir," said I, making my obedience, "a notion has just struck me."

"Well, what is it?" said he, briskly.

"Well, sir, I have a pair of knee-breeches, of most famous velveteen, double tweel, which have been only once on my legs, and that no farther gone than last Sabbath. I'm pretty sure they would fit ye in the meantime; and I would just take a pleasure in ca'ing the needle all night, to get your own ready"

"A clever thought," said the Englisher. "Do you think they would fit me?—Devilish clever thought indeed."

"To a hair," I answered; and cried to Nanse to bring the velveteens.

I do not think he was ten minutes, when lo, and behold! out at the door he went, and away past the shop-window like a lamp-lighter. The buttons on the velveteens were glittering like gold at the knees. Alas! it was like the flash of the setting-sun; I never beheld them more. He was to have been back in two or three hours, but the laddie, with the box on his shoulder, was going through the street crying "Hot penny-pies" for supper, and neither word nor wittens of him. I began to be a thought uneasy, and fidgetted on the board like a hen on a hot girdle. No man should do anything when he is vexed, but I could not help giving Tammy Bodkin, who was sewing away at the lining of the new pantaloons, a terrible whisk in the lug, for singing to himself. I say I was vexed for it afterwards; especially as the laddie did not mean to give offence; and as I saw the blae marks of my four fingers along his chaft-blade.

The wife had been bothering me for a new gown, on strength of the payment of our grand bill; and in came she, at this blessed moment of time, with about twenty swatches from Simeon Calicoe's, prinned on a screed of paper.

"Which of that do you think bonniest?" said Nanse, in a flattering way; "I ken, Mansie, you have a good taste."

"Cut not before the cloth," answered I, "gude-wife," with a wise shake of my head. "It'll be time enough, I daresay, to make your choice to-morrow."

Nanse went out, as if her nose had been blooding. I could thole it no longer; so, buttoning my breek-knees, I threw my cowl into a corner, clapped my hat on my head, and away down in full birr to the Duke's gate.

I speired at the porter, if the gentleman with the velveteen breeches and powdered hair, that was dining with the Duke, had come up the avenue yet?

"Velveteen breeches and powdered hair!" said

auld Paul, laughing, and taking the pipe out of his cheek. "Whose butler is't that ye're after?"

"Weel," said I to him, "I see it all as plain as a pikestaff. He is off bodily; but may the meat and the drink he has taken off us, be like drogs to his inside; and may the velveteens play crack, and cast the steeks at every stap he takes!" It was no Christian wish; and Paul leugh till he was like to burst, at my expense. "Gang ye're ways hame, Mansie," said he to me, clapping me on the shoulder, as if I had been a wean, "and give over setting traps, for ye see you have catched a Tartar."

This was too much; first to be cheated by a swindling loon, and then made game of by a flunky; and, in my desperation, I determined to do some awful thing.

Nanse followed me in from the door, and speired what news?—I was ower big, and ower vexed to hear her; so, never letting on, I went to the little looking-glass on the drawer's head, and set it down on the table. Then I looked myself in it for a moment, and made a gruesome face. Syne I pulled out the little drawer, and got the sharping strap, the which I fastened to my button. Syne I took my razor from the box, and gave it five or six turns, along first one side and then the other, with great precision. Syne I tried the edge of it along the flat of my hand. Syne I loosed my neck-cloth, and laid it over the back of the chair; and syne I took out the button of my shirt-neck, and folded it back. Nanse, who was, all the time, standing behind, looking what I was after, asked me, " if I was gaen to shave without het water?" when I said to her in a fierce and brave manner, (which was very cruel considering the way she was in,) "I'll let you see that presently." The razor looked desperate sharp; and I never liked the sight of blood; but oh, I was in a terrible flurry and fermentation. A kind of cold trembling went through me; and I thought it best to tell Nanse what I was going to do, that she might be something prepared for it. " Fare ye well, my dear !" said I to her, " you will be a widow in five minutes-for here goes!" I did not think she could have mustered so much courage, but she sprang at me like a tiger; and, throwing the razor into the ass-hole, took me round the neck, and cried like a bairn. First she was seized with a fit of the hystericks, and then with her pains. It was a serious time for us both, and no joke; for my heart smote me for my sin and cruelty. But I did my best to make up for it. I ran up and down like mad, for the Howdie, and at last brought her trotting along with me by the lug. I could not stand it. I shut myself up in the shop, with Tammy Bodkin, like Daniel in the lions' den; and every now and then opened the door to speir what news. Oh, but my heart was like to break with anxiety. I paced up and down, and to and fro, with my Kilmarnock on my head, and my hands in my breekpouches, like a man out of Bedlam. I thought it would never be over; but, at the second hour of the morning, I heard a wee squeel, and knew that I was a father; and so proud was I, that, notwithstanding our loss, Lucky Bringthereout and me whanged away at the cheese and bread, and drank so briskly at the whisky and foot-yill, that, when she tried to rise and go away, she could not stir a foot; so Tammy and I had to oxter her out between us, and deliver her safe in at her own door.

CHAPTER IX.

BENJIE'S CHRISTENING.

We'll hap and row, hap and row,
We'll hap and row the feetie o't;
It is a wee bit weary thing,
I dinna bide the greetie o't.

PROVOST CREECH.

An honest man, close buttoned to the chin, Broad-cloth without, and a warm heart within.

COWPER.

This great globe and all that it inherits shall dissolve, And, like the baseless fabric of a vision, Leave not a wreck behind.

SHAKSPEARE.

At the kirstening of our only bairn, Benjie, two or three remarkable circumstances occurred, which it behoves me to relate.

It was on a cold November afternoon; and really when the hit room was all redd up, the fire bleezing away, and the candles lighted, everything looked fu' tosh and comfortable. It was a real pleasure, after looking out into the drift that was fleeing like mad from the east, to turn one's neb inwards, and think that we had a civilized home to comfort us in the dreary season. So, one after another, the bit party we had invited to the ceremony, came papping in; and the crack began to get loud and hearty; for, to speak the truth, we were blessed with canny friends, and a good neighbourhood. Notwithstanding, it was very curious, that I had no mind of asking down James Batter, the weaver, honest man, though he was one of our own elders; and in papped James, just when the company had hafflins met; with his stocking-sleeves on his arms, his night-cap on his head, and his blue-stained apron hanging down before him, to light his pipe at our fire.

James, when he saw his mistake, was fain to make his retreat; but we would not hear tell of it, till he came in, and took a dram out of the bottle, as we told him the no doing so would spoil the wean's beauty, which is an old freak, (the smallpox, however, afterwards did that;) so, with much persuasion, he took a chair for a gliff, and began with some of his drolls—for he is a clever, humoursome man, as ye ever met with. But he had now got far on with his jests, when lo! a rap came to the door, and Mysie whipped away the bottle under her apron, saying, "wheesht, wheesht, for the sake of gudeness, there's the minister."

The room had only one door, and Jamie mistook

it, running his head, for lack of knowledge, into the open closet, just as the minister lifted the outer-door sneck. We were all now sitting on nettles, for we were frighted that James would be seized with a cough, for he was a wee asthmatic; or that some, knowing there was a thief in the pantry, might hurt good manners by breaking out into a giggle. However, all for a considerable time was quiet, and the ceremony was performed; little Nancy, our niece, handing the bairn upon my arm to receive its name. So, we thought, as the minister seldom made a long stay on similar occasions, that all would pass off well enough. But wait a wee.

There was but one of our company that had not cast up, to wit, Deacon Paunch, the flesher, a most worthy man, but tremendously big, and grown to the very heels, as was once seen on a wager, that his ankle was greater than my brans. It was really a pain to all feeling Christians, to see the worthy man waigling about, being, when weighed in his own scales, two-and-twenty stone ten ounces, Dutch weight. Honest man, he had had a sore fecht with the wind and the sleet, and he came in with a shawl roppined round his neck, peching like a broken-winded horse; so fain was he to find a rest for his weary carcass in our stuffed chintz pattern elbowchair by the fire cheek.

From the soughing of wind at the window, and the rattling in the lum, it was clear to all manner of comprehension, that the night was a dismal one; so the minister, seeing so many of his own douce folks about him, thought he might do worse than volunteer to sit still, and try our toddy; indeed we would have pressed him before this to do so; but what was to come of James Batter, who was shut up in the closet, like the spies in the house of Rahab the har-lot, in the city of Jericho?

James began to find it was a bad business, and having been driving the shuttle about from before daylight, the was fain to cruik his hough, and felt round about him quietly in the dark for a chair to sit down upon, since better might not be. But, wae's me! the cat was soon out of the pock.

Me and the minister were just argle-bargling some few words on the doctrine of the camel and the eye of the needle, when, in the midst of our discourse, as all was wheesht and attentive, an awful thud was heard in the closet, which gave the minister, who thought the house had fallen down, such a start, that his very wig louped for a full three-eighths off his crown. I say we were needeessitated to let the cat out of the pock for two reasons; first-ly, because we did not know what had happened, and secondly, to quiet the minister's fears, decent man, for he was a wee nervous. So we made a hearty laugh of it, as well as we could, and opened the door to bid James. Batter come out, as we congressed all. Easier said than done, howsoever,

When we pulled open the door, and took forward one of the candles, there was James doubled up, sticking twofold like a rotten in a sneck-trap, in an auld chair, the bottom of which had gone down before him, and which, for some craize about it, had been put out of the way by Nanse, that no accident might happen. Save us! if the deacon had sate down upon it, pity on our brick-floor.

Well, after some ado, we got James, who was more frighted than hurt, hauled out of his hidy hole; and after taking off his cowl, and sleeking down his front hair, he took a seat beside us, apologeering for not being in his Sunday's garb, the which the minister, who was a free and easy man, declared there was no occasion for, and begged him to make himself comfortable.

Well, passing over that business, Mr. Wiggie and me entered into our humours, for the drappike was beginning to tell on my noddle, and made me a little tle venturesome—not to say that I was not a little proud to have the minister in my bit housie; so, says I to him in a cosh way, "Ye may believe me or no, Mr. Wiggie, but mair than me think ye out of sight the best preacher in the parish—name of them, Mr. Wiggie, can hold the candle to ye, man

Weesht, weesht," said the body, in rather a cold way that I did not expect, kenning him to be used proud as a peacock and I daresay I am just like my neighbours."

ad This was not fust so kind, siso says I too him. Maybe sae, for many a one thinks we could not hold a candle to Mr. Blowster the Cameroniani that whiles preaches at Lington. 2s just as just as not provided the sentence was just as not provided the sentence of the sentence This was a stramp on his corny toe. it "Nay mad" answered Mr. Wiggie, rather nettled ; let us drop that subject: I preach like my neighbours to Some of them may be worse, and others better ; just as some of your own trade may make clothes worse, and some better, than yourself." Ind sid banor I warfa My corruption was raised and deny that, in said I, in a brisk manner, which I was sorry for after-"I deny that, Mr. Wiggie, besays I to him of Kill make a pair of breeches with the face of clay."d om But this was only a passing breeze, during the which, howsoever, I happened to swallow my thimble, which accidentally slipped off my hiddle finger, causing both me and the company general alarm, as there were great fears that it might mortify in the stomach: soutpit did note sand neither word nor wittens of it have been seen or heard tell of from that to this day! So, in two three minutes, we had some few good songs, and a round of Scotch proverbs, when the clock chapped eleven. We were all getting, I must confess, a thought noisy; Johnny Souter having broken a dram glass, and Willie Fegs couped a bottle on the bit table-cloth; all noisy;od say, except Deacon Paunch, douce man, who had fallen into a pleasant slumber; so, when the minister rose to take his hat, they all rose except The Deacon, whom we shook by the arms for some time, but in vaine to waken him [His/round, wily face, good creature, was just as if it had been cut out of a big turnip, it was so fat fozy, and soft; but at last, after some ado, we succeeded, and he looked about him with a wild stare, opening his two red een, like Pandore oysters, asking what had happened; and wengot him heized up on his legs, tying the blue and some better, thankagainada and brund sin brunds bi Our tempany had not got well out of the door, and I was priding myself in my heart, about being landlord to such a goodly turn out, when Nanse took me by the arm, and said, " Come, and see such an unearthly sight." This startled me, and I hesitated; but, at long and last, I went in with her, a thought alarmed at what had happened and my gracious!! there; on the easy-chairs was our bonny tortoise-shell cat, Tommy, with the red morocco collar about its neck, bruised as flat as a flounder, and as dead as a wittens of it have been seen or heard tell ! biswam beiThe Descon had sat down upon it without thinking and the poor animal, that our neighbours' bairns used to play with, and be so fond of was grushed out of life without a cheep. The thing, doubtless, was not intended, but it gave Nanse and me a very couped a bottle on the bit table-cloth; atrasi spos say, except Deacon Paunch, donce man, who had fallen into a pleasant slumber; so, when the minis-

I'll never forget it. I was standing by when three young lads took shools, and, lifting up the truff, proceeded to hould down to the coffin, wherein they had laid the grey hairs of their mother. They looked wild and bewildered like, and the glance of their ern was like that of folk out of a mad-house; and some dared in tx RHAPTER Specien to them. They did not even speak to one another; but sebags out THE RESURRECTION MEN. no inlegiory struck on the coffin lid-which was broken. How then was the Devil drest? He was in his Sunday's best; -Min W sil His coat was red, and his breeches were blue, did January Dio With a hole behind where his tail came through a 19 heardwird , Over the hill, and over the dale, of _ : our revo Ha And he went over the plain;
And backward and forward he switch'd his tail, benestridan As a gentleman switches his cane. as aver ; skile He bne affles with Souther et Coderinges w

depends an imaginate most agreed to the sum and T to A now this time there drose a great sought and sumise, that some look were playing false with the kirkyard, howking up the bodies from their damp graves, and harling them laway to the College Words cannot describe the fear, and the dool, and the misery it caused and All flocked to the kirk-yett; and the friends of the newly buried stood by the mools, which were yet dark, and the brown newly-cast divots, that had not yet taken root, looking, with mouriful faces, to descry any tokens of sinking in and a depond on and the order of sinking in and a depond on the second any tokens of sinking in and a depond on the second any tokens of sinking in and a depond on the second any tokens of sinking in and a depond on the second any tokens of sinking in and a depond on the second any tokens of sinking in an all the second any tokens of sinking in an all the second and the second any tokens of sinking in an all the second and the second and

I'll never forget it. I was standing by when three young lads took shools, and, lifting up the truff, proceeded to houk down to the coffin, wherein they had laid the grey hairs of their mother. They looked wild and bewildered like, and the glance of their een was like that of folk out of a mad-house; and none dared in the world to have spoken to them. They did not even speak to one another; but wrought on with a great hurry, till the spades struck on the coffin lid-which was broken. The dead-claiths were there huddled together in a nook, but the dead was gone, I took hold of Willie Walker's armo and looked down. There was a cold sweat all over me ;-losh me! but I was terribly frighted and eerie. Three more were opened, and all just alike; save and except that of a wee unkirstened wean, which was off bodily, coffin and all.

There was a burst of righteous indignation throughout the parish; nor without reason. Tell me that doctors and graduates must have the dead; but tell it not to Mansie Wauch, that our hearts must be trampled in the mire of scorn, and our best feelings laughed at, in order that a bruise may be properly plaistered up or a sore head cured in Verily, the remedy is worse than the disease! To should be not be but the session house, with loaded gunst night about, three at a time. If never liked to go into the kirkyard after darkening, let-a-be to sit there through a long winter night, windy and rainy it may be, withenone but the dead around us. Save us! it mas auniuncothoughto and garred all my flesh creep; but the cause was gude- my corruption was raised and I was determined and to be danntened trasno as dous os Is dounted land vounted, sbut the dread dayout Tength cames and I dwas summoned as All the livedong afternoon, when caing the needle upon the board of tried to whistle Jenny Nettles, Nich Gowi, and other fillny tunes, and whiles crooned to myself between hands; but my consternation was wiface, and long carroty hob tombinow the biran sldis built was in November; and the cold glimmering sun sank behind the Pentlands. The trees had been shorn of their frail leaves, and the misty night was closing fast in upon the dull and short day ; but the candles glittered at the shop windows, and leerylight-the-lamps was brushing about with his ladder in his oxter, and bleezing flamboy sparking out behind himso I felt a kind of qualm of faintness and down-sinking about my heart and stomach to the dispelling of which I took a thimbleful of spirits, and, tying my red coinforter about my neck, I marched briskly to the wsession house. It At neighbour, (Andrew Goldie, the pensioner,) lent me his piece, and loaded it to me. He took tent that it was only half-cock, and I wrapped a napkin round the dog. head, for it was raining on No being well acquaint with guns, I kept the muzzle ave away from me;

as it is every man's duty not to throw his precious the dead around us. Save us !. vbraqoej otniredit and Aufurn was set before the session house whire, which bleezed brightly, mor had I any thought that such an unearthly place could have been anade to look half so comfortable either by coal or candlel; so my spirits rose hip as if a weight had been taken off them, and I wondered, in my bravery, that a man like me could be afraid of anything: b Nobody was there but a touzy, ragged, halflins callant of thirteen, (for I speired his age,) with a desperate dirty face, and long carroty hair, tearing a speldrin with his teeth, which looked long and sharp enough, and throwing the skin and lugs into the fire mided slags We sat for mostly an hour together, cracking the best way we could in sic a place ; nor was anybody more likely to cast up de The night was new bpitmirk ; the wind soughed amid the head-stones and railings of the gentry, (for we maun a dee,) and the black corbies in the steeple-holes cackled and crawed in a fearsome manner. All at once we heard a lonesome sound; and my heart began to play quitpat-my skin grew all rought like a pouked chicken and I felt as if I did not know what was the matter with mer It was only a false alarm, however, being the warning of the clock; and in abnimite or two thereafter, the bell struck ten: I Oh, but it was a lonesome and dreary sound to Every schap went with guns, I kept the muzzle ave away from me; through my breast like the dunt of a fore-ham-I thought of our both running away; and therem Then up and spak the red-headed laddie wir It's no fair; anither should have come by this time. WI wad rin awashame, only I'm frighted to gang out my lane .- Do ye think the doup of that candle wad and the deep 'sca-either to stand" sap and has May nay lady we maun bide here, as we are here now Leave me alane? Lord safe us; and the yett lockite and the bethrel sleeping wi' the key in his breek pouches !- We canna win out now though we would," answered I, trying to look brave, though half frightened out of my seven senses ; Sit down, sit down; L've baith whisky and porter wi' me. Hae, man, there's a cawker to keep your heart warm : and set down that bottle," quoth I wiping the saw! dust affait with my hand, iff to get a toast i I'se warrant it for Deacon Jaffrey's best brown stout." baThe wind blew higher, and like a hurricane; the rain began to fall in perfect spouts; the and kirk rumbled and rowed, and made a sad soughing; and the bourtrie behind the house, where auld Cockburn that cut his throat was buried, creaked and crazed in a frightful manner; but as to the roaring of the troubled waters, and the bumming in the lum-head, they were past all power of description. To make bad worse, just in the heart of the brattle, the grate ing sound of the yett turning on its rusty hinges signed to die-I trust I was resigned to die-'od, was but too plainly heard. What was to be done? I thought of our both running away; and then of our locking ourselves in, and firing through the door; no fair; anither six reggirteeth fluction ; anither six on the Gudeness watch over us dal tremble vet when I think lon't to We were perfectly between the de'il and the deep sea-either to stand still and fire our gunger run and be shot at It was really a hang choice. As I stood swithering and shaking the laddie ran to the door, and, thrawing round the key, clapped his back to it with I how I looked at him, as he stood for a gliff, like a magpie hearkening with his lug cocked up, or rather like a terrier watching a rotten "They're coming! they're coming!" hie cried out, " cock the piece, ve sumph " while the red hair rose up from his pow like feathers; of they're comings I hear them tramping on the gravel!" Out he stretched his arms against the wall, and brizzed his back against the door like imad das off he had been Sampson pushing over the pillars in the house of Dagon of For the Lord's sake, prime the guny he cried out, of or our throats will be cut frae bug to lug before we can cry Jack Robison | See that there's in a frightful manner; but as former subminguining b I did the best I could; but my whole strength could hardly lift up the piece, which waggled to and fro like a cock's tail on a rainy day; my knees knocked against one another, and though Davis resigned to die-I trust I was resigned to die-'od,

but it was a frightful thing to be out of one's bedand to be murdered in a session-house, at the dead! houband night, by unearthly resultrection-menimer rather let me call them deevils incarnate, wrapt ap in dreadhoughts, with blacked faces, pistols, big sticks, and other deadly weaponsh our tooks of mean -A smiff, smiffing was heard; and through below the door, I saw a pair of glancing black e'en Od, but my heart nearly louped off the bit a snouff, and a gur-guring and over all the plain tramp of a man's heavy tackets and cuddy heels among the gravelil Then came a great slap like thunder on the wall si and the laddie quitting his grip, fell down, crying, "Firepfire be murder totally murder tod evad thein "What's there an agrowled a deep rough ovoice of "open, I'm a freends that's that's rook oft shock the I tried to speak but could not; something like a ha benny row was sticking in my throats so I tried to cough it up, but it would not come as ffo Gie thed pass-word then," said the laddie, staring lastife his een would doup out a de gie the pass-word bid bad ad First came a loud whistley and then " Copmaha geneticanswered the voice of Oh! what a relief! The laddie started up like one crazy with joy. "Outs out! Cried he thrawing round the key, and rubbing his hands pow by jingo, nit's the bethrelanit's the bethreld it's auld Isaac himsell to hoog a revo enog First rushed in the dog, and then Isaac, with his glazed hat, slouched over his brow, and his horn bowet glimmering by his knee. In 15 Has the French! landed, do ve think? Losh keep us a fraid he with arsmile on his half-idiot face, (for he was a kind of a sort of a natural, with an infirmity in his legal "id saufins, man, but by your gung wolle dinner mean to shoot me, donved What are ye about here with the door lockit? Injust keppit four resurrecthe door, I saw a pair of Mawcadt rawe gaiquol rancit "Gude guide us," I said taking a long breath to driventhe blood from my heart, and something relieved by Isaac's company - "Come now Isaac; ve're just gieing us a fright. Isn't that true, Isaac?"nedT Mr.Yes, Embjoking and what for no 3 hout they might have been for onything ve wad hae hindered them to the contrair, Lingthinking Nama, ye maunna lock the door; that's no fair play,"I . 11900 " s When the door was put ajec and the furn set forement the fire; L gave Isaac a dram to keep dis heart upon such a cauld stormy night ... Od, but he was a droll fellow, Isaacs He sung and leuch as if he had been boozing in Luckie Thampson's, with some of his drucken cronics of Feint a hair cared he about and kirks, or kirkyards, or wouts, or throughstanes, or dead folk in their winding sheets, with the web grass growing lover them and at last I begant to brighten up a wee myself; so when the hadd gone over a good few funny stories I said to him quoth Iy & Many folky I daresay, mak mair noise glazed hat, slouched over his brow, and his horn. about their, sitting up in a kirkyard than its a worth. There's naething here to harm us?",

"I beg to differ wi' ye there," answered Isaac, taking out his born mull from his coat pouch, and tapping on the lid in a queer style—"I could gie anither version of that story. Did ye no ken of three young doctors—Eirish students—alang with some resurrectioners, as waff and wild as themsells, firing shottie for shottie with the guard at Kirkmabrecke, and lodging three slugs in ane of their backs, forbye firing a ramrod through anither ane's hat?"

This was a wee alarming—" No." quoth I if no, Isaac, man; I never heard of it."

"But, let alane resurrectioners, do ye no think there is sic a thing as ghaists? Guide ye, man, my granny could have telled as muckle about them as would have filled a minister's sermons from June to January."

there nae cutty stool businesses are there nae marriages gaun, Isaac?" for I was keen to change the subject.

"Ye may kay—kay, as ye like, though; I can just tell ye this:—Ye'll mind auld Armstrong with the leather breeks, and the brown three-story wig—him that was the graye-digger? Weel, he saw a ghaist wi' his leeving een—aye, and what's better, in this very kirkyard too. It was a cauld spring his arm, and aff like and, throwing the shool half-morning, and daylight just coming in, whan he came to the yett youder, thinking to meet his man, paidling Jock—but he had sleepit in, and was no there. Weel, to the wast corner ower youder he goed, and throwing his coat ower a headstane, and his hat on the tap o't, he dug away with his spade, casting out the mools, and the comin handles, and the green banes, and sic like, till he stoppit a wee to tak breath.—What! are ye whistling to yoursell?" quoth Isaac to me, "and no hearing what's God's truth?"

body was cried last Sunday?"—I would have given every farthing I had made by the needle, to have been at that blessed time in my bed with my wife and wean. Ay, how I was gruing! I mostly chacked off my tongue in chittering.—But all would not do.

"Weel, speaking of ghaists—when he was resting on his spade he looked up to the steeple, to see what o'clock it was, wondering what way Jock hadha come, when lo! and behold, in the lang diced window of the kirk yonder, he saw a lady a' in white, with her hands clasped the gither, looking out to the kirk-yard at him.

"He couldn't believe his een, so he rubbit them with his sark sleeve, but she was still there bodily, and, keeping ac ee on her, and another on his road to the yett, he drew his coat and hat to him below his arm, and aff like mad, throwing the shool half-a mile ahint him. Jock fand that of for he was coming singing in at the yett, when his maister ran clean ower the tap of him, and capsized him like a toom barrel; and never stoppit, till he was in at his ain house, and the door baith bolted and barred at his and, as the farm on which we were sitting playing m's Did ve ever hear the like of that, Mansie? Week man, I'll explain the hale history of it to ve. We see-'Od! how sound that callant's sleeping," continued Isaac warfie's snoring like a hine-yearmyself, I found my red comforter loosed; my fire I was glad he had stopped, for I was like to sink through the ground with fear ; but no, it would not and the brisk brown stout, which, by casting ith Dinna ve ken-sauf us! what a fearsome night this is! The trees will be all broken. What a noise in the lum! I dare say there's some auld hag of a witch-wife gaun to come rumble doun't. It's no the first time, I'll swear. Hae ye a silver sixpence? Wad ye like that?" he bawled up the chimney. "Ye'll hae heard," said he, "lang ago, that a wee murdered wean was buried-didna ye hear a voice? -was buried below that corner-the hearth-stane there, where the laddie's lying on?"

I had now lost my breath, so that I could not stop him.

"Ye never heard tell o't, didna ye? Weel, I'se tell't ye—Sauf us, what swurls of smoke coming down the chimley—I could swear something no canbraile unisgrafilm. besellensal destitut quiogaies coince ing singing in at the yett, when his maister ran cleans moAt that imendant salar like thunder was drand we bibled; gaingents, enterous driven reasonable sing; heldie shired bHale Brand flow what looked Thievers' a and, as the furm on which we were sitting played m'i Didue chewalled tasselle election, Marastolaw sell Add !-v I'an ikilled mahat through the bead! I Ohd see-'Od! how sound that callant's sleeping do dots -rasurely id had fronted owey softer, when it come its myself, I found my red comforter loosed; my fage sid thisy they tries wald, myob griddly was the towill slee benothed ladding to wigging tale tout of all binker at and the brisk brown stout, which, by casting its edgly had seven been all the bestern whize this is! The trees will gubly suride addition and the trees will be the control of the trees will be treed to the trees will be treed to the tree trees will be treed to the treed to the tree treed to the treed to in the lum! I dare say there's some auld hag of a witch-wife gaun to come rumble doun't. It's no the first time, I'll swear. Hae ye a silver sixpence? Wad ve like that?' he bawled up the chimney. " Ye'll hae heard," said he, " lang ago. that a wee murdered wean was buried—didna ye hear a voice? -was buried below that corner-the hearth-stane there, where the laddie's lying on ?"

I had now lost my breath, so that I could not stop him.

"Ye never heard tell o't, didna ye i Weel, I'se tell't ye—Sauf us, what swurls of smoke coming doun the chimley—I could swear something no can-

ky. Between six and seven the moon rose; and I could not get my two prentices in from the door, where they were bickering one another with snowballs, or maybe carbailling the folk on the street in their idle wantonness; so I was obliged for that night to disappoint Edie Macfarlane of the pair of black spatterdasheIX. AATTAAHOUS to get finished, for dancing in next day, at Souple Jack the caronter's grandiarous authuruw yayaar

More than the sevent shire of Cardigan, of Lammour History and the sevent shire of Cardigan, of Lammour History and the sevent shire of Cardigan, of Lammour History and An old man dwells, a little man; I wood man dwells, a little m

It was a clear starry night, in the blasty month of January, I mind it wells. The snow had fallen during the afternoon; for, as Benjie came in crying, that "the auld wives of the norlan sky were plucking their geese;" and it continued dim and dowie till towards the gloaming, when, as the road-side dabourers were dandering home from their work, some with pickaxes and others with shools, and just as our cocks and hens were going into their beds, poor things, the lift cleared up to a sharp freeze, and the well-ordered stars came forth glowing over the blue sky. Between six and seven the moon rose; and I could not get my two 'prentices in from the door, where they were bickering one another with snowballs, or maybe carhailling the folk on the street in their idle wantonness; so I was obliged for that night to disappoint Edie Macfarlane of the pair of black spatterdashes, he was so anxious to get finished, for dancing in next day, at Souple Jack the carpenter's grand penny-wedding." 274441

Seeing that little more good was to be expected till morning, I came to the resolution of shutting-in half-an-hour earlier than usual; so, as I was carrying out the shop-shutters, with my hat over my cowl, for it was desperately sharp, I mostly in my hurry knocked down an auld man, that was coming up to ask me, "if I was Maister Wauch, the tailor and furnisher."

Having told him that I was myself, instead of a better; and having asked him to step in; that I might have a glimpse of his face at the candle, I saw that he was a stranger, dressed in a droll and farrant green livery coat, faced with white. His waistcoat was cut in the Parly-voo fashion, with long lappels, and a double row of buttons down the breast; and round his neck he had a black corded stock, such like, but not so broad as I afterwards were in the volunteers, when drilling under Big Sam. He had a well-worn scraper on his head, peaked before and behind, with a bit cripe knotted round it, which the spolitely took off, bmaking a low bow; and requesting me to bargain with him for la few articles of grand second-hand apparel, which once belonged to his master that was deceased, and which was now carried by himself, in a bundle funder his left exter- tuode bour Ils berebiordme bons Happening never to make a trade of dealing in this line, and not very sine dike as to how the anid man might have come by the bundle in these riotoris and knock-him-down times, I swithered a moment, giving my chin a rub, before answering and then advised him to take a steprin at his leisure to St. Mary's Wynd, where he would meet in with merchants in scores But no puhe seemed determined to strike a bargain with me : and I heard from the man's sponsible and feasible manner of speech, for he was an auld weather-beaten-looking body of a creature, with gleg enige cock nose, white locks, and a tye behind, that the class must have been left him as a kind of friendly keepsake, by his master now beneath the mools. Thinking by this, that if I got them at a wanworth, I might boldly venturel; I condescended to his loosing down the bundle, which was in a blue silk napkin with yellow flowers As he was doing this he told me that he was on his way home from the north to his own country, which hay among the green Welch hills, far away ; and that he could not carry much luggage with him, as he was obliged to travel with his baggage tied up in a bundle, on the end of his walking staff, over his right bow; and requesting me to bargain with hirablinds do Pity me! what a grand coat it was! I thought at first it must have been worn on the King's own back, honest man ! for it was made of green velvet. and embroidered all round about-back seams, side seams, flaps, lappels, button-holes, nape and cuffs, with gold lace and spangles, in a manner to have dazzled the understanding of any Jew with a beard shorter than his arm! So, no wonder that it ime posed on the like of me; and I was mostly ashamed to make thim an offer for it of a crown-piece and a dram. The waistcoat, which was of white satin. single-breasted, and done up with silver timel in a most beautiful manner, I also bought from him for a couple of shillings, and four hanks of black thread. Though I would on no account or consideration give himola bode for the Hessian boots, which, having cuddy heels and long silk tossels, were by far and away over grand for the like of a tailor, such as me, and fit for the Sunday's wear of some fushionable Don'of the first water. However, not to part and divilly, and be as good as my word, I brought ben Nanse's bottle, and gave him a cawker at the shop counter grandy after taking a thimbleful to myself, to drink a good journey to dring, I bade thin take edre of his feet, as the caliseway was frozen, and saw the auld flunkie safely over the strand with a candle? obliged to travel with his baggage tied up in a bunwhen I paraded ben to the room with the grand coat and waistcoat on, holding up my head, putting my hands into the haunch, pockets, and strutting about more like a peacock, than a donce elder of Maister-Wiggie's kirk, so just as, thinking shame of myself, I was about to throw it off, I found something bulky at the bottom of the side pocket, which I discovered to be a wheen papers, fastened together with green tape. Finding they were written in a real neathand, I put ou my spectacles, and sending up the close for James, Batter, we sat round the fireside, and read away like nine-year-aulds.

The next matter of consideration was whether, including the coat as it stood, the paper belonged to me, or the auld flunkie waiting-servant with the peaked hat allowed and me after an hour and a half so argle-bargleing pro and con, in the way of parliament house lawyers, came at last to be unanimously of opinion that, according to the auld Scotch proyerb of minimum and allowed allowed and allowed and allowed and allowed allowed allowed and allowed allowed allowed allowed and allowed allowed allowed allowed allowed allowed and allowed al

And he that loses seeks,"

whatever was part or pendicle of the coat at the time of purchase, when it hung exposed for sale over the white-headed Welchman's little finger, became, according to the law of nature and nations, as James Batter wisely observed, part and pendicle of the property of me, Mansiel Wauch; the legal purchaser may alt the moor alt at nod behand I nedw

Like undaight stars they shine.

Notwithstanding all this, however, I was not sing cerely convinced in my own conscience; and I dare say if the creature had cast up, and come seeking them back, I would have found myself bound to make restitution. This is not now likely to happen : for twenty long years have come and passed away. like the sunshine of vesterday, and neither word nor wittens of the body have been seen or heard tell off; so, according to the course of nature, being a whiteheaded auld man, with a pigtail, when the bargain was made, his dust and bones have, in all likelihood." long ago mouldered down beneath the green truff of his own mountains, like his granfaither's before him!" This being the case, I daresay it is the reader's opinion, as well as my own, that I am quite at a liberty to make what use of them I like. Concern ing the poem-things that come first in hand, I do not pretend to be any judge; but James thinks he could scarcely write any muckle better himself ! so here goes; but I cannot tell you to what tune:

whatever was part in songer in the cost at the over time of parchase, when it had exposed for sale over the white-headed Web-hands at the white-headed Web-hands according to the thine, according to the cost of the thine, the wisely chief the thine of the cost of the thine thin wisely chief the thine of the cost of the thine thin the cost of the cost of

come as it were from her, prementing his being called to leave her torlorn, and return home. This is all merely supposition wood tolling rains and merely supposition wood tolling rains and the antiquarian atyle, whereby, ris gainrom and his both of this opinion, util otherwise convinced to the contrary. Love is a fiery and fierce passion the contrary. Love is a fiery and fierce passion everywhere it is supposed to the man is the first of the ferrible of the supposed of the first of the ferrible which it has a thousand times produced, where the heart of man is uncontrolled by reason or religion and his wig of misy exception to the description of the man is uncontrolled by reason or religion and his wig of misy exceptions that the ferrible heart of man is uncontrolled by reason or religion and his wig of misy exception to the description of the man is uncontrolled by reason or religion and his wig of misy exception to the sealous will all the ferrible thereing the supposed of the sealous will be supposed the supposed the sealous will be supposed the sealous will be supposed the sealous will be supposed to the supposed the sealous will be supposed to the supposed the supposed the supposed the supposed the supposed to the supposed the supposed

Here follows the poem of Taffy's master's foreign

From this song it appears a matter beyond donbt —for I know human nature—that the flunkie's master had, in his earlier years, been deeply in love with some beautiful young lady, that loved him again, and that maybe, with a bounding and bursting heart, durst not let her affection be shewn, from dread of her cruel relations, who insisted on her marrying some lord or baronet that she did not care one button about. If so, unhappy pan, I pity them! Were we to guess our way in the dark a wee farther, I think it not altogether unlikely, that he must have fallen in with his sweetheart abroad, when wandering about on his travels; for what follows seems to come as it were from her, lamenting his being called to leave her forlorn, and return home. This is all merely supposition on my part, and in the antiquarian style, whereby much is made out of little; but both me and James Batter are determined to be unanimously of this opinion, until otherwise convinced to the contrary. Love is a fiery and fierce passion everywhere; but I am told that we, who live in a more favoured land, know very little of the terrible effects it sometimes causes, and the bloody tragedies, which it has a thousand times produced, where the heart of man is uncontrolled by reason or religion, and his blood heated into a raging fever, by the burning sun that glows in the heaven above his head. And love thee till I die!

representations of the street of the street

'n.

Cold is the frozen north;
In its stern and savage mood,
Mid gales, come drifting forth
Bleak snows and drenching flood:
But the south—the gantle south—
Thaws to love the willing blood.

Having right and law on my side, as any man of judgment may see with heat sur grass othing could hinder me, it had been the wife to be the meantime. We will be sufficiently be suffered to the one story, in the meantime, we will be sufficiently be suffered to the one story, which I have nicked sure and made sufficiently sufficiently be sufficiently by the sufficient my faith to a single word of of the sufficient by the sufficient

Cherry lip, and bosom warm?
In the south—the gentle south,
There she waits, and works her harm.

v.

Say, shines the Star of Love,
From the clear and cloudless sky,
The shadowy groves above,
Where the nestling ringdoves lie?
From the south—the gentle south—Gleams its lone and lacid eye-

·₩.

Then turn ye to the home

Original Properties and your lipide;

Far all your steps may come properties

book and more low to the abide,

I the south your sente south,

book and more low to the abide,

I the south your sente south,

book and many and your gente south,

book and many and your gente south,

Having right and law on my side, as any man of judgment may see with helf and grannothing could hinder me, is it is it to print the wifele bundle; but, in the meantime, we mind the stitlined with one story, which I have picked out, and that I have set down concerning myself, the residence may take on credit, as open and even-down truth; but as to whether the following story be true or false, every one is at liberty to think for himself. Unless I saw a proper afficient, I would interest the story may party prin my faith to a single word of its jo word one, and help to sey.

Cherry lip, and tossom warm?

In the south—the gentle south,

There she waits, and works her harts

.Y

Say, shines the Star of Love,
From the clear and cloudless sky,
The shadowy groves above,
Where the nestling ringdoves he
From the south—the gentle south—
Gleams its lone and lucid eye.

clothed one half of the nation in the garments of mourning, and plunged all in sorious memours were heard from many a tongue in many a marter chaft stifled imprecations and threats of vengeance mingling themselves with the voice of lamentation all seemed only to await a signal, looking ground with impatience for some one, whose sense of wrongs hit with E. CURATE OF SUVERDSION to To first in (moving dove the grantiet of denance, and soundices the leaf and leaf the last to the last was the common mond, by the hornd speciacle which had been exhibited, that imagement and terror conspine of the says he loves my daughter; enterprising hese distinguish and constitution they meditation as independent and and reading contracted targets and reading and an arrangement of the contracted targets and are arranged to the contracted targets and are arranged to the contracted targets and are arranged to the contracted targets are arranged to the contracted targets and are arranged to the contracted targets a As 'twere my daughter's eyes and to be plain units out I think there is not half a kiss to choose, which have a nother best. THE WANTED

To render the overer of the country compacts in choly account of the state of their country, under the oppressive tyrianny of Christiern the Second, This of Denmark, who; sting to phrenzy by the generous spirit of independence that actuated the senate; in opposing the degradations to which he was continually endeavouring to subject it, gave reins he length to the bloodthirstness of his disposition, in the awful massacre of Stockholm.

clothed one half of the nation in the garments of mourning, and plunged all in sorrow, murmurs were heard from many a tongue in many a quarter; half stifled imprecations and threats of vengeance mingling themselves with the voice of lamentation; and all seemed only to await a signal, looking around with impatience for some one, whose sense of wrongs or natural hardihood might stimulate him to be the first in throwing down the gauntlet of defiance, and sounding the trampet of rebellion. TYet so paralyzed was the common mind, by the horrid spectacle which had been exhibited, that amazement and terror conspired to keep all in check; and, while the more enterprising began to regard the revolution they meditated as hopeless or desperate, the more wavering abandoned the scheme of taking up arms altogether, as one fraught with utter desolation and necessary ruin.

To render the misery of the country complete, an immense number of names blackened the roll of prosmiption, and almost certain death was the fate of every fugitive who succeeded not in effecting escape. At the time about which our little tale opens, this began to become an almost impossible matter, from the exposed nature of the country, the danger of travelling among the hills, and the general poverty of the peasants, combined with the dread they entertained of harbouring those, over whose heads hung the Damoclan, sword of Danish vengeance. The approach of winter rendered the sum of their miseries complete for what more dismal can be conceived than for wretches who have no home, to be obliged to wander over the frozen hills in the darkness, and to hide among the forests during the daylight, subsisting on whatever means the chance goodness of providence might afford; paying when it was in their power, or trusting in pennyless poverty to the gushing forth of human benevolence, a spring which to the honour of our nature, is not always frozen up in the bosom of man For such was the panic struck into all hearts by the massacre of the nobility in senate assembled, and the butchery in cold blood of the crowds who thronged the streets of the capital, without respect of sex, age, or person, that almost mone on whom suspicion of independent principles rested, durst show their faces in the towns, from fear of military violence, or the hazard of being informed on, and delivered up by the harpies, in whom the love of money extinguished every nobler principle, not only submitting quietly to the tyranny of Denmark, but betraying for wages the patriotic children of their own land. Switzerland.

The province of Dalecarlia, from its mountainous and almost inaccessible nature, was one of the principal places wherein the fugitives sought shelter; and not the less from its being the last division of Sweden that had submitted to foreign tyrainy. The population was necessarily thin, and scattered over a vast extent, there being scarcely a place worthy the appellation of a town, in the whole district; while the villages were widely dispersed over the edges of the boundless forests of pine, birch, and fire and over the banks of the lakes and rivers that intersect the country. These villages, moreover, were not like those in the other provinces of Sweden, under the control of some particular nobleman or gentleman; but were governed by the peasantry, who exercised among themselves the right of choosing governors, either to lead them to the field of battle, or to settle disputes in the case of civil differences. So high had they carried this spirit of independence, that no government durst send either troops or garrisons into this province without giving sufficient pledges to the natives for the preservation of their immunities; while, from the dread of their discovering that obedience on their part might be, if they so willed, only a matter of choice, a few skins formed the solitary tax ever levied; and no attempt at innovation was ever made on their ancient customs; being thus what La Vendee has been to France, or the Tyrol to Switzerland. children of their own land.

It was towards nightfall, that a traveller approached the hamlet of Suverdsio, among these rugged and sequestered hills. The sum had just sunk beneath the horizon, and the thick fir woods that stretched as far as the eye could reach, over the mountains and down into the vallies, were beginning, especially in the lower grounds, to wear a blue and sombre aspect. The clouds, drifted by the sharp winds, hurried over to the west; and flakes of snow came whirling down upon the rocks, in the angles of which the withered leaves went eddying round with a desolate noise. The stranger felt accordingly that it was no time to stand on ceremony; so, walking through the little grass court in front of the parsonage, a high-roofed antique-looking building, at the hither extremity of the little village, he tapped at the deep low-browed door, and begged quarters for the night. Fortunately for the success of his request, the Curate himself chanced to be at home; else the only other inmates of his home his pretty daughter, and a young woman that attended them—might have hesitated about receiving under the roof, during such dangerous times, any one who petitioned for what, in more peaceful days, no one within would have dreamt of refusing.

Without any but mere general questions being

Without any but mere general questions being asked, the evening passed on, and supper was spread for their guest of the best that the house afforded, which was dried deer's flesh broiled, and a dish of grout. As is generally the case in savage or mountainous countries, hospitality was a virtue among the Dalecarlians, the neglect of which infallibly entailed disgrace. But the Curate was not of those who are actuated more by the dread of displeasure than by the delight which the exercise of the gentler feelings brings to their possessor. Far removed from ostentation and the bustle of active life, his care was the preservation of the flock, whose souls had been consigned to his keeping. Though possessing talents, he looked not around for the passing dignities of this life, but forward to the unfading brilliancies of the next. The scion of an unambitious family, he had taken root in the family spot-his father and his grandfather having preceded him in the same cure; and already the silver hairs of age were mingling with the natural black, to warn him that another generation was springing up around him, before which his own must necessarily pass away. Yet what needed he to care for a wider sphere, when all that he bore regard to in life were around him,-his beloved, and loving flockhis beautiful and dutiful daughter-the moss-grown tombs of his fathers,-and the more recent and carefully preserved grave of his wife. This last relic was not the one that had least influence over his mind, in knitting it to the loneliness of Suverdsio; for to Grethe Hannson he had been early attached; he had married her in pure love, and had lived with her in perfect happiness, till the arm of death had been suddenly outstretched between them, leaving him, while yet in the maturity of life, a mournful But she had not all perished; for a daughter, the very image of her whom heaven had taken away, grew up at his feet, and soothed his solitary hours; while sorrow at length gradually softening down into resignation, he looked abroad on nature with a more cheerful eye, delighting in the society of a child, whose buoyant disposition billed his solitude with delight, and rendered even the bare rocks varound him at type of paradise s M So much we find is happiness the product of our own the person she had admitted was a perfect strasipoe When supper was over, and the crescent moon shore down on the dewy window-sill, the daughter retired from table, leaving her father to entertain their guest, and enjoy his conversation. She went into the adjoining kitchen, where by the light of la lamp, her servant, or rather female companion, was busied in knitting; and seating herself by the fire, opened a book of old national songs and stories, which she took an especial delight in conning over, as her young fancy rioted among the wars and loves, and superstitions of the olden timen. She was in the act of reading one of the legends relating to Holger Danske, the great ogre of northern romance, and her friend Katherine sate listening in delighted abtention The wind sighed but only from without; the faggots crackled; the kitten gambolled on the hearth, and all was cheerful, when Katherine stopped her by putting her finger on her armin saying, "Hist-did you not hear something 3% to Ilid on listening a moment, they heard louder words. than those of ordinary talk, proceeding from the room wherein were the Curate and his guest is ever and anon the tread of feet, as some one leisurely measured the apartment :- and then a husbing sound, as if silence had been imposed on their conversation, from the probability of its being overheard. of Margaret, whose love for her father was surpassing, was not a little anxious in mind, especially as the person she had admitted was a perfect stranger, and might conceal designs under specious appearances, which in the existing so troubled state of the country, might eventually be calculated to bring them into distress eve Personal harm to her parent she dreaded none for beholding the veverence in which he was universally held, and the respect paid to his every word and action, her innocence imagined that the fame of his virtues and sanctity pervaded the oworld, and that the injuring a single hair of his head would be regarded as an atrocity amounting almost to sacrilege. Above her father she seemed always to behold the arm of protecting ominipotence stretched out ; and rejoiced in the inward confidence, that no breathing creature could harbour a malicious design against one, the sound of whose hame was wafted like a healing bulsam to the cottager by his valley fireside, and to the solitary mountaineer, watching his straggled flocks on the ing, 44 Hist-did you not hear someth surrots fo lid ha short time elapsed, in which some feeling of suspense was indeed predominant; but at length, the door opening, the Curate was seen standing in the threshold with a light in his hand; and he called to Margaret to bring him the keys of the church earthly voices through the erevices of the tad sid bas The stranger followed, muffled up in a large woollen clook with which he had been supplied, and carrying over his arm a coverlet, which Margaret had brought at the command of her father. The Curate led the way, with the large rusty keys of the church in one hand, and a spacious circular horn lautern in the other. The night was still gusty, and scattery white clouds were fleeing like evil spirits across the sky, dimming the radiance of the declining moon. Having opened a postern door Twhich led through a small garden, at the foot of which rippled a clear streamlet amid its bordering willows. and crossed a narrow wooden bridge, whose whitened planks glittered with the sparry lustre of hoarfrost, they found themselves on the pathway that terminated at the neighbouring church at noitentia a The church itself was an old fantastic-looking Gothic structure, of inconsiderable extent, with a conical spire at the western angle, buttressed walls, with oblong diced windows in the inter-spaces, and a large low-browed door in the eastern gable All around wore the melancholy aspect of hoar antiquity; and, amid a scene so solitary and deserted, life and living things seemed to have passed away, and the sharp-horned moon looked as if setting in the last night of the world Every thing was silent, except the savage winds, tossing in transitory gusts the dry branches of the black pines, or moaning with unearthly voices through the crevices of the grey building whose shadow, falling like a black mantle over the silent field of graves, might have shaped it out to the eye of fancy as Loke, or some of the other monstrous impersonations of the Scandinavian mythology, keeping guard, with malignant scowl, over a region desecrated to his dominional one ni dorando The Vicar led his guest through the body of the building into the sacristy, where was a small fireplace, supplied with dry faggets ready to be lightedid The blankets were spread out over some deal seats, which made a tolerable substitute for a bedstead In a little while the hearth crackled and began to blaze cheerily, lighting up the gloomy walls. and dispelling the damp mouldy smell of the atmosphere, while the stranger began to feel himself in a situation more secure and comfortable than he Had experienced for a considerable time before. So when the Curate, after some little stay and conversation. wished him a good night, and locked, one after an other, the great creaking doors behind him, he wrant ped him in his coverlet, and lay down, glad, after the fatigues of his many wanderings, to enjoy a sound and refreshing slumber, and little scrupulous where that slumber wisited him and or bomos sgould guivil The superstitions of the dark ages, notwithstand ing the enlightening influence of Christianity, still sullenly brooded over the remote districts of the country; and the peasantry were yet almost universally governed by the belief in omens and presentiments, and the visitations of disembodied spirits; to say mothing of the olden mythological traditions. whereby every vale and hill had its legend of supernatural dread. The shepherd and the huntsman knew well the Elle people, who dwell in the Elle moors, bathing in the vellow flood of moon-beams : and had often heard the fair young Elle women playing on their magical stringed instruments, to entice the unwary to destruction. Often had they seen the malignant Trolls gambolling in rings on the green straths, with their grey coats, and tall peaked red caps; and, on awakening in the morning, had discovered, with pleased surprise, that the industrious Nis had put the whole house in order. But to sleep in a church a solitary church surrounded with graves companionless and alone in such adventurous thought could have sustained itself in the boldest of their bosoms. Well did they know of spectres that held nightly conclave there; and even should they escape these, was there not the awful Kirkegrim, who had his continual home in the sanctuary, and who would freeze the blood in the veins of any one foolhardy enough to be the midnight guest of such a landlord. Not so judged our stranger, or if feelings like these ever crossed his mind, the remembrance of more imminent dangers, or the strong opiate of fatigue, thoroughly quenched and overcame them. Though susceptible, his mind was not of that morbidly irritable kind which allows itself to be borne down with the pressure of imaginary horrors. He had braved actual risks; and endured bodily hardships too heavily and often, to stoop down to the dominion of fancy; while his mind, enlightened by education, had shut itself up to feelings that yet were wildly alive in the bosoms of the ignorant and simple. His thoughts were of another east; his fears were of a higher kind. His kindred had been mown down by the scythe of the tyrant; and he felt with a burning eagerness the miserable degradation of his native country. Yet as these thoughts and feelings passed less actively through his mind, he sunk into profound repose; and his dreams, if he had any, were more southing and pleasant than he had been lately accustomed to 19918 When the Curate approached his own door, He found his child anxiously awaiting him in the debra way; and, as she took the light from him, she said tenderly, " Bless thee, my father! Oh, how glad am I that you have come safe back to as the yout bloods Margaret," replied the Curate, taking her by the hand, "Margaret, my dear child, there needed no such violent expression of affection. I have been running no risks. I have been encountering no dangers, farther than showing a noble houseless fellow-creature to a very miserable bed-chamber; but it is the best, at least the securest we have to offer. May he have a sound sleep. But hearken to meand so saying he preceded her into the parlour.

8 3

"Well, father?"

"While that stranger is in our keeping," said the Curate, " the utmost secrecy must be preserved. Hint not of having seen any one—mention not to a creature that we have a strange man in hiding-Would that I could do him a service: his causeour cause, for it is the cause of heaven and humanity -demands it; and, Margaret, as I am often called on holy errands from home, great part of the duty of attending upon him, and supplying his necessary wants, may devolve on thee; for I would not for a world's wealth that-

"Oh, assuredly, father?" answered Margaret, kindled as it were by a sudden emotion, whose glow lighted up her beautiful features. "I trust you shall never find me wanting in charity to the distressed.

"Call it not charity, daughter!" said the Curate. " It is in this case especially duty,-imperative duty. Know you that our guest is one of the persecuted patriots—one of the men of whom our dastardly tameness is unworthy?"

At mention of these words her cheek paled; and she pressed her hand to her side, as if some pain at her heart impeded her breathing, which, in a moment after, heaved her bosom more tumultuously.

"Sure then, father, he does not come from this quarter of the land," she said; "at least I do not remember having ever seen him before."

"Oh, I dare say not," was the reply. "But, whether stranger or not, you know your duty; and I need not repeat my instructions to you. Say nothing on the subject to any one; and see that you have breakfast ready for me betimes to carry him in the morning; for not kings themselves, nor even enthusiasts, can live entirely on air. See then that you mind, child."

"It was lucky, father," said Margaret, "that he came not hither to us sooner. If he had been in the house the other day, when the wild Copenhagen horsemen came rummaging about, turning the world upside down, perhaps,—but there is no saying!"

"That is the most inconclusive remark, Margaret, that ever flowed from the lip of man or maiden, said the Curate, smiling. "If you had been living at the time of the flood, with Noah and Shem, then, perhaps,—but there is no saying!"

"Ah, father, you are hard upon me; for you know he might have been taken, dragged from our hearth,—and hanged on the first tree; as was done with Ulric Staaden's lodger the other week."

"Well, Margaret," said the Curate, "I hearfily is may may be a subject to the first that he has thus far escaped them; and let us hope the best for the future."

Did he not mention Regner Beron ? breadded Margaret, with somewhat of a sheepish look, as if the question did some little violence to her bashfulness. "Ah, father, you might have asked something about him-you know that he is not unrelated to us by blood. That he was born in our district, and was my playmate, when we were young, very young, and happy creatures. To be sure now he is a soldier—or lately was—and it is difficult to say for whom, or against whom he carries arms. hope, for old acquaintance sake, that heaven has directed him!

"Tuts, child," said the Curate, " have you not forgotten that idle forester yet? It were better for him to have kept at shooting his snipes and woodcocks, his white hares and brown foxes, than to have taken up a trade about which he knew less; when his only likely reward was the getting his neck in d boots and fall through the decided. Don't you think so?

"Then you think he did wrong, father?"

"Come, come," said the Curate, as he turned from her with a smile; "'tis but an hour from midnight; let the household prepare for rest,—and let us mind our own matters, leaving others to judge for themselves; and, committing the care of our state to him, who sent the ravens to Elijah, and armed the pebble with destruction, that, slung from the arm of a shepherd boy, smote the forehead of the deriding

Philistine: daige and a to tadweroos drive temporal!

If the sleep of the stranger in the chapel, surrounded with many a ghastly monument, of human decay, was soothing and sound, full of refreshment, that of Margaret, in the endearing home of her parent, was far from being so. She now dreamt of the stranger, of his tall and portly appearance, of the impressive dignity of his countenance, undimmed by the cloud that overhung his brow, -of the mysterious altercation, for so it seemed, with her father,and of his sequestred abode in the old church. Now she dreamt that Regner Beron was returned to the home of his childhood; and that she wandered with him amid the woods, beside the old castle of his ancestors, on whose tall, grey tower, as of yore, the wall-flower sprinkled its yellow blossoms, and the wild pigeons cooed, basking themselves in the pleasant sunshine. Anon, she thought that she stood by her own door, in the mellow glow of autumnal evening, watching his return from his sylvan sports, with his heavy game-pouch at his side, his gun slung over his shoulder, and his faithful black hound, Grotten, trudging behind him. Again, the vision changing, she sate with him in her father's church, while now and then his eloquent glances told her, that her image divided the empire of his thoughts with better things; while suddenly the figures dying away, she beheld him with his sword buckled upon his side, and his staff in his hand, as on that morning when he bade adien to her at the door of her home, and lingered with the handle of the outer gate between his fingers, to cast a last, fond glance on her, still luitering at the threshold-step.

So passed over the greater portion of the night. and the early flush of dawn tinged her eastwardlooking lattice with crimson, and she was greeted by the salute of the already awakened thrush ere her feelings, were more completely quenched in slumber. This quiet repose she did not however long enjoy. for the abrupt opening of her chamber-door in a short time startled her wiff Not yet awake child," said her father, as he entered, buttoning his large shaggy cloak, with a broad brimmed hat slouched over his ears to protect him from the chill air, "I am sent for to visit old Magnus Vere, who, it seems. has been wantenly wounded by some villains, who, in the name of the Danish government, have been over-night searching his house, in the bopes of discovering some particular Stockholm fugitives, whom they have traced to this neighbourhood Good morning, Margaret, It seems I must hurry on, if I wish to see him in life, for he cannot last above a self received the messenger, and is by listruck was Oh, monsters !" said Margaret, "to murder a good harmless old man, who must have been innocent of all crime against church or state, in the mere wantonness of disappointed blood-thirstiness. Who knows, father, what may get be our own fare that and the Let us do our duty, Margaret, trusting in heaven. Let us fear God, and have no other fear.

"Poor old soul!—Poor old Magnus Vere! Shall I then never behold him more. It was but last week he brought me branches of evergreen to deck our dwelling! All last summer he brought me bunches of beautiful flowers from his garden such flowers as are not to be found elsewhere, all the country round. And the pot of honey last September. Ah! the kind old man, he never forgot us, father; he was always finding out something he thought would please us."

Well, Margaret, let me not forget him. Nor do you forget to carry breakfast betimes to our stranger in the church. Make not the smallest ado about the matter; but let silence and secrecy go hand-in-hand."

Oh! stay but for a moment, father. How shall I communicate this dreadful business to our poor Katherine? It will go far, I fear, to break her heart, for she loves her old parent most tenderly."

"That misery is saved you, Margaret, as she herself received the messenger, and is by this time at her father's bedside. So farewell again; and again see that you neglect not our guest. Tell him the cause of my absence. I will be back between Good or the back between Good or the the wounds he had the wounds he had the morning, child.

Margaret lay for a little absorbed in melancholy, and pondering over the terrible vicissitudes of mortal life. She felt on what holds we rested our hopes of happiness; and how, in an hour, the paradise of this world may be left to us desolate. Her mother was with the dead; she had small remembrance of her, for she had been summoned away while yet she was but four summers old; but she took a delight in the mournful duty of keeping her grave-turf free from weeds, and scattering over it the earliest flowers of the spring. Her father was now rapidly declining into the vale of years; and, in the course of nature, a separation might not be very distant but the troubled state of her native land filled her bosom with additional fears. "Last night," she said to herself, "Katherine chatted and laughed with me—a merry creature. She lay down on her pil-and beauty beat both of the pil-low in happiness—she hath risen up from it in sorrow. She had then a father, as I have now,—alas how fares it with her at this moment!" And here she wiped away the large drops that rushed burn-ingly over her cheeks.

The good Curate was, in the mean while, pursuing his journey; but, ere he reached the cottage of Magnus Vere, his wife and daughter were looking along the road, warring for his appropriate the road, warring for his appropriate the woods. Unfortunately, however, for the fate of for immediately on his entering, he perceived, from the features of the old man, that the wounds he had received were mortal, and that a few hours must probably terminate the struggle. Magnus was, however, still sensible, and told his story with simple distinctness.

It seems, on the previous afternoon, one well to select the seems of the previous afternoon, one well to select the seems of known to them both, Regner Beron, the son of Magnus old master, had, in disguise, come to the cottage, soliciting a night's lodging, which, having been freely granted, he had, in the course of the evening, disclosed himself; informing the family, in whom he reposed the strictest confidence, that he had travelled for a long way over the mountains in company with another fugitive, whom he had brought to that part of the country for greater security, and directed for shelter for the night to the dwelling of the Curate. It fell out, however, just as they were preparing to retire to rest, that the sound of horses feet approaching created an alarm; and that Beron, stealing cautiously to the door, had recognised the party, though in the dusk, as the Danish dragoons, who were in strict search among the hills for the proscribed fugitives, particularly for some of the nobles, who were presumed to have taken that direction-and his ready perception saved his life; for he had succeeded in concealing himself amid a tuft of hay, by the side of the door, till the entrance of the pursuers enabled him to make off unperceived to the woods. Unfortunately, however, for the fate of his host, he had in his precipitation, left his cloak Hehind, which being recognised, and the search proving ineffectual, the party threatened instant death to Magnus if he did not on the instant give up the refugee into their hands. On finding that this could not be accomplished, the ruffians, in dastardly revenge, had wounded the old man in several places with their swords and the butts of their pistols, leaving him on his own floor for dead, weltering in Sherved to Margaret at once that neither Kabold sid to administer the last consolations of religion; for, in a little while, he remarked the long-drawn heavy breathing, the paling check, and the glazing eye of the old man ; and, as he felt the fluttering pulse, he observed the cloud of death mantling around him, silently and almost imperceptibly, as the dews of night congeal; harden, and crust over the green leaf in the leady frost of maning and the parents of the plan and the parents of the pa was that the Curate should exercise the same care wer his daughter as he had hither to done; and that, in her young and inexperienced years, he should be sher guardian and protectors of notice which left the wife of lold Magnusia widowa and his daughter an orpliano Margaret had theen busying herself in pre-parations for breakfasting their hidden guest. She felt addegreenof simil reluctance to set out on her walk, but her scruples were overcome by a sense of duty, though when she turned the key in the old grating lock of the church-door, her heart fluttered like that of a newly-caught bird.

The stranger who was already engaged in looking over some papers that lay scattered on the little table before him, rumpled them up into a heap at her approach, and rising from his seat, wished her a good morning with a smiling countenance, which shewed to Margaret at once that neither Kirkegrin. the spirit of the church, nor any other of the unearthly wanderers of night had paid him a visit in his lonely sleeping place. His erect and gallant demeanour, the nobleness of his features, the portliness of his step, and the grace attendant on every movement, made her conscious at once that the person before whom she stood was no common man, and awed her in a moment into a reserve that was scarcely in keeping with the gentle openness of her nature. But the breath of a few passing words served to clear away the chilling cloud of restraint, for the stranger was one in whom benignity of disposition was conjoined with gentility of manners - a conjunction which is often to be met with, and ought always to be inseparable—so in a little she was asking questions, and he answering them in the flow of conversation, with the unrestrained confidings as of old acparations for breakfasting their hidden conest.

aloof from, though it more than once trembled on her tongue. Sometimes she hoped he might stumble upon it, and sometimes she resolved to question boldly. In this she was disappointed; in that she disappointed herself. Need we say that the subject was Regner Beron?

Some hours passed over in solitude; and, save the mummer of the daws that duttered about the roof, in the crevices of which they had probably nestled their summer young, all living sounds were silent. The only light of his dormitory flowed in through two narrow slips near the roof, so that it served only to show him the progress of time, as the lazy sumbeams crawled slowly from west, to east along the opposite wall. Communion with his own thoughts was however a subject with which the stranger had been long and intimately conversant; and he was lost in a reverie of the past or the future, at the instant when the grating of the church-door awakened him up, with the warning that some one approached. It was the Gurate room and want a "Good day," said the reverend man, on entering,

"I have been long of waiting upon you, and I doubt not you have been somewhat impatient on your part.
But I have been delayed in the execution of a mournful office. I have been closing the eyes of an honest man and old friend;"—and then he repeated the catastrophe which had happened, and the escape of Beron.

"Then he has escaped safely?" cried the stranger, starting from his seat, and looking anxiously at the Curate. "I trust in heaven it may be so!"

So it is hoped—at least no harm has overtaken him so far as it is known. I know his acquaintance with the mountain passes hereabout; nor can he be followed in them by his pursuers without the assistance of our native guides, whom they shall find unwilling; or find not at all! He has taken to the hills I doubt not; and if so, I entertain no fears of his having cluded them?

I rejoice at it sincerely," said the stranger, resuming his seat with more composured a Should it be otherwise, I vow to heaven.

"Make no rash vows," said the Curate, interrupting him. "Especially when the blood of man is so likely to be spilt in their fulfilment."

Ah!" resumed the stranger, "you think me impetuous probably I am so." But knew you how valuable the life of Regner Beron is to our cause! Knew you the importance of the commissions with which he is intrusted! Knew you that the soul of our country may in a manner be said to be at this moment in his hands, then you would sympathize in my irritability, and overlook my rasiness! Speaking with regard to myself, I, too, have a deep personal interest in his fate; for he was once the means of rescuing me from destruction, at a moment of the Talk not of that," said the Curate Heaven prospers the right cause, and all may yet be well. You said that Beron was to journey to Mora; I have no doubt that he is already far on his way thither.

And as to the poor old man who has innocently suffered in our cause!" said the stranger not a little affected, "it is miserable that our safety cannot be effected but by throwing our protectors into danger, making the exercise of hospitality a risk, and Christian charity a crime beyond the pale of forgiveness. Let it not be so, I beseech you, between us. Though, confiding in your honour, I have thrown myself into your arms, let not threatened destruction fall on your house for my sake, and, if concealment cannot be effected without the shedding of innocent blood, give me up at once, for better is death itself, than a life which would be rendered miserable by the bitterness of unavailing contrition."

there may be no need to act on your generous warnings. But may I ask you were you really at Stockholm at the season of the massacre? Did you actually witness the scenes, which, even here in our secure mountain solitudes, caused our hair to stand on end with horror? arrotmos side of am betenhoos tyranny seemed at once to kindle fire in the veins of the stranger, and he paced to and from with a hurried step, for a little while in silence, then, halting in a more settled state, there was yet a brokenness in the tones of his voice as he replied.

" No, my friend, I was not present. Had it been so, my duty to the state would have found me that day with the senate, whose bloody fate I must have shared As it is, I have been spared, not for my own worthiness but it may be to avenge their blood! Before that day I had a father I had friends L bad a home When the sun of that evening went down, it left me the forlorn being you now find me, or Gould I sit down in silence, and aimlessly lament the bitter doom which had been allotted? That was not, thank Heaven, in my nature; nor, if it had, would such apathy have been allowed me. I speedily discovered that a mark had been also net on my brows as one of the growd who would draw the sword of revolution whenever opportunity occurred; and that my name was not the last on the roll of the proscribed. Such is the degenerate nature of man, that no somer was this known, than my body-servant, a man who had eaten of my bread for years, made an attempt to deliver me up into the hands of the foe; but may ingratitude ever meet with a reward like his. The proscribe and apply the sound of the his.

"What became of the villain?" asked the Curate.
"The subject is unworthy wasting breath about," answered the stranger; "but when an armed party entered my chamber under his directions, and found their prize gone, they turned round on the informer, accused him of having permitted my escape for a bribe, and shot him on the spot. Since then, I have been hunted from hiding-place to hiding-place like a wild beast, fearing the beams of that sun whose illumination streams so beautifully in upon our wall at this moment, and finding safety only in the darkness of night!"

"Terrible, terrible indeed," said the Curate.
"But let us live in the prospect of better days.
Winter lasts not all the year round; and the volcano ceases to rage when its fires have burnt themselves away. You say that you have seen service in the army; but, tush!—I fear my curiosity is impertinent. We mountaineers are proverbially fond of prying into other folk's business; but.—"

questions are free and friendly. Perhaps you may have heard of Gustavus Vasa, one of our generals of horse? Beron and myself belonged to his regiment, and have seen some service with him." and near to entire Oh yes," said the Curatel of I have heard of him, and well. "Tis said be is yet but a young man. Is he not?"

"Much about my own age, I dare say Peor soul! he is, no doubt, like the nest of us, a fingitive among the hills, grieving in heart to see Sweden in fetters. Perhaps we may yet hear his strumpetentered my chamber under his directions, and "bilad T trust we shall," answered the Curate of "He is well spoken of bythis true-hearted countrymen: and may the names of the loyal ever sound dike echoes of terror in the cars of the savage Dane, our oppressor." To amend out mirnet . saed bliv a Hoff Trust not, friend, said the stranger, that thy sanguine expectations in any lone. The chance of our restoration to freedom dwells not, luckily oin individual hands, but in unison in The solitant tree is torn up by the winds; but the thick ublack forest bids defiance to the assailing tempest of the simple -reed is easily broken; but the bunch defies the lance of the giant. However, as Lehaver faith in mane I reckion Gustavus, wherever he may be, true so our pertinent. We mountaineers are proventell'seins!

"And there is Admiral Norbidal sthere not?" In of True, there is a But Met must reakon kerupulously. In some bosoms ambition occupies at larger space than patriotism patril let us judge charitably.

The Admiral is valiant, and a dangerous foe if not a safe ofriend. Whatever his designs towards our cause may be, his wishes towards Christiern are sinisten enough Did you hear of his hopes regarding the administrator's widow and bus animover a Hopes latyou do not allude to marriage ? and Then " said the stranger I that sunlight To'er our heads has no reference to day." seniob sid beitis wiff If so then farewell to our prospects from that quarterd" said the Curated Walthe craftiness of the politician, hath overcome the honesty of the sailor. Too much power hath corrupted the singleness of his heart. Being Governor of Gothland, he needed notinto have Calman, the second post I suppose in our territory, under his jurisdiction of It was a bribe -a base bribe. The sword has been put into his hand sharpened by tyranny; but before it be again sheathed nobler ambition may rouse him to turn its edge against the breast of the common oppressor." Think ye," said the stranger off that your Church has remained incorruptible? Know we not that he has been dealing most liberally with your benefices ?"

"In what respect, and where 2 asked the Curate, while the glower industry the prosent passed over taking the Curate by the hand; "thou serultand aid beating the Curate by the hand; "thou serultand had been as thou now properly and the serultand as the cordially are as the serultand as the serul

ment on the rules our Church—our Church! added the Curate with a smile of derision! "The voice of reason, and the Holy Book, which it is pretended we expound, shout in our ears the heinous iniquities of a perverting and iniquitous system!! "numbe edt gui

"Say not so," interrupted the stranger hastily. Your master, the Pope, bath sanctioned and sancour heads has no reference to day." .sgniob sid bailt Jank Be it southen " said the Curate warmly; this authority I have long despised in my heart, as a forgery ingrafted on the only true religion. May the swords unsheathed for our restoration to the civil rights of freemen, disdain their scabbards till they have cut asunder the cords of spiritual bondage !"Tis true I was born in the Papal faith-I was educated in the Papal faith-I have been a minister of the Papal faith from my youth upwards, anntil this day an But time, incustom, delf interest, have not been able to blind mine eves to its crookedness to its nummeries to its monstrous absurdities! Now throw I off the mantle of hypocrist. which thoughtlessly, I have worn too long but "In what respect and whet regnol on rasw links taking the Curate by the hand; "thou art in honest man; and, without reference to thy caution, I admire thy simple uprightness. My sentiments are as thine—cordially are as thine; and though gloomy be our prospects at this moment, as the scowl of a

Lapland winter, the day, I trust, is not very far distant, when we shall have strength to dash the giant Oppression in the dust, and live in the sunshine of equitable laws and religious freedom. Doth not the stench of tyrannical corruption ascend from the shackled valleys up to us even here, infecting the pure fresh air of our native mountains?" Thornes Thor Take, then, my hand upon it," said the Curate; "and, though my holy calling forbids my bearing arms, I shall aid in the general cause to the utmost of my poor ability. I shall explain-and exhortand admonish. I shall preach boldly, and be not afraid; nor shall I think my life lost should it be thrown away in the service.-Who has been up pointed Viceroy have ve not heard?" have anily or has Another of your favoured churchmen-Theodore, Archbishop of Lunden." de la believed "Oh! shame shame shame to the proflicacy of the church !- I wash my hands from the foul inibearth, ere in proceeded on his further journey viing And know ye what is the first act of his administration? He has set a price upon the head of General Gustavus, and dispersed horsemen over the country, with commission to put the proscribed to the sword wherever they can be found." and timber Enough enough!" said the Curate, holding up his clenched hand. "Why trembles not Earth under her burthen of iniquity ?- I must be gone for the present, but shall see you shortly. In the meantime I have brought to amuse your solitude two books ; one of them is the early Chronicle of Sweden, the other the old ballad legends of our pative equitable laws and religious freedom. Donn "afron They are most welcome, my kind sir, "osaidathe stranger; "and I shall be glad of your company at your convenience, though I fear that I am a most troublesome lodger . If any one come to your dwelling at night-fall, by the token of his asking for Eric Voss, shalt thou know that he is my friend; and admit him, for his business is argent, filide roog var to The sun had sunkaplacidly like the benignant eye of heaven-beyond the great hills whose ragged fringework of larch, pine, and first yet glowed in dark outline against the pavilion of the west, while the evening star, peeping from behind a pale grey cloud, heralded the galaxy of night as a talk youth wrapt up in his clock of furs, solicited at the curacy of Suverdsio for leave to warm himself a while by the hearth, ere he proceeded on his farther journey amid the mountains. The Curate was absent, having gone out in the afternoon to visit the mourners at the enttage of old Magnus; nar mas his daughter without anxiety for his return. But Margaret made bold to admit the traveller, even though quite alone in the house, and conscious of the distracted state of the times stinforming himsthat therefather, when alshe expected home every minute, would she was quitem sure; make him perfectly welcome det I tule—leaf

^{*} Probably either Eric of Upsal's "Chorographia Scandinaviae," or Adam of Bremen's "Tumbae Veterum apud Sucones Gothosque Regum."

After the offer of some slight refreshment, which was duly accepted. Margaret, in the usual affable way, began to enter into conversation with the stranger. And the massacre of Stockholm being still the theme upon every tonghes she inquired iff he had recently come, or had beard any thing from that huntren are again and meaning upon yet nick.

el' Oh eyes," sansivered (the youth;) of and bloody work they made of it. But I have come up among the bills in search of amold comrade in arms of mine; one Regher-Lifonget dis name just how?

"Regner Beron, can it be?" asked Margaret," essen not at all, Beron," interrupted vliage

##Ayuthat's the name sayou have not; I find, for g

I see you once more safe; safe; safe; safe I laid springing across the floor, she threw herself upon his need, while he pressed her to this heart in an estasy of affection; then as saddenly withdrawing herself, like a wild bird from the grasp of the truent school. I boy, she said to him while her bosom heaved, and her theek glowed with the flash of maidenly modes typ which in the irresistible wehenence of her emon tions she had somewhat over exerted to the fly safty. Berond all your not know that the liorsemen are in-our dales in search of you-may be even at this mount ment at our gates hand show could b survive your fate !- But I talk simply; perhaps you have forus After the offer of some slight refreshmentation off Forgotten von, Margaret Mabut you are njestew way, began to enter into conversation with theni offiNavahavlembut I am not jesting of your dangerus Have you not heard that your protector Makings Vere, poor old, bwhite-haired Magnus, beend slain by your pursuers, in their rage at not finding! vondo Graspanot round for vour pistols dus l'Gt is work they made of it. But I have combatel ootowen 16 Impossible lansaid Regner, starting to his feet di soul-struck teat other intelligence headad received m " Regner Beron, can it be " seraewa I med " "Swear not at all, Beron," interrupted Maran garet. bee The thing is past, and you are blameless. Let your care now be for the living for yourself to off Be not dismayed, Margaret; on that score. Well-know blothese my native hills mandd have a I sword-arm to protekt my head! All, poor Magnustes and hath the charity paid the penalty of blood !! rather had I fallen into the hands of my enemiests Howican Lerepaylsuch doss ! and from thid bliw a salil Miscause was thine," answered Margaret : fandd if he has perished at his post, like a loval Swedish mountaineer, scarcely is hist fate to be damented vi seeing the degradation to which the living fard subjecteds Were of a man, Beron, we should conquest or fall together. In the meantime, see to yourself, and fly for secure refuge! But whither fly? Nomeon remain here. I You cannot be safer than with my father; and if perish we must, let our house fall together. Like Saul and Jonathan we have been united in our lives, and in death let us be not divided and the same a the hand she faintly attempted to withdraw, it must not be so at present. Yet, credit me, matters are not so desperate as your solicitude pictures to your fears. Cheer up, my sweet one, I have undergone many hardships, encountered many dangers, but I have held them all lightly, compared with the simple sorrow of being separated from thee. We have known happy days, Margaret, and may yet.—How grows the hazel by the mill-stream? Does the declining sun never invite you to a saunter there now, and because of the saunter of the now.

Ah, Beron, do you ask that?" said she, with a sorrowful playfulness. "But whither go you this evening? You must not stir before my father returns."

him. Have you to other visiter?"

" Why do you ask?"

"So, Margaret, you are careful not even to open yourself to me? but I appland your caution. Where have you hidden him?" His Iran a trusty housekeeper, Beron, and dividge not family secrees, so shall not implicitly depend even only only Could you have thought so, Beron? But how would you judge of anequivers my idle openness to rendanger my lone, who reckoned himself secure in the obaricter of our guest. But, hearken'th

"What do you hear, my faithful Margaret Hivib The Yespitis invifather's footstep all land she rose to hurry to the door when Beron, interposing, snatched a first fond kiss p and ere she had breath to chide him; he laid his hand on her arm; saying, os Jon 9m -19 Stay, Margaret stay : 71 tog have reasons for privacy, and perhaps even from him; for I journey in the character of a special messenger, and know not yet how his heart stands affected regarding your cause: Fearmote however, Margaret, that I have embarked in any enterprise wherein my honour may be compromised of If we succeed we reap a harvest of glory; if we fail, it is after having acted the parts of true meniss We shall hope the best, Margaret," he added, as she withdrew the band he affectionately pressed in Thereloudiest day may set in the pure tranquillity of sunshine; and, though unworthy thee! I know thy bosom too faithful to desert that man in peril to whom thou did'st pledge thy troth in peace !" " Why do you ash i"

At this moment the father entering, retreated a step in surprise at seeing a muffled stranger seated by his hearth; not that the thing was uncommon, or that any traveller of the hills had ever received other than a kind welcome, but because, in the expisting troubled state of Dalecarlia, he was in danger of having at the same moment the pursuer and the fugitive under his roof together, well knowing, at the same time—so high run the spirit of conflicting parties—that should such ever chance to be the case, small would be the scruple of the persecuting Dane, and as small the hesitation of the persecuted Swede, about staining the hearth with human blood.

Good even, sir, said Beron, rising and bowing respectfully, "I presume you are the Curate of Surverdsio. If so, I bear you a confidential message."

From whom? asked the Curate a little anxiously, as Beron, in the act of pushing aside his cloak, to draw a packet from his breast, displayed two pistols stuck in the bread leathern belt which girdled his double? belt before a page of the proof of the party of t

From whom I may not say; the plied Beron so but to Count Eric Voss bear I my message. Per likaps you may direct me where that nobleman is to be found? mori that a has slim a mode passion I may the

And is Eric Voss one of our nobles?" asked the Curate, with not a little surprise, as the unreserved nature of the communications they had held together flashed back upon his memory. "Indeed his stately mien and bearing mark him out as such, and separate him from the common crowd, not less than his learning, sense, and information. I find too he has travelled, and knows the world as well from observation as from books. Have you had any refreshment in I shall lead you to him immediately."

""" Shall lead you to him immediately."

""" Shall lead you to him immediately."

""" Said Beron, giving Margaret in gentle look, mobsenved by the Curate, "" I am abundantly refreshed, and ready to follow you has I doubt not my presence is anxiously wearied for by the Count, though Lam yet an hour earlier than Lappeinted," not missed and liams as bus

The Chrate resumed his hat, and led the way to the door, followed by Regner; while Margaret came up behind with the ostensible purpose of seeing it. closed But, perhaps, she might have some other object equally in view and what guess you, reader, might that bed Perhaps a parting squeeze of her lover's hand; and in this she was not disappointed. and By Sunrise for the succeeding morning, Count Eric Voss, and Regner Beron, departed from the sanctuary of the hospitable Curate, who accompanied them a short way on their route. They made a halt, however, at the small wooden bridge thrown over the river Leissac, about a mile and a half from the church of Suverdsio and standing beneath the immense trees of pitch fire whose dark branches overhung the sharp rocks on the left bank of the stream, they conversed together for a little while on the state and prospects of affairs around them, promising that, either in weal or wo, their host should soon hear of his learning, sense, and information. I find tomed bl Before parting, the Count unbuttoned the coarse. - shaggy cloak in which he was clumsily wrapped, the better to disguise his quality, and cut, with his penknife, a golden button from the curiously embroidered tunic he wore underneath, saying to the Curate, Money, my kind friend, I have not to offer you, the which I less regret; knowing as I do, that your hospitality flows not from base thirst of lucre, but from pure benevolence to your fellow-creatures. Preserve this button, which I have now cut from the left breast of my tunic. Its intrinsic value is/insignificant, but it may serve you as a memorial of one whom you relieved from urgent distress, and set on his path rejoicing. When I came to your hospitable door, but two days ago, my prospects were black as the shade these rocks cast on the water; now they are brightening like you skies beneath the influence of the rising sun for me to be all board board base You think of me," said the good man, " much more warmly than my supposed merits claim. Though my holy calling forbids my joining in seenes of warfare, yet the religion I profess blinds not the human conscience to the sense of right and wrong; but commands us to do our duty, and be not afraid Could I behold the atrocities which have clothed my dear native country in mourning, and bowed down the honest pride of her independence to the dust, vet live on regardlessly in sloth and apathy of mind, believe me it could as little render me abetter minister of the faith, as it could satisfy the demands of my abhorring spirit, I rejoice for your own sakes, and for the sake of this oppressed realm, that you leave my door with better) hopes than, those with which you approached it. Take with you my parting blessing my prayers be ever with your noble cause ; and, lift the day arrive when you unsheathe your swords for our country's freedom, be assured that my heartiest petitions ascend to heaven in your behalf, notted and wresen I - 2 St My excellent friend; said the Count, Swould that all the sons of Sweden rejoiced in her honour as you do, felt her degradation as you feel, and were actuated by the same open, hold freedom of principles; then would the fetters with which we are bound, be but ropes of the sea-sand, and the iron sceptre with which we are fulled, drop at once from the blasted hand of our oppressoral Then should we soon see our ancient independence restored, and make these accursed Danes feel what our fathers have often made them feel that they rouse the slumbering dibnowhen they provoke our resentnot the human conscience to the sense of rightnems ad Having slowly saintered on during this conversation, they had gained a part of the road on the opposite bank of the stream; where a footpath branched off to a thick part of the old woods at the bottom of womall ravine, one side of which was formed by frightful blalmost operpendiculani rocks, from the ledges of which, the scared mountain-birds screamed loudly as they wheeled away over the trees. The spot was wild, sequestered, and lonely, and so little discernible from the main road, that the traveller might readily pass on without its attracting his smallest observation. The three stood still for a moment and listened, but nought was to be heard save the faint far scream of the heaven-ascending eagle, whose gyrations were gradually mingling themselves with the ocean of blue sky, " My friend," said the Count, turning to Beron, "I hope you have not disappointed us?" snoitonuini teal sid "Tis impossible," was the reply, as, running a little forward, he ascended a green knoll, and gave a short, shrill whistle. For a few moments he stood silently looking around him, and listening for an answer. He then repeated his summons still more loudly, and almost immediately came a response from the adjacent woods, while the Count and the Curate, gazing stedfastly in that direction, had the satisfaction of discovering a peasant, hurriedly leading forward two horses, earned owt have rook on

The Count then cried to his friend. "I see our squire has been trusty - Give him now what recompense you may; and it were best he loiter in this neighbourhood, till he learns something farther the waters of use of use of the country of the coun

"Is he good for any thing?" said the Curate, smiling. "We cannot afford to have idle hangers-on about us; but, if he can work in the field—or about the house—or take care of our cows—or follow our straggling hill sheep—we shall be glad of his services till you return among us."—d mort elding each and excellent fellow will you find him," said Beron; "and capable of all that you ask." See that he serve you diligently."

The Count then mounted a beautiful black steed, which, curvetting under his weight, seemed to rejoice in the hopes of travel; while Beron, following his example, higgered for an instant, as he whispered his last injunctions into the car of the stirrup-holder; then, waving his hand to the Curate, gallopped on after his leader.

In half a minute they were out of sight round the angle of the hill; the road looking far down into the streamy dells beneath; but the poor fellow hurried up to the top of a tall detached piece of rock, to have a last look of the travellers; and, having gazed a little, gave his hand a farewell wave, as he came plodding down to the spot where the Curate stood.

"Gunnar shall may be never see his master more," he said, giving his head a sorrowful shake; "it were better to be with the thunder-storms among the summer hills, when every flash of lightning shivers the old pines, than to go to the field of battle, where human blood flows like the waters of the stream. My blessings, however, go with him; for a kinder heart beats not between this and the sea."

they quietly bent their steps homeward to Suverdsion of Ydu are not, sure, a native of these parts?
for few in our district are unknown to me?

Right masters replied the peasant, souch is my name; but, though I seem a stranger to you, not many miles from where we now are, was I born and bred. To be sare having long worked in the mines —that is for ten years; and being now six-andtwenty-come Yule—I know not a great many folks above ground. Mowever, I have been at Suverdsee before now of and the prettiest lass in all wide Sweden is to be found in that spot, and no where else. In this bead and buron band and in soits and amused note And so you are in love, are you?" and so you are in love, are you?" and so you are in love, are you?" and so I shall not say I am not," quoth the honest fellow such become must not think of these things just at the present, when we are all about to become soldiers, and scour the country with pike and pistol. I see you are acquainted with our general, and I doubt not will be up and fighting with the best of us. Is it long since you joined our party?"

Gustavas Vasal they have made such an ado about; but I should guess him scarcely yet come to your years; thought on look hale and healthy, sir "

" Indeed, honest Gunnar, you honour me, I should suppose, much by your mistake; but I am no more than the poor Curate of Suverdsio."

"The Curate! Bless my heart! Oh, pardon, sir, my stupid blunders," said Gunnar, making an awkward leg, as he lifted his bonnet. If If you are that man I shall stay with you, and work for you, and fight for you, while I have an arm to lift; and all for your kindness to Katheriae Vere, my own sweet maiden."

"Oh, ho!" cried the Curate; "I and does the scent of the chase lie that way, Gunnar, Have you not heard that Katherine has lost her father?"

"Yes I have," answered Gunnar, swinging the large stick in his hand around his head with brawny strength; "and, had we come within arms length—the dastardly thieves, and this staff—I should have bid them defiance, glancing swords and all. Cowardly rascals! to murder a man whose hairs were grown white before their mothers suckled them."

Shameful, indeed," said the Curate, if and inworthy the name of men. Heaven grant, for the sake of humanity, that, as they have dealt to others, they be not yet dealt with."

"Never mind, sir; it is over now, but we will make them smart for it yet, I'll warrant us. They think they have us as the cat has the mouse; but oh ho—wait a little—wait a little; the general has got a list from my master last night, which will make his blood flow joyfully."

"Indeed," said the Curate, pleased at the simple loquacity of Gunnar. "Where come they from?"

"From the four quarters of the wind," was the reply. "But you have been at the Fair of Mora?" added Gunnar.

" Many times," said the Curate.

"And forget ye," answered Gunnar, "that of all days of the year this chances to be the one on which it is held. He has but to appear and blow his bugle-horn in the crowd; and the great mob there shall be changed in a twinkling from traffickers into soldiers; and the staves be thrown from the hands to be exchanged for swords hidden under the doublets."

"Wo, we unto the Danes," said the Curate, imbibing a portion of the honest fellows enthusiasm, "when the flag of our defiance curls in the breeze!"

" Thou hast said it, my master; but hark ye."

"What is it that stirs you so much, friend Gunnar?"

"Why, who can think of what will be shortly going on, sir, without feeling the blood tingling in his veins," said the peasant, grasping his cudgel. "Rare shall be the work; it is scarcely fair leaving me here only to hear of it. That is the reason why the Count and our master spur on so gallantly. Guess ye whom they expect to meet there?"

"Probably," answered the Curate, " to meet the friends who, you have just said, have pledged themselves to take up arms." You have guessed aright, replied Gunnar, but only in part, master. Hollo, hollo, cried he dancing and skipping about, when the bell tells twelve, then then then the blast will be blown, and the pass-word given, that will bring a thousand swords from their scabbards, and make the frightened Danes scull from the streets like the hare, when the greyhound yells at her heels. And who think ye is to blow the blast?—and who think ye is to blow the blast?—and who think ye is to give the pass-word? My master? No no no The blood of a hero warms his heart—the blood of kings runs in his veins;—it is the nephew of the Administrator,—it is the grandson of King Canutson,—it is Gustavus Vasa.

overjoyed as Guinar partothen we shall play the game manfilly. Can it be possible, added he, laying his hand a moment on the peasant's arm, in surprise and pleasure—" or are you jesting with me? and lim tank to shall may only you.

der of old Magnus, and judge if jesting would suit such a subject. No! It is as true as that sun is now shining,—as these clouds are now sailing over us,—as that stream is now flowing,—and as the God, who must judge all, is just. The supplier of the control of selves to take up arms."

The rising at Mora, a populous parish of the mountain district of Dalecarlia took place, according to

the Chronicles of Sweden, in the year fifteen hundred and twenty. It was there that the first signal of that revolution was made, which, after a glorious struggle, terminated in the restoration of the Swedish people to their ancestral independence.

At this era, Gustavus Vasa—the Wallace of Sweden—was a young man in the thirtieth year of his age; but he had already seen much service in the profession of arms, both at home and abroad, having advanced himself by his heroic conduct, more especially at the battle of the castle of Wedel, to the rank of general of horse; disdaining, like others of the young nobles, to nurse himself on the lap of indulgence, or give himself up to the syren sway of luxurious pleasure. As already mentioned, his family was among the most ancient and exalted in the country, having descended from blood-royal, and being hereditary Great Standard-bearers of the kingdom.

It would appear that, at very tender years, he exhibited signs of that masculine genius which afterwards so greatly distinguished him; for he was sent over by his father, Eric Vasa, the Governor of Finland, to the care of his uncle, the Administrator, with particular instructions regarding his studies at the University of Upsal, whither he was sent.

It is not our purpose here—indeed it would be quite foreign to the elucidation of our little tale to say more of him, than that, after the massacre of Stockholm, in which his father perished, together with many of his friends, he vowed the vow of attempting the rescue of Sweden from foreign oppression, and, if possible, breaking at once the bonds of civil and religious tyranny. But the craftiness of political guilt smelt ont the danger, even when afar loff; for the fame of his early provess had already reached the ears of Christiern, who not only entered his name in the list of the proscribed, but set a price on his head.

We can merely glance at a few of the romantic exploits through which this act of tyranny compelled him to pass. In the disguise of a peasant he fled from the scene of devastation, accompanied by a single attendant, who, after robbing him of almost every thing, absconded, and was no more heard of; while Christiern, finding that his prey had eluded him, seized on the mother and sister of Gustavus, and carrying them away by sea, had them thrown into a Danish prison.

Notwithstanding the strong family affection of Gustavus, even the threatened destruction of those dearest to his heart did not induce him to surrender himself; and he allowed his actions to be governed by the principles of public duty. Having wandered over the whole country of Sudermania, he passed between Westmania and Nericia, encountering fatigues, and undergoing privations, under which a less fervid enthusiasm must have cooled, and a less robust frame sunk; until, reaching the safer mountains of Dalecarlia, he sheltered in that district of the province which is called Daalfield. After wandering about for some time in poverty and wretchedness, with discomfitedhopes, and a wearing out frame. living on the chance bounty of nature, and sleeping on the green turf under the forest trees, he was at length driven to shew himself among men, and ventured to hire himself as a labourer in the mines; where he lay buried under ground, working for a pitiful subsistence. But even here he was not secure; nor was the wretchedness of his condition able to conceal his real estate; for the old woman at whose hovel he lodged, finding the fragment of a silken gold-embroidered robe among his clothes, carried it to the lord of the land, who chancing to have been educated at the university of Upsal along with him, recognised the nephew of the Administrator of the kingdom even in his rags. Hot or mid had more

Such, however, was the fascination of Gustayus, and the power of his enthusiasm in the cause of religion and liberty, that instead of being delivered up, he induced his discoverer to enter into his schemes, and was offered the accommodation of his princely mansion. His proselyte engaged to raise his kindred, who were many and powerful, whenever opportunity occurred, against the tyranny of Denmark; but he appears to have been one of "the infirm of purpose;" for he shortly became terror-struck at the designs he had agreed to adopt; and, when prospects of active warfare opened up, his "heart of hare" died within him, and he slunk away like a timid ermine to the security of his hiding-place.

To the dishonour of Sweden but too many were found of like temper;—but not so was Gustavus. Disdaining to owe protection to such a dastardly knave, he set out alone, and at midnight, through the woods to the abode of Arnold Peterson, an officer whom he had known in the army, and who had made him the most unbounded professions of friendship. Peterson received him as he expected—entered instantly into his plans—and told him that he had been only waiting a signal to raise up his adherents in arms; but, like the heathen deity Janus, he was double-faced; and, while he was exhibiting the outward shew of a Pythias, his treacherous heart prompted him to follow in the footsteps of Judas.

Having calmed the unsuspecting heroic mind of Gustavus, by representing that every thing was in proper training, he went straight to one of the military rulers of the Danish tyrant, and informed him that he had caged the long-sought for wild bird of the woods—that he had the fugitive under his own roof! But the pity, the gentle sympathy of woman's heart preserved him from destruction; for even at the moment Peterson was leading a band of armed horsemen to surround his dwelling, and cut off every avenue of escape, his wife Meretta, seized, according to some, with a sudden passion for her handsome guest, or instigated, according to others, solely by commiseration with his misfortunes, warned him of his danger, and despatched a trusty servant with him through the woods, till he was safe from the search, and beyond the pursuit of his enemies.

From his escape from the treachery of Peterson, till the period where our tale again takes him up at the Fair of Mora, among the Dalecarlian hills, his adventures had been involved in obscurity; so we shall proceed in the thread of our little narrative, which required this brief elucidation, as it involves events connected with that revolution which was afterwards effected.

At the fair of Mora, where he appears to have been joined by Count Eric Voss, and many other persons of note, he succeeded effectually in exciting into action the dormant patriotism of his native land; and scarcely had he raised the standard of insurrection, when he found himself at the head of a considerable force, whose enthusiasm in the cause of independence, and hatred against the Danish oppression, he did not allow to cool by inaction, but led them against the castle of the foreign governor, which he took by storm. Success augmenting his army—which he strove to discipline—he proceeded indepetuously on in his career; and being joined by Olaticaurence Erici, Fredage, and Jonas de Nederby.

gentlemen who had been outlawed by Christiern, he fearlessly offered battle to the army of the Viceroy, who wisely declined it, and invested the town of Westeras, which he forced to capitulate.

Many of the recreant nobility, stimulated by his successes to a sense of duty, rose up in different parts of the country; so that, by ramifying his designs, Gustavus was enabled to carry on several different enterprises at the same time; while, almost without giving his enemies time to recover from their panic, he traversed, with amazing celerity, the provinces of Helsingland, Medelpadia, Angermania, Gestricia, and Bothnia, causing them all to revolt; while, securing the mountain passes against the march of the Danes, and portioning out his army among proper officers, he caused Arwide to over-run Ostrogothland, and made Laurence Petri besiege the town of Nincoping; Olaus Bond investing the capital of Nericia, and Olai and Erici, the city of Upsal on both sides.

In an inconceivably short time, he found himself master of one-half of Sweden, so powerfully had his enthusiasm, and the terror of his prowess co-operated to discomfit the Danes. But, with the exasperated passions of disappointed ambition, Christiern, like a true savage, caused the mother and sister of the patriot, whom he had carried away into captivity, in contempt of all laws human and divine, to be wrapped up in sacks, and thrown into the sea.

The young hero was for a while soul-struck and overcome with the affliction of this terrible catastrophe; but, re-mustering those energies which the barbarian cruelty of Christiern was no doubt intended to paralyse, he soon shewed that it had awakened a totally different feeling in his bosom; for, actuated by a spirit of righteous retaliation, he issued a proclamation, commanding all the Danes, wherever they could be found, to be put to the sword without mercy-a proceeding against which his calmer mind might indeed well revolt, but one which the urgency of circumstances in a manner rendered necessary. That he was right in his calculation speedily shewed itself; for not only had it the effect of dismaying his opponents, but it also elevated the spirits of his adherents in a corresponding ratio—as it evinced the absence of all fear about being ever compelled to submit to terms, and shewed that he held in contempt both the friendship and the opposition of those who had so long ruled Sweden with a rod of iron,

Amid the tempest of these commotions, it so happened, that while sunshine was dispelling the night of slavery, the glorious doctrines of the immortal Luther spring up conquering and to conquer the gloomy, debasing, and detestable superstition of the Roman Church. Among those who, in Sweden, were most forward in advancing the tenets of the Christian faith, pure, holy, and undefiled, and in tearing away the bandage from the eyes of the toolong-blinded multitude, were two brothers, Laurence and Olaus Petri, the former one of the bravest among the generals of Gustavus, the latter the Canon of Stregnez, a man of parts and eloquence, combining the accomplishments of the scholar with the fearlessness of the soldier. With indignation Gustavus himself had long beheld the paltry arts and subterfuges which were taken to boodwink the understandings of the people, and only waited a favourable opportunity for trampling on the supremacy of the Pope, and professing the Protestant religion. To his regret, however, matters were not found ripe enough, till after the lapse of several years, for an open declaration of his espousal of the reformation of Luther; but whenever state policy rendered this step safe, he at once exhibited his sincerity by an unshrinking public avowal.

In vain did the Viceroy and the Danish leaders gain any temporary advantage over him, for his checks seemed to be complete but for the moment; and, like the fabled giant, whose strength was renewed every time he touched the ground, his efforts appeared always more vigorous and fearful after any casual disaster. At length, having succeeded triumphantly in ascending the hill of his difficulties, and gaining that pinnacle where the sun of glory shone cloudlessly above his head, he felt that the bonds of Danish thraldom might be soon irretrievably broken asunder, and that Christiern might, instead of being the pursuer, become the pursued. The undisciplined peasantry he had trained into a formidable body. Causing them to lay aside the customary use of the cross-bow, he exercised them in the employment of fire-arms, so that they were in a short time little inferior to the most veteran troops of Europe. By many wise and salutary regulations, order was restored to a realm which had long groaned under the turbulence of faction; and the commerce, which onpression had so powerfully tended to annihilate, rapidly began to revive under more favourable auspicess From the most abject degradation, the unconquerable heroism, and sage legislation of Gustavus, had raised his native land to its ancient dignity and freedom. He had settled it in peace, in security, and power; and freed it from all invaders. Nor is it at all to be wondered at, when we consider the misery Sweden had suffered under viceroys, usurpers, archbishops, and military commandants, that the voice of the people, as the only fit monument of national gratitude, should have placed the sceptre in that hand which had wielded the sword so successfully for them, and so gloriously for itself. ... and an

Having now, on the historical chart, looked sufficiently before and after us to render our narrative perspicuous, we shall again go back to our story; leaving affairs of state to those that were engaged in country at this positions and the conviousness of them, and return once more to the village of Suverdsio, and our old friend the Curate.

Sharp were the winds and piercing, and the clouds showered snows over the fading hills, when Count Eric Voss, and his trusty attendant Regner Beron, hastened from the cottages of Suverdsio, to join Gustavus at the first great insurrection, which was appointed for the Fair of Mora :- and now the tints of autumn were again pervading the woods, the acorn fell from the oak, the pine tree began to drop its leaves, and the fir shook down its dark cones upon the moist turf; while the skies waned like the lower world, and amid the shortening days, the shorn grain disappeared from the plains into the granary of the farmer. It was in this season of melancholy fruitfulness, that the Curate, while amusing a vacant afternoon in pruning some creeping acacias that greened over the front of his secluded dwelling, paused to behold a company of horsemen, whose arms glittered in the flood of mellow sunlight, approaching on the steep road which formed the southern approach; some riding before, and some behind a caleche, or little carriage, drawn by four horses .--In the multitude of his thoughts within him, his mind could not otherwise feel than somewhat perplexed at the unexpected unfolding of a spectacle so uncommon among his old, native hills; and, when we consider the irritated and unsettled state of the country at this juncture, and the consciousness of the Curate that his actions might be tortured to his ruin, the momentary qualm which came over bim will not form a ninth wonder of the world. Of battles fought, and battles won, much had he heard; but, from the conflicting state of party opinion, little worthy of reliance, in those days when newspapers were not, could be gleaned from any quarter. So though he still inclined to hope, in the absence of all positive information, that success was still attendant on the patriotic efforts, yet his nerves received a shock, when, on the nearer approach of the cavalcade, he perceived that the soldiers were in light green uniform, and wore in their caps the badge of King Christiern, He immediately supposed, on second thoughts, that the vehicle was the travelling conveyance of some of the Danish nobility; and that they were probably attempting their escape from Sweden, under the protection of an armed band; but his dismay was renewed, when, on the carriage halting at his gate, he observed that it was quite empty. The leader of the party, dismounting from his horse, first assured himself that he addressed the Curate of Suverdsio, and then informed him that he had orders for carrying away him and his daughter as prisoners; while he acknowledged that he had positive commands to treat both with every leniency, which interfered not with their chance of escape, britison goied to you, being positively escape,

"What may I have done," asked the Curate,

"to bring upon me the so much marked attention of your government? Can I be informed, sir?"

"Oh," replied the commandant, " as to that, it is not my province to inquire. The soldier does the bidding of his sovereign; and the civil laws of the kingdom take cognizance of right and wrong. That is a subject on which it is not my duty, neither have I ability to enter."

"Well, since it is so," said the Curate, "let the righteons will of heaven be done!—For myself I care little—comparatively nothing. What I have said, I have said as conscience, the oracle of the soul, dictated;—what I have done, I have done as my strict duty to God and my fellow-creatures dictated. But my daughter—oh, my daughter!—let not what she knew nothing of—knows nothing of—bring down a punishment she deserves not. Take me—take me! I am ready—willing to go with you; but, as you have wives, as you have daughters, spare her—and let her remain behind!—Whither am I to be carried?"

"Our orders command your being carried to the Castle of Westeras, the palace of the Viceroy; where a Council of State sit, giving trial, and awarding just sentences to such as have rebelled against the just government, or despised the edicts of the King. In this thing, it causes me regret that I may not attend to you, being positively enjoined to bring your daughter along with you, and with all due speed, to the appointed place of examination; the court being about to remove, for a like purpose, to a more remote part of the country."

"Are your orders then so positive?" asked the

"Are your orders then so positive?" asked the Curate, sorrowfully.

"Imperative,—and I trust you will immediately see the duty of submitting voluntarily, and without hesitation, knowing that resistance would be madness, and that escape is out of the question."

Well then, I submit freely," said the Curate, fervently clasping his palms for a moment together, and looking upwards to the place whence comes the aid of the righteous. "You observe my anxiety," he said; "but take it not for the anxiety of fear. I have done only what I would do over again; and, fearing One above, I have no human fear. But as you are a man, oh, spare my daughter! I am a child when the dream of her misery comes across me; and when I think that, in my supposed guilt, the perfectly guiltless may suffer. What I have done pertains to me alone, she hath aided not or aided only in ignorance, in submission to a parent's authority. I am ready and willing to answer for my conduct; but load me not with crime in involving her in danger; and if guilt can be imputed to me in aught I have done, let not its weight fall upon one who is innocent as the babe unborn !" when I have

By this time, Margaret, at first surprised at the unwonted approach of such a cavalcade, had her surprise changed into terror at perceiving the Danish uniform. She beheld, from the window, the expostulating attitudes of her father; and, on coming to the threshold, she heard the broken and elevated tones of his voice.

At once the whole truth flashed upon her soul; and, rushing forward, she threw her arms around his beloved neck. "He must not go," she cried. "Oh, no, you shall not take him from me!—I know—yes, yes, I know well what you have done to others, and would do to him!" she screamed in an agony of affection and fear;—"but where my father goes, nothing shall hinder my going also; and whatever his fate is, so shall be mine;—that surely you will not refuse—that, if you are men, you surely dare not refuse; else the evil spirits that are said to infest the world, have not ascribed to them actions of more unsparing cruelty!"

"My sweet young lady," said the commandant, in as soothing a tone as his military habits could be supposed to assume, "do compose yourself. You shall go with your father as you desire; and I pledge my honour on this sword, that, while you are in my keeping, no harm shall be allowed to happen either."

Upon entering into the house, at the request of the Curate, while preparations were made, as could best be made, for their immediate journey, the commandant explained at length the imperative orders he had received to bring both father and daughter along with him; begging of him not to repeat requests that his public duty left him not at liberty to comply with, however repugnant that duty might be to his private feelings.

With heavy hearts, although nerved with the fortitude which only conscious virtue can bestow, the Curate and his daughter in a short time declared themselves in readiness to accompany their captors; while Katherine Vere, a girl in the beauty of eighteen, scarcely less fair than her fair mistress, wiping her eyes with her white apron, and weeping half aloud, saw the hearth, by which she had often sat singing in joy, extinguished, and the doors of hospitality locked, making, what had once been a home of cheerful peace, the house of desolation.

At the door of the vehicle her master shook hands with her cordially, bidding Heaven bless and protect her; and Margaret, as she leant forward to give her a parting kiss, said, in a voice whose tremulous accents belied her smiles, "Keep a cheerful heart, Katherine, we will be back to you ere long."

The cavalcade immediately proceeded, Katherine following it greedily with her eyes, now and then looking back at the deserted vicarage, and again forward at the rapidly disappearing horsemen, as, solitary and sighing, she sauntered homewards to the cottage of her widowed mother. In her hand she carried a cage, containing the linnet which had, with its clear.

shrill, happy pipe, so often enlivened the tasks of her young mistress; gazing at every tree and rock as she passed along, as if fate had forewarned her that she was never to traverse the same road again. Having gained a height, from which the view of the downward country was distinct and extensive, she sat down on a fragment of rock, and watched for a long time the horsemen and the carriage, as they gradually disappeared, lessening on the sight; now losing themselves amid the sylvan scenery, and now for a while exposed again to view by a casual elevation, or a winding of the road.

The sun, looking down from his azure pavilion, tinged the fleecy clouds, that seemed only to linger in the ether from the delight of being kissed by the effulgence of his purple glory, and scattered a boundless flush of mellow irradiation over the splendid scenery of the mountainous district. The decaving tints of the illimitable forests, clothing the steep hills even to their rugged precipices-the mournful murmurs of the swoln streamlets-the solitary whirr of the startled wild bird-and the seeding plants by the way-side, served to embalm with a pleasing sweetness the melancholy of her thoughts-for melancholy indeed were the thoughts that haunted and hung over her. She had seen the home, wherein she had spent years of happy days, shuttered and locked up, and the benefactors who had watched over, protected her, and loved her as one of their own kindred, dragged away by enemies, who had hitherto shewn no remorse for their atrocities,-evincing neither sympathy for the weak, nor pity for the fair,-to captivity assuredly, and in all probability to immediate trial and condemnation. Oh, lonely was the lot of Katherine; and amid the scenes of loneliness, the desolation of her situation fell with a gloomier shadow over her heart. Like the declining sun, her prospects had suffered a sorrowful eclipse; and, as she journeyed with pensive steps across the hill-side to the cottage of her mother, the night-hawk, wheeling with ominous wing through the dusky twilight, uttered its quick, wild, unearthly cry; and the dash of the waterfall, echoing through the forest silence, spake of despondency, and desertion, and solitude.

But who is that watching his mountain-flock?—Is it some timerous wanderer of the hills—some marked victim of the Dane? Hah, 'tis Gunnar!—'tis our old chum Gunnar himself—large as life, and overflowing to the lips with joy at the sudden apparition of his Dulcinea del Suverdsio. But we must allow them to walk home together; and leave sorrow to its best and sweetest alleviation—the commingling of affectionate hearts.

After a journey of two days, during which every attention was paid to the wants and wishes of the Curate and his daughter consistent with their security, the commandant arrived with his charge at the hamlet of Waddersteine, about half-a-mile from the Castle of Westeras, where the Danish assembly were then sitting.

To his inquiries during their route, the commandant ventured to give the Curate only scanty glimpses into the state of affairs; but this much he could learn, that several battles had been fought with various success: that several towns had fallen into the hands of the Swedish revolutionists; and that Stockholm, the capital of the country, still held out for the Dane. Scarcely could these reports be inspiriting to our friend the Curate; for, previous to the fatal day on which he had fallen into the hands of his enemies, his enthusiasm had caused him to lend too ready an ear to the rumours, that the sword of Gustavus was like a sun-burst, which flashed over the land, chasing before it the gloom of superstition, and the night of slavery. What a miserable shock had his expectations received, in finding the arm of the Dane still sufficient to reach him in his remote and sequestered mountain home! Yet, grieving as he did for the misfortunes he had brought on a loving and beloved daughter, he did not allow selfishness entirely to swallow up and annihilate the interest he had taken in the fortunes of his native country. His hopes in her behalf, appeared indeed blasted and desolate. -- some sudden reverse, previously altogether unsuspected by him, appeared at once to have trampled down the patriotic insurgents to the dust; and the light, which had commenced to dawn so gloriously over hill and dale, had set in a night of clouds, without any twilight forewarning

It was now evening—and the commandant, who, in the afternoon, had left his charge under sufficient guard, returned to escort the captive mountaineers to the great assembly, already meeting or met for their trial. To the interrogatories of the Curate, he returned no satisfactory answer, re-mentioning his injunctions of secrecy; but he ventured to express the hope, that things might yet turn out more favourably than was anticipated.

When the father, dressed out in his best sables, and the daughter in a white robe as pure as her innocent heart, lingered a moment at the door for the drawing up of the carriage, far borne through the silence of evening, came, like a sepulchral voice, the toll of the great bell, summoning them forward to the hall of trial.

Halting by an immense arched gateway, they passed through the vestibule of a building, whose quadrangular turrets seemed to support the weight of the lowering sky. Neither of the two had ever known more of the palaces of the great than what the apocryphal testimony of books had conveyed to them, so that on being ushered by folding doors, of a sudden, into the very heart of the hall of assembly, it was no wonder their eyes were dazzled, and their hearts died within them. The stupendous vaulted roofs, covered with grotesque paintings, and an infinitude of stuccoed imagery, the tall gothic diced windows with their magnificent traceries, the walls groaning under their load of gorgeously embroidered tapestry of Arras, the curiously carved benches, the velvet cushions, the marble floors, and the flaming cressets that depended from on high by silken cords, struck on their bewildered imaginations like the visions of some fancifully distempered dream, as for a little they felt themselves as it were in the enchanted habitations of the eastern genii, of whom romancers had written :- and it was some time before they perceived, or at least regarded before them the large assembly of nobles and leaders, some in their rich costly robes, and others in coats of glittering drawing up of the entropy for house in armour.

With the greensward under his feet, the rocks scowling, the trees flourishing, and the mountain winds whistling around him, the Curate could think like a man, and feel as a patriot; but in the midst of such a dazzling assemblage, his spirit drooped, like a caged bird, and he dwindled away in the overwhelming consciousness of his own insignificance. Conviction might, or might not follow; but he had reckoned on at least making a defence which should neither be derogatory to his character as a Swede, nor his faith as a Christian. When put to the trial, however, he now felt that he might as well be at once led out to death, as to attempt in such a scene any defence of his conduct. As the stars in their beauty look as if they could brave the daylight, yet are swallowed up on the uprise of the effulgent sun, so his many noble emotions, the vigorous arguments, which his reason had suggested, the open manifestation of virtue, which he was sure his conduct must display, even to the eyes of his traducers—all, all vanished before the talisman of magnificence; and he gave up every thing for lost; but, at that desponding moment, he was startled by the touch of something from behind; and, turning his head half round, he discovered Margaret, who gathering hold of the skirt of his coat, had shrunk to his back, and with a blood-forsaken cheek. pale as the white lily of April, seemed ready to sink down on the floor. Then, as by force of magic, " the bowstring of his spirit" regained its elasticity, and the free blood of undaunted manhood came gushing back into his veins ;- for nature is superior to art, and the strength of paternal affection deeper rooted in the soul than awe for power, or bedazzling pageantry. He beheld the being more dear to him, for her own sake, and for her mother's, than all other breathing things, clinging to him in the hour of tempest as the ivy clings to the oak, and the strong sense of the duty he owed himself and her came to his support. The last to the salt mont

When he had reached the area in front of the judges, one from the centre stood up and addressed him, saying—" Are you the Curate of Suverdsio?"—and, in a firm voice, he replied, " I trust, my lord, I have done nothing to make me ashamed to say I am."

Margaret was now offered a chair, by the side of her father; and the interest that her youth and beauty had excited in the court was visible on every countenance; but also justice is blind, and the scales are allowed not to be freighted with the load of pity.

"We shall see that immediately," said the spokesman of the assembly, in reference to the Curate's answer. "Meanwhile let me ask you this simple question—Do you confess, or do you not, having harboured sundry of the rebellious subjects of King Christiern, when your allegiance bound you to deliver them up to justice, knowing them to be outlawed for their rebellion against his supreme authority, or for their personal crimes?"

"That I have given shelter to my countrymen, when travelling among the hills they required rest and refreshment, I do not deny—even to this time backwards for the last thirty years have I done so. If my word is gainsayed, let the traveller, that hath been refused admittance at my gate, be brought forward to testify against me. Had I withdrawn from the call of the wayfarer in these troublous latter days, I might, I confess readily have been enabled to repose on my pillow in greater security; but strong was the voice of nature within me; and the duties of that religion, which it is my glory to profess, compelled me to feed the hungry, and to clothe the naked."

asked the president.

"Before I answer that question," said the Curate, seeing the dangerous turn that things were about to take. " methinks it were more consonant with the established law of nations to produce my accuser. You cannot surely wish to extort confessions which may ruin me, from my own lips.-But before we proceed farther, my lords, let me implore you to send back this girl, who is my only daughter, to her native hills. It must have been through error, that she has been summoned here, she being a simple maiden, who knows nothing of the ways of the great world, and who has had no other object or delight in life, than in rendering my declining years comfortable, or in visiting the orphan and the widow in their afflictions. If your hearts allow you to listen to the prayers of a distressed fellow mortal, send her home; put her out of this danger, for she is blameless; -and whether accused or without accuser I will freely tell all, wherever my confessions may lead me; though it be from this hall to the scaffold !" odiraent of dematta ton Harla

No father," cried Margaret, springing from her seat, her recollections seeming to come back at the allusions to her own situation; "I must not—dare not—shall not leave you. Shall it be said of me, that I fled from my father in the hour of distress. Shall the finger of scorn be pointed at me! Shall the good mock me and say, 'behold the woman that has a heart of rock!'—No—no—father 'tis in vain. Whatever you are doomed to suffer, none on earth shall prevent my sharing!"

"Hush—hush, silly girl" said the distracted father, stemming the torrent of her affectionate eloquence, "Speak not in that rash manner—you know not what you are saying." Then, turning to the court, he continued more aloud,—"Justice, my lords, denies that you have the power of extorting confessions from me; especially when confessions of any sort may be tortured into treason, and may end in the spilling of my blood. I stand before you ready to abide your doom; let him then, who hath ought to say against me be brought before me, face to face."

"Assuredly," replied the judge; "your request is most reasonable, and can be momentarily complied with." Then striking his rod on a large bell, which hung suspended from the ceiling, he ordered to be summoned into presence "the Count Regner Beron."

The Curate looked as if he had heard the knell of doon rung in his ears; and Margaret—but we shall not attempt to describe her sensations.

"Regner Beron!" at length cried the Curate, starting back pale and faltering. The same syllables died on the lips of Margaret. The cloud of despair settled down upon them and you trade and a la A side door being opened by the attendant officers. a person in a rich dress, proceeded forward to the end of the council table, confronting that where the Curate and his daughter stood; while, as surely as the sun sheds the light of day, they perceived that it was no other than Regner Beron, and the Manual _ "For a moment halt," cried the Curate, recovering himself, and calling in the whole vigour of his soul to brave a fate, which he now saw unavoidable. "For a moment halt, and allow not that man to bow down his soul with a greater load of perdition. Regner | attend tome. I know thee once poor the sole relic of an honourable house, -and I hear thee this night addressed by the title of count. Better had it been for thee, to have been earning thy bread by the sweat of thy brow, like the lowest miner on our native Dalecarlian hills, than to stand in this assembly, arrayed in purple and fine; linen, as the

"Halt, halt," said the judge; "know ye not that you are speaking treason?" out any married of Perhaps I may, replied the Curate, dauntlessly, "perhaps it may sound so to the cars of men; but before heaven I am speaking truth!" may and "He asks not gold," said the judge; "but we doned memphi educating guixool no estique sid or betrayer of thy country oper han deald to statew have promised him your daughter as a reward for

" My daughter! my pure child Margaret, to become the mate of a perjured renegade! the earth would sicken at such an union. In the nature of things it is monstrous, it is impossible! and heaven with its lightnings would either strike dead the offerer of such profane violence, or summon from a world of sin and wo the spirit of its own, against which the powers of evil expected to triumph !-Ah, Regner, Regner, dare lift up your eyes and look on me. Happier had it been for thee, both in this world and that which is to come, hadst thou contented thyself with thy sequestered home, and continged a hunter of the roebuck on the hills. Thou hast bartered thy peace for gold, thy conscience for a jewelled robe; but think on thy injured country and tremble; remember Judas, and look to thy latter end. Remorse shall haunt thee as a spectre; and the array of thine evil deeds pass before thy visions of the night, rendering existence bitter as the waters of Marah, and recollection the forments of those who have gone down to the pit ?"

So fervent was the Curate in his admonitions to Beron, and so absorbed in his subject, that for a little the court seemed to vanish from his eyes; and, looking round to sooth his fainting child, he was about to re-commence his address to the assembly, when, to his surprise, on looking up to the judgment bench, he observed the chair of the president empty. A few seconds after he however resumed his seat, having put on the black silk robe in which it is customary to pass sentence (72) 2200 Ja remain a mile 200 220 Ja

"It is needless," said the president, rising to address the Assembly, mto waste the time of this court by a further examination of the case before us: The witnesses have already given their evidence before you; and, so convincing are the proofs, that you perceive the reverend gentleman has not a single word to say in his own defence. From his own lips indeed he is condemned, as you have this hight heard him utter treasons, and pronounce the lawful evidence of the witnesses against him a betraval of his infatuated country. You have heard how he has been in open rebellion against King Christiern, in word and deed, having openly preached insubording ation, and having aided and abetted in the escape of outlaws, whom it behoved him to deliver up to justice. More especially, my lords, it becomes us to remember, that he harboured under his roof that arch-rebel the Count Eric Voss, and was the principal means of his not falling into the hands of his pursuers, when a price was set upon his head, and when, so strong was the scent of his track, that he could not otherwise have escaped. Recollect, inv lords, that, had his capture at that moment been effected, the bloodshed of this awful rebellion might e probably been averted. I mode zen ud vroein of these facts, and more especially of the latter, there can be no doubt, as the Count's then Esquire, Regner Beron, hath this day borne testimony before us, in a manner at once explicit and incono It is needless," said the president, risiditrayort Of his daughter, the young lady now before you, it hath also been clearly proved, that she aided and abetted her father in the same course of treasonable proceeding, by carrying food and other necessaries to the church, wherein the said Count lay conword to say in his own defence. From his ordelses But not only my lords, has the Curate been convicted of treason against the state, but he has trampled under foot the authority of Mother Church, by open landations and commendations of the conduct of Luther the German heretic, whose damnable tenets he hath exhibited a strong frowardness to ation, and having mided and abetted in the escateobs As there can be no division of opinion on such a case, I shall now, my lords, proceed to decree judgment in your name, "maland od Jady rodmemer After whispering for a few seconds with the nobles more immediately around him, and gathering, as it were, their various opinions on the sentence to be pronounced, he advanced to the centre of the ball, where the Curate and his daughter were now standing up, the one thoughtful, yet calmand resigned, as if he cared less for his own fate than the misery he was about to entail on her; the other pale and languidly beautiful, like a flower that has been vainly contending with the strong wing of the tempest, her bright black eyes cast despondingly on the floor, her hands clasped together and hanging down before her, her bosom heaving slowly and oppressedly, as if a cumbrous load weighed upon her heart, and her lips apart, as if her spirit fainted for lack of free air.

"Curate of Suverdsio," said the judge, "out of respect to the memory of Count Eric Voss, that mistaken nobleman who hath already reaped the harvest due to his crimes, I am commissioned by my brother judges to inform you, that the Count requested, in the event of your ever being taken, our asking the production of a gold button, which he gave you as a token of remembrance; and that, if you could shew it, we should deal more mercifully with you, for the sake of one who had seen the end of his folly. Rememberest thou aught of such a thing?"

"It is here—it is here!" cried Margaret, startled from her Niobe-like reverie, by this unexpected glimpse of sunshine breaking through the hitherto impenetrable cloud of her father's misfortunes; and producing from her breast a button, which she held up between her finger and thumb.

"Indeed!" said the judge, "this is an unexpected circumstance, and will go some way to alter the features of the business; but let me see if it be the real one," he added, throwing off his gown, and applying the button, which he had snatched from Margaret's hand, to a vacancy on the triple row which ornamented his own tunice and rook add to The Curate started back in astonishment. "It is he, it is he himself!" cried the daughter. "It is Count Eric Voss; it is the Count! Stand away, stand away, father; and let me throw myself at his feet!" and so saying, she rushed suddenly forward, and throwing herself down on the floor, seized hold of the under hem of his garment, and don no lutsim This must not cannot be," said the Count. "Come hither Beron; and, since you have had the audacity to appear this day as a witness against those who hospitably received us both, you must make atonement to the injured feelings of a father, by thus taking from me the hand of his much-loved child. Her heart is already pledged; and she dares not say me nay. Henceforth regard her as your own. The castle of Othorstone hath as yet no mistress,-let this day that deficiency be supplied."

"No, no," cried Margaret, springing to her feet, and half bewildered in the perplexity of her feelings.
"If he be not a true Swede, though he were the Emperor of Allemaine, he should be no husband of mine!"

and still holding by the hand she had but half withdrawn, we in this I fear you have but little choice, since the Administrator commands it."

The Administrator ! cried the Curate, still more and more perplexed.

The Administrator !" cried Margaret, her cheek blushing, and scarcely deigning to believe her ears, which tingled as if all the great bells of Moscow had I rejoice, at the same time, to infurals in gurr

Yes," said the Count Eric Voss, "in me you behold Gustavus Vasa. I came to your door, my worthy friends, hungry, and ye gave me food, naked, and ve warmed me, friendless and a fugitive, and ye visited me in my solitude." to nominol bearing

Pardon the whimsical way I have taken to shew my gratitude; but, believe me," he added, laving his hand on his heart. "that it is not the less sincere on that account. I could have adopted no other method of bringing you before the assembled representatives of Sweden, in whose presence I now profess my obligations to you; and thus, taking you by the hand, declare myself proud in calling the Curate of Suverdsio my friend: of seeninged bear bound band

"I have ventured to unite before you, the hands of a pair, whose hearts, I understand, have long been united. Do you proceed in cementing more securely, according to the laws of the Church, what I have done merely in outward form. Bear no scruple towards your intended son; for, believe me, if he is a the dectrines of eternal life,-and now, that a clearer renegade, it has merely been in deserting from the phalanx of oppression, to risk his blood under the standard of a few seemingly inefficient revolutionists. He has proved a true man and a brave; and scarcely hath the gratitude of his country deemed the title of Count a sufficient equivalent for his many and important services.

"I rejoice, at the same time, to inform you of a resolution not yet publicly promulgated. This honourable assembly, not resting content with merely emancipating our dear country from the manacles of civil bondage, have decreed its release from the tyrannical dominion of Rome; and ordain you, henceforward from this day, to preach the doctrines of the reformation."

We shall not attempt in words any description of the ecstasy of the honest Curate. The sincerity of his heart he had shewn in adversity, and the same was unchanged and unaltered in this his more prosperous hour. To all the pressing offers of dignity which Gustavus made, his only reply was, that he had found real happiness to consist in inward consciousness, and not in external parade; that he trusted he would not entice him away from the charge of his mountain flock,—with them he had been born and bred,—on him they looked as a father,—among them had glided away the happiness of his youthful days,—to them he had expounded the doctrines of eternal life,—and now, that a clearer light had been permitted to dawn in on their souls, he could find no earthly satisfaction equal to that of being permitted to communicate it to them.

Why lengthen our joyous tale? Suffice it to say, that preparations were made for a magnificent wedding; and that the whole court of Sweden were invited to behold the nuptials of the Curate's daughter, who had preserved the life of Gustavus Vasa,—and of Count Regner Beron, one of the best and bravest of his generals. The Curate pronounced his paternal blessing over them.

Need it be told, how, returning, honourably escorted, and basking in the sunshine of the Administrator's favour, the Curate became the most distinguished man in his native district; nor, unto this day, have the mountains of Dalecarlia beheld a Curate honoured like him of Suverdsio.

On reaching home, the Curate summoned Gunnar to receive from the Count a purse of gold, as a grateful testimonial of his remembered services. Gunnar, with an awkward scratch of his head, said that he would as lief have something else, which his master, after half a minute's cross-questioning, discovered to be the hand of Katherine. In the course of a few days he was enabled to render him the happiest man among the hills, by giving him both.

After these transactions, by which some tinge of romance was infused into the dull leaven of the occurrences of common life, the Curate had many useful years added to the span of his felicities, -- beholding his family honoured and flourishing around him, -his country independent, happy, and prosperous,-and the bright sunshine of the reformation. scattering from the face of the land the Cimmerian darkness of papal superstition and that bun ; with Generations have passed away-centuries have revolved since then, and our tale is but a leaf torn out from the bypast volume of human transactions, having for its moral, that " purity of life hath for its reward the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come." To attest its truth, the parish church of Suverdsio, among the Dalecarlian hills, yet bears on its top the large gilt copper crown, which was placed there by order of the Swedish senate; and its revered walls are still pointed out to the traveller as those within which Gustavus Vasa found an asylum from the pursuit of nar to receive from the Count a purse resimens sid.

grateful testimonial of his remembered arvices.

Gunnar, with an awkward serstel of his head said that he would as lief have something else, which his

Now, upon the honour of an elder of the kirk, and a member of the tailor incorporation, ye have the whole of the unknown gentleman's story, word for word, as it is set down in the papers found by me in the side-pocket of the grand velvet coat, hought from the auld-farrant Welsh flunky with the peaked hat and the pigtail. To say nothing of the man and his master, being now " down among the dead men," good right have I to print every thing I can find to make ends meet. But ve'll hear all or ormal In the Yankee almanack of Poor Richard, which I sometimes read, it is set down with great rationality, that if we should never buy for the bargain's sake." I found this to my cost in this matter; for, cheap as the coat and waistcoat seemed, I made no great shakes of them after all. After hanging at my window for two or three months, collecting all the idle wives and ragged weans of the parish to glowr and gaze at them from morn till night, during which time I got half of my lozens broken by their knocking one another's heads through, I was obliged to get quit of them at last, by selling them to a man and his son that kept dancing dogs, Pan's pipes, and a tembourine; and that made a livelihood by turnbling on a carpet in the middle of the street, the one playing as the other whummled head over heels.

Knowing that they were not for every body's wear, and that the like of them were not to be found in a country side, I put a decent price on them; "foreign birds with fair feathers" aye taking the top place of the market. When I mentioned forty shillings to the dancing-dog man and his son, they said nothing, but took up their hats, wishing me a good day; but, next forenoon, a slight-of-hand man having arrived, that was likely to take the shine out of them, and maybe purchase my article—which was capital for his purpose, having famous wide sleeves, they came back, asking the liberty of taking them home to their lodgings for ten minutes, to see how they would fit; and, in that case, offering me thirty shillings and an old flute. The old flute was for next to no use at all, except for wee Benjie, poor thing, too-tooing on, and I told them so, but would take their offer, not to quarrelling two out an quali-Home went the man, and home went the son, and home went my grand coat and waistcoat ever his arm; but where their home lay, or whether the class fitted or not, gudeness knows, -having never to this blessed day heard word or wittens of them. It just shows us how simple Scotch folk are. The Englisher swindled me out of my room-rent and my Sunday velveteens: the Eirishers made free with my hen-house, committing black robbery at the dead hour of night and here a decent-looking muld Welshman, with a pigtail, palmed a grand coat and waistcoat upon me, that were made away with by a man and his son, too long out of Botany-Bay Werily, verily, this is a wicked world transport foreign birds with fair feathers" ave taking the top place of the market. When I mentioned forty shillings to the dancing-dog man and his son, they said nothing, but took up their buts, wishing me a good day; but, next forenoon, a slight-of-hand man having arrived, that was libely to take the shine out of them, and nigylio purchase my article-which was foreign lands, and to seek out hiding-places of safety beyond the waves of the sea. What was worst of all, our trouble seemed a smittal one; the infection spread around; and even our own land, which all thought hale and healthy, began to show symptoms of the placue-spot. Losh me ! that men, in their as so learned a CHAPTER XII. inflatuated. Johnny Wilkes and liberty was but a oniverd sheet VOLUNTEERING. and tale of said Come from the hills where your hirsels are grazing, doubt all Come from the glen of the buck and roo; staw allied Come to the crag where the beacon is blazing, jour James Come with the buckler, the lance, and the bow :

Many a banner spread -oz blad ale Flutters above your head, I am barmout guillan THO | Many a crest that is famous in story; Mount and make ready then, and besseld Sons of the mountain glen, Sons of the mountain gren,
Fight for the King, and our old Scottish glory.

Fight for the King, and our old Scottish glory.

anid trace addition Stat Walter Scott's Monastery.

session reside about one views both behavile and as says of the land, at this time, like a great whirlwind; and the hearts of men died within their persons with fear and trembling. The accounts that came from abroad were just dreadful beyond all powen of description: Death stalked about from place to place, like a lawless tyrant, and the blood of men was spilt like water. The heads of growned kings were cut off; and great dukes and lords were thrown into dark dungeons, or obligated to fee for their lives into foreign lands, and to seek out hiding-places of safety beyond the waves of the sea. What was worst of all, our trouble seemed a smittal one; the infection spread around; and even our own land, which all thought hale and healthy, began to show symptoms of the plague-spot. Losh me! that men, in their seven senses, could have ever shown themselves so infatuated. Johnny Wilkes and liberty was but a joke to what was hanging over our heads, brewing like a dark tempest, which was to swallow us up. Bills were posted up through night, by hands that durst not have been seen at the work through day; and the agents of the Spirit of Darkness, calling themselves the friends of the people, held secret meetings, and hatched plots to blow up our blessed King and Constitution. In the land In

Yet the business, though fearsome in the main, was in some parts almost laughable. Every thing was to be divided, and every one made alike: houses and lands were to be distributed by lot; and the mighty man and the beggar—the auld man and the hobble-de-hoy—the industrious man and the spend-thrift—the maimed, the cripple, and the blind, made all just brethren, and alike. Save us! but to think of such havers!!—At one of their meetings, held at the sign of the Tappet-hen and the Tankard, there was a prime fight between Tammy Bowsie the snab, and auld Thrashem the dominic with the boulie-back, about their drawing cuts, which was to get Dalkeith Palace, and which Newbattle Abbey. Oh, sie riff raff !! Lourney with deformer sie take as to take

What was worst of all, it was an agreed and determined on thing among them, these wise men of the north, to abolish all kings, clergy, and religion, as havers. No, no—what need had such wise pows as theirs, of being taught or lectured to? What need had such feelosophers of having a King to rule over them, or a Parliament to direct them? There was not a single one among their number, that did not think himself, in his own conceit, as wise as Solomon, or William Pitt, and as mighty as King Nebuchadnezzar.

It was full time to put a stop to all such nonsense. The newspapers told us what it had done abroad; and what better could we expect from it at home? Weeds will not grow into flowers anywhere, and no man can handle tar without being defiled; the first of which comparisons is I daresay true, and the latter must be—for we read of it in Scripture. Well, as I was saying, it was a brave notion of the King to put the loyalty of his land to the test, that the daft folk might be dismayed, and that the clanjamphrey might be tumbled down before their betters, like windle-straes in a hurricane;—and so they were.

Such a crowd that day, when the names of the volunteers came to be taken down! No house could have held them, even though many had not come, who thought to have got their names enrolled. Losh me! did they think the government was so far gone, as to take creatures with deformed legs, and thrawn necks, and blind een, and hashie lips, and grey hairs on their pows? No, no, they were not put to such straits; though it showed that the right spirit was in them, and that, though their bodies might be deformed, they had consciences to direct them, and souls to be saved like their neighbours. done had been

I will never forget the first day that I got my regimentals on; and when I looked myself in the bit glass, just to think I was a sodger, who never in my life could thole the smell of powder, and had not fired anything but a penny cannon on a Fourth of June, when I was a haffins callant. I thought my throat would have been cut with the black corded stock : for, whenever I looked down, without thinking like, my chaft-blade played clark against it, with such a dunt that I mostly chacked my tongue off. And, as to the soaping of the hair, that beat cockfighting. It was really fearsome; but I could scarcely keep from laughing when I glee'd round over my shouther, and saw a long glazed leather queue hanging for half an ell down the braid of my back, and a pickle horse hair curling out like a rotten's tail at the far end of it. And then the worsted taissels on the shouthers and the lead buttons and the vellow facings,-oh, but it was grand! I sometimes fancied myself a general, and giving the word of command. Then the pipe-clayed breeks but that was a sore job; many a weary arm did they give

The pipe-claving of the breeches, I was saving, was the most fashious job, let alone courtship, that ever mortal man put his hand to. Indeed, there was no end to the rubbing, and scrubbing, and brushing, and fyling, and cleaning; for, to the like of me, who was not well accustomed to the thing, the whitening was continually coming off and destroying my red coat, or my black leggins. I had mostly forgot to speak of the birse for cleaning out the pan, and the piker for clearing the motion-hole. But time enough till we come to firing. Big Sam, who was a sergeant of the Fencibles, and enough to have put five Frenchmen to flight any day of the year, whiles came to train us; and a hard battle he had with more than me. I have already said, that nature never intended me for the soldiering trade; and why should I hesitate about confessing, that Sam never got me out of the awkward squad? But I had two or three neighbours to keep me in countenance. A weary work we made with the right, left, left, right, right, wheel, left-wheel, -to the right-about, -at ease, -attention, -by sections,-and all the rest of it. But then there is nothing in the course of nature that is useless; and what was to hinder me from acting as orderly, or being one of the camp-colour-men on head days ? We all cracked very crouse about fighting, when we heard of garments rolled in blood, only from abroad; but one dark night, we got a fleg in soher earnest.

Jo There were signal-posts on the hills, up and down all the country, to make alarms, in case of necessity; and I never went to my bed without giving first a glee eastward to Falside-brae, and then another westward to the Calton-hill, to see that all the country was quiet. / I had just papped in -it might be about nine o'clock -after being gay hard drilled, and sore between the shouthers, with keeping my head back, and playing the dumb-bells; when lo! and behold, instead of getting my needful rest, in my own bed, with my wife and wean, jew gaed the bell, and row-de-dow gaed the drums, and all, in a minute, was confusion and uproar. I was seized with a severe shaking of the knees, and a flaffing at the heart; but I hurried with my night-cap on up to the garret window, and there I too plainly saw that the French had landed-for all the signal-posts were in a bleeze. This was in reality to be a soldier! I never got such a fright since the day I was cleckit. Then such a noise and hullabaloo, in the streets-men, women, and weans, all hurrying through ither, and crying with loud voices, amid the dark, as if the day of judgment had come, to find us all unprepared; and still the bells ringing, and the drums beating to arms. Poor Nanse was in a bad condition, and I was well worse; she, at the fears of losing me, their bread winner; and I, with the grief of parting from her, the wife of my bosom, and going out to scenes of blood, bayonets, and gunpowder, none of which I had the least stomach for. Our little son, Benjie, mostly grat himself blind, pulling me back by the cartridge-box; but there was no contending with fate, so he was obliged at last to let go.

We all eracked very crouse about fighting, when

Notwithstanding all that, we behaved ourselves like true-blue Scotsmen, called forth to fight the battles of our country; and, if the French had come, as they did not come, they would have found that to their cost, as sure as my name is Mansie. However, it turned out as well, in the meantime, that it was, a false alarm, and that the thief Buonaparte had not landed at Dunbar, as it was jaloused : so, after standing under arms for half the night, with nineteen rounds of ball-cartridge in our boxes, and the baggage carts all loaden, and ready to follow us to the field of battle, we were sent home to our beds; and notwithstanding the awful state of alarm to which I had been put, never in the course of my life did I enjoy six hours sounder sleep; for we were hippet the morning parade, on account of our being kept so long without natural rest. It is wise to pick a lesson even out of our adversities; and, at all events, it was at this time fully shown to us he

green trees, as if I was never to see nature more.

necessity of our regiment being taught the art of firing—a tactic to the length of which they had never yet come.

Next day, out we were taken for the whilk purpose, and we went through our motions bravely. Prime food handle cartridge ramdown cartridge -return bayonets and shoulder hoop make ready -present-fire. Such was the confusion, and the flurry, and the din of the report, that I was so flustered and confused, that, will we believe it? I never yet had mind to pull the tricker. Howsom ever, I minded ave with the rest to ram down a fresh cartridge, at the word of command; and something told me I would repent not doing like the rest, (for I had half a kind of notion that my piece never went off :) so, when the firing was over, the sergeant of the company ordered all that had loaded pieces to come to the front. I swithered a little, not being very sure like what to do ; but some five or six stept out; and our corporal, on looking at my piece, ordered me with the rest to the front. It was just by all the world like an execution; us six, in the face of the regiment, in a little line, going through our manœuvres at the word of command; and I could hardly stand upon my feet, with a queer feeling of fear and trembling, till, at length, the terrible moment came. I looked straight forward-for I durst not jee my head about, and turned to the hills and green trees, as if I was never to see nature more.

Our pieces were cocked; and, at the word, off they went. It was an act of desperation to draw the tricker, and I had hardly well shut my eyes, when I got such a thump in the shoulder, as knocked me backwards head-over-heels on the grass. Before I came to my senses, I could have sworn I was in another world; but, when I opened my eyes, there were the men at ease, holding their sides, laughing like to spleet them; and my gun lying on the ground, two or three ell before me.

When I found myself not killed outright, I began to rise up. As I was rubbing my breek-knees, I saw one of the men going forward to lift up the fatal piece; and my care for the safety of others overcame the sense of my own peril,—"Let alane—let alane!" cried I to him, "and take care of yoursell, for it has to gang off five times yet."

The laughing was now terrible; but being little of a soldier, I thought in my innocence, that we should hear as many reports as I had crammed cartridges down her muzzle. This was a sore joke against me for a length of time; but I tholed it patiently, considering cannily within myself, that knowledge is only to be bought by experience. A fool once showed me the story afterwards in a jest-book, as if it was not true!!!

The friend of the books a service may and only section of another policy of the conservation conveyoff. I work a reason of the conservation of the Man hath a weary pilgrimage

Leader As through the world he wends:

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The days that are no more as a said to red

The da

Some folks having been bred up from their gradle to the writing of books, of course naturally do the thing regularly and scientifically, but that's not to be expected from the like of me, that have followed no other way of life than the shaping and sewing line. It behoves me, therefore, to beg pardon for not being able to carry my history, aye regularly straight forward, and for being forced whiles to zig-zag and vandyke. For instance, I clean forgot to give, in its proper place, a history of one of my travels with

Benjie in my bosom, in search of a cure for the chincough. II mie Dobbie louped up on the fore-trum-My son Benjie, was, at this 'dividual time, between four and five years old, when, poor wee chieldie! he took the chincough, and in more respects than one was not in a good way ; so the doctor recommended his mother and me, for the change of air, first to carry him down a coal-pit, and syne to the limekilns be let loose, as it were, for a wee amonobreleuo, ta The coal pit I could not think of at all; to say nothing of the danger of swinging down into the bowels of the earth in a creel, the thing ave put me in mind of the awful place, where the wicked, after death and judgment, howl, and hiss, and gnash their teeth; and where unless Heaven be more merciful than we are just we may all be soon enough. TSo Leould not think of that, till all other human means failed; and I determined, in the first place, to hire Tammy Dobie's cart, and try a smell of the fresh air Duncan's school were fresh in salisamid It was a fine July forenoon, and the cart, filled with clean straw, was at the door by eleven o'clock : so our wife handed us out a pair of blankets to hap round me, and syne little Benjie into my arms, with his big-coatie on, and his leather cappie tied below his chin, and a bit red worsted comforterie round his neck; for, though the sun was warm and pleasant withal, we dreaded cold, as the doctor bade us. Oh, he was a fine auld man Doctor Hartshorn ! sedione

We had not well got out of the town, when Tammie Dobbie louped up on the fore-tram. He was a crouse, cantie auld cock, having seen much and not little in his day, so he began a pleasant confab, pointing out all the gentlemen's houses round the country, and the names of the farms on the hill sides. To one like me, whose occupations tie him to the town-foot, it really is a sweet and grateful thing to be let loose, as it were, for a wee among the scenes of peace and quietness, where nature is in a way wild and wanton—where the clouds above our heads seem to sail along more grandly over the bosom of the sky, and the wee birds to cheep and churm, from the hedges among the fields, with greater pleasure, feeling that they are God's free creatures.

I cannot tell how many thoughts came over my mind, one after another, like the waves of the sea down on Musselburgh beach; but especially the days when I was a wee callant with a daidly at Dominie Duncan's school, were fresh in my mind as if the time had been but yesterday; though much, much was I changed since then, being at that time a little, careless, ragged laddie, and now the head of a family, earning bread to my wife and wean by the sweat of my brow. I thought on the blythe summer days when I dandered about the braes and bushes seeking birds'-nests with Alick Bowsie and Samuel Search; and of the time when we stood upon one another's backs, to speil up to the ripe cherries that hung over the garden walls of Woodburn. Awful changes had taken place since then! I had seen Sammy Search die of the black jaundice; and poor Alick Bowsie married to a drucken randie, that wore the breeks, and did not allow the misfortunate creature the life of a dog.

When I was meditating thus, after the manner of the patriarch Isaac, there was a pleasant sadness at my heart, though it was like to leep to my mouth; but I could not get leave, to enjoy it long for the tongue of Tammie Dobbie. He hade me look over into a field, about the middle of which were some mooden railings round the black gaping mouth of a coal-pit. "Div ye see that dark hit owre nonder hamang the green clover, wi the sticks about it?" asked Tammie ama bas seel sid bas mid mode.

"Yes," said I; "and what for?"

""" Weil, do ye ken "quo. Tammie, "that has been a weary, place to mair than ane. Twa three year mago some of the collyer hodies were choked to death adown below wi as blast of foul air; and a pour o' norphan weans they left behint them on the cauldrife parish. But ye'll mind Hom'en the sherry-officer, wi'the thrawn shouther i'd begund bad it goiwol "Ou, bravely I believe he came to some untime-ous end hereaway abouts?" and right is and beigs "blows a drucken, blustering chield, as we mind fearling neither man nor de'il, and living a wild, wicked, regardless life; but, puir man, that couldna ave fast. He had been bouzing about the countryside somehow maybe harrying out of house and hald some pur bodies that hadna the wherewith to pay their Prents so, in riding hame fou bit was pit-mirk, and the rain pouring down in bucketfu's, he became dumbfoundered wi the darkness and the drawning thegether; and, losing his way, wandered about the fields, Kauling his mare after him by the bridle. In the morning the beast was found hibbling away at the grass owre by yonder, wi the saddle mon its Back, and a broken bridle hinging down about its fore-legs, by the which the folks round were putten upon the scent; for, on making search down you pit, he was fund at the bottom, wi his brains smashed about him, and his legs and arms broken to chit-"Yes," said I; " and what for ?" ters!"

"Bave as!" said I, "it makes a" my flesh grue."

"Bave Well it may," answered Tammie, "or the story's

"lost in the telling; for the collyers that flind him shook as if they had been seized wi"the ague. "The dumb animal, ye observe, had far mair sense than him; for, when his fitting gaed way, instead of following, it had plunged back; and the bit of the bridle, that had broken, was still in his grup, when they spied him wi' their lanterns." Is the said

"It was an awful like way to leave the world,"
- said I ... Deed it was, and the less," his wered Tammie, " to gang to his lang account in the middle of his mad thochtlessness, without a moment's warning. But see yonder's Cousland lying right forrit to the east hand."

At this very nick of time Benjie was seized with a severe kink; so Tammie stopped his cart, and I held his head over the side of it till the cough went by. I thought his made would have jumped out; but he fell sound asleep in two or three minutes; and we jogged on fill we take to the yill-house door, where, after louping out, we got a pickle pease strae to Tammie house grandfullar ganguage a strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to Tammie house golden 's sound by the strae to the straet golden 's sound by the straet golden 's s

Cegs and arms 2 was spining was spining. The il take the hundmost que Duncan M'Calapin,
The Lard of Tillyben, 10c.

Oid Song.

He went a little farther,

And through his head aside.

And just by Goodman Whitheld's gate,

any there the roas he spied

He taked her how she did.

She stared hire in the face, There down she tail her head againer-She was in we timed case.

Oid Pirater's More.

It happened curiously that, of all the days of the year, this should have been the one on which the Carters'-play was held, and by good hick we were just in time to see that grand sight. The whole regiment of carters were paraded up at my Lord's door, for so they call their boxinaster; and a beautiful thing it was I can assure ye. What a sight of

of his mad thochtlessness, without a moment's warning. But see youder's Consland lying right formt to the east hand."

At this very nick of time Benjie was seized with a severe kink, so Tammie stopped his cart, and I held his head over the side of it till the cough went by. I thought in the side of it till the cough went but he fell sound as leep in two or three minutes, and we jogged on selep in two or three minutes, where, after longing guiqoliag yet a pickle pease trae to Taginqqoliag, guiqoliag them is qual had strae to Taginqqoliay, guiqoliay is am has agoli, siqalson manut 'oup, seembail de sam has agoli, enqualson and oup, seembail and the see i, enqualson and oup, seembail and the sam has agoli, enqualson and oup, seembail of brial aft

Old Song.

He went a little farther,
And turned his head aside,
And just by Goodman Whitfield's gate,
Oh there the mare he spied.
He asked her how she did,
She stared him in the face,
Then down she laid her head again—
She was in wretched case.

Old Poulter's Mare.

It happened curiously that, of all the days of the year, this should have been the one on which the Carters'-play was held; and, by good luck, we were just in time to see that grand sight. The whole regiment of carters were paraded up at my Lord's door, for so they call their boxmaster; and a beautiful thing it was I can assure ye. What a sight of ribbons was lon the horses! Many a crame must have been emptied ere such a number of manes and long tails could have been busked out. The beasts themselves, poor things, I dare say wondered much at their bravery, and no less I am sure did the riders. They looked for all the world like living haberdashery shops Great bunches of wall-flower, thymie, spearment, and southernwood, were stuck in their button-holes and broad belts of stripped silk, of every colour in the rainbow, were flung across their shoulders. VAs to their hats, the man would have had a clear ee that could have kent what was their shape or colour. They were all rowed with ribbons, and puffed about the rim, with long green or white feathers ; land cockades were stuck on the off side, to say nothing of long strips fleeing behind them in the wind like streamers. Save us I to see men so Iproud of finery; if they had been peacocks lone would have thought less; but in decent sober men, the heads of small families, and with no great wages, the picture of two carters, .axil-yxarbaswegnidt addr and At long and last we saw them all set in motion, like a regiment of dragoons, two and two, with a drum and fife at their head, as if they had been marching to the field of battle I By the bye, it was ftwo of our own volunteer lads that were playing that day before them, Rony Skirl, the snah, and Geordie Thumb, the dyer; so this we see verified the fauld proverb, that, travel where ve like, to the world's ends well ave meet with kent faces ; Tammie and me coming out to the will-house door to see them tails could have been busked out. The beastydiszag to Behind the drum and fife, came ad bigohalf-crazy looking chield, without broad obline bonnet con his head, and a red worsted cherry sticking in the crown of vit. He was carrying a new car-saddle over his shoulder on a well-cleaned pitchforkan Syne came three abreast, one on each side of my Lord, being the key keepers; the keeping the box, and they keeping the keys, in case like he should take any thing out. And some tome the auld my Lord him that was my Lord last year yel observe and syne came the colours, as bright and bonny as mostly any thing we ever sawd On one of them was painted a plough and harrows, and a man sowing wheat pover the coprofi which were gilded letters, the which I was Pable to read when I put von my spees, being nifq I mind well, Speed the Plough On the other one, which was a mazarine blue, with yellow fringes, was the picture of two carters, with flat bonnets on their heads, the tane with a whip in his hand, and the "tither a rake making hay like Then came they all passing by two and two looking as if each one of them had been the Duke of Buccleuch himself, every tone rigged out in his best 1 the young callants, such Tike as had just entered the box, coming hindmost, band thinking themselves, I dare say, no small driffk, proverb, that, travel where ye like, to the world's ribbons was lon the horses! Many a crame must have been emptied ere such a flumber of manes and long tails could have been busked out. The beasts themselves, poor things, I dare say wondered much at their bravery, and no less I am sure did the riders! They looked for all the world like living haberdashery shops. Great bunches of wall-flower, thymic. spearment, and southernwood, were stuck in their button-holes and broad belts of stripped silk, of every colour in the rainbow, were flung across their shoulders. v. As to their hats, the man would have had a clear ee that could have kent what was their shape or colour. They were all rowed with ribbons, and puffed about the rims with long green or white feathers; land cockades were stuck on the off side, to say nothing of long strips fleeing behind them in the wind, like streamers by Save us I to see men, so proud of finery: if they had been peacocks lone would have thought less; but in decent sober men, the heads of small families, and with no great wages, the picture of two carters, salily vary saw gnith shirt ed! At long and last we saw them all set in motion, like a regiment of dragoons, two and two, with a tdrum and fife at their head, as if they had been marching to the field of battle By the bye, it was two of our own volunteer lads that were playing that day before them, Rory Skirl, the snab, and Geordie Thimp, the dyers softhis ye see verified the fauld proverb, that, travel where ye like, to the world's ende well ave meet with kent faces ; Tammie and me coming out to the will-house door to see them tails could have been busked out. The beastydlesser to Behind the drum and fife, came adbigohalf-crazy looking chield, without broad obline bonnet on his head, and a red worsted cherry sticking in the crown of it. He was carrying a new car-saddle over his shoulder on a well-cleaned pitchforkon Syne came three abreast, one on each side of my Lord, being the key keepers; the keeping the box, and they keeping the keys, in case like he should take any thing out. And some came the auld my Lord-him that was my Lord last year, ye observe; and syne came the colburs, as bright and bonny as mostly any thing we ever saved On one of them was painted a plough and harrows, and a man sowing wheat joover the top of which were gilded letters, the which I was able to read when I put vont my spees, being, rifq I mind well, Speed the Plough Pon the other one, which was a mazarine blue, with yellow fringes, was the picture of two carters, with flat bonnets on their heads; the tane with a whip in his hand, and the stither a rake making hay like Then came they all passing by two and two looking as if each one of them had been the Duke of Buccleuch himself, every tohe rigged out in his best to the young callants, such like as had just entered the box, coming hindmost, hand thinking themselves, I dare say, no small drink, proverb, that, travel where ye like, to the world's and the day a great one, when they were first allowed to be art and part in such a grand procession. Abbut losh me I had mostly forgot the piper, that played in the middle, as proud as Hezekiah, that we rend of in 2d Kings, strutting about from side to side with his bare legs and big buckles, and bit Macgregor tartan jacket-his cheeks blown up with wind like a smith's bellows the feathers dirling with conceit in his bonnet—and the drone, below his oxter, squeeling and skirling like an evil spirit tied up in a green bag. Keep us all ! what gleys he gied about him to observe that the folk were looking at him! He put me in mind of the song that auld Barny used to sing about the streetshnA med ditw rettern ad any sady our very ton there was a terrible; sa war as body as garrant ord and a -quil a gethere's the Grants o' Tullochgorum a mort mann

solod owt Mi', their pipers gam before 'em savon serod uni Proud the mithers are that bore em, taned out tol

Feedle, faddle, fa, fum.

But, for all this outward care, the poor thing.
But as on or que emos bluode shirt as ob ody the blessed moment, with a staff in his hand, being old now, and not able to ride in the procession, as he had many a time and often done before, but honest Saunders Tram, that had been a staunch customer of mine since the day on which I opened shop; so we shook hands jocosely together, like old acquaintances and the body hodged and leuch as if he had found a fiddle, he was so glad to see me. bas "; testorq a ret

Benjie having fallen asleep, Luckie Barm of the Change, a douce woman, put him to his bed, and promised to take care of him till we came back, Saunders Tram insisting on us to go forward along with him to see the race. I had no great scruple to do this, as I thought Benjie would likely sleep for an hour, being wearied with the jooggling of the cart, and having supped a mutchkin bowlful of Luckie Barm's broo and bread of his fire one of the

By the time we had tramped on to the brachead, two or three had booked for the race, and were busy pulling away the flowers that hung over about their horses' lugs, to say little of the tapes and twine, and which made them look, poor brutes, as if they were not very sure what was the matter with them. And there was a terrible uproar between my Lord and a man from Edinburgh Grassmarket, leading a limping horse, covered with a dirty sheet, with two holes for the beast's een looking out at and bound

But, for all this outward care, the poor thing seemed very like as if wind was more plenty in the land than corn, being thin and starved-looking, and as lame as Vulcan in the off hind leg. Id So ye see he insisted on its not running; and the man said with had a right to run as well as any other horse; and my bord said wit had no such thing, as it was not in the box; and the man said the would take out a protest?" and my Lord said to he didna gie a bawbee for a protest;" and "that he would not allow him to run on any account whatsoever;" but the man was throng all the time they were argle-bargling taking the cover off the beast's back, that was ready saddled, and as accoutred for running as our regiment, of volunteers was for fighting on field-days. So he swore like a trooper, that, notwithstanding all their debarring, he would run in spite of their teeth both my Lord's teeth, ye observe, and that of the two key-keepers ;-maybe, too, of the man that carried the saddle, for he age lent in a word at my Lord's back, egging him on to stand out for the laws. To cut a long tale short, the drum ruffed, and off set four of them, a black one, and a white one, and a brown one, and the man's one, neck and neck, as neat as ye like. The race course was along the high road; and, dog on it, they made a noise like thunder, throwing out their big heavy feet behind them: and whisking their tails from side to side as if they would have dung out one another's een, till, not being used to gallop, they at last began to funk and fling ; syne first one stopping, and then another, wheeling round and round about like peeries, in spite of the riders, whipping them, and pulling them by the heads. The man's mare, however, from the Grassmarket, with the limping leg, carried on, followed by the white one, an old tough brute, that had belonged in its youth to a trumpeter of the Scots Greys; and, to tell the truth, it shewed mettle still. though far past its best; so back they came, neck and neck, all the folk crying, and holloing, and clappling their hands some, "Weil dune the lame ane There shillings and the lame and others. Weil run Bonaparte at him, and Bonaparte two to one that Whitey beats him all to sticks." lo when dismal to relate, the limping legged ane couped the creels, and old white Bonaparte came in with his tail cocked amid loud cheering, and no small claptwo key-keepers ;-maybe, too, of the shrad hot said www all ran down the road to the place where the limping horse was lying, for it was never like to rise up again any more than the bit rider, that was thrown over its head like an arrow out of a bow : but on helping him to his feet, save and except the fright, two wide screeds across his trowser-knees, and a scratch along the brig of his nose, nothing visible was do be perceived It was different, however, with the limping horse. Misfortunate brute! one of its fore legs had folded below it, and snapped through at the fetlock joint. There was it lying with a sad sorrowful look, as if it longed for death to come quick, and end its miseries; the blood, all the while, gush-gushing out at the gaping wound. To all it was as plain as the A, B, C, that the bones would never knit; and that, considering the case it was in, it would be an act of Christian charity to put the beast out of pain. The maister gloomed, stroked his chin, and looked down, kenning, weil-awat, that he had lost his bread winner, then gave his head a nod, ned thrusting both his hands down to the bottom lining of the pockets of his long square tailed jockey coat ... He was a wauf shallanshakerlooking cheild, with an old broad-snouted japanued beaver hat pulled over his brow-one that seemed by his phisog to hold the good word of the world as nothing and that had, in the course of circumstances, been reduced to a kind of wild desperation. either by chance-misfortunes, cares and trials, or, what is more likely, by his own sinful regardless me that she wadna hae won? But she shill lo yaw off It canna be helpit," he said, giving his head a bit shake, Wit canna be helpit, friends Av. Jess. ye were a gude ane in yere day, lass, mony a penny and pound have I made out of year Which o' vo can lend me a hand, lads? Rin away for la gun some o' ye." charged."

Here Thomas Clod interfered with a small bit of advice—a thing that Thomas was good at being as Cameronian elder, and accustomed to giving a word. "Wad ye notthink it better," said Thomas, "to stick her with a long gully-knife, or a sharp shoed maker's parer. It wad be an easier way, I'm thinks ing. "Hariting guideof ham and to guide a loud and Dog on it! I could scarcely keep from shuddered ing when I heard them speaking in this wild, heathenish, bloody sort of a manner. I roggin out warb for Deed no, "quo' Thomas Tram, at whose side I was standing, "far better send away for the smithle.

forehammer, and hit her a smack or two betwirt the een suso ve wad settle her in half a second fod od of -195 No, more a better plan than a that wad be to make a strong kineh of ropes, and hang her!" anislool b Lovey ding busuch ways of shewing thow to be merciful! but But the old Jockey himself interfered "Hand yere tongues, fules," was his speech ; "hyonur der's the man coming bwil a gun of We'll shune put an end to her. She would have won for a hunder pounds, if she hadna broken her leg ... Wha'll wager me that she wadna hae won? But she's the last of mydstable, puir beast; and I havenage black to rub against anither, now that I have lest their Gi'e me the gun and the penny candle Is she load ed?" speired he at the man that carried the piece. nuff Troth is she I was the answer middouble charged." some o' ve."

shouthered thorsescoupers and ramining down the candle, he lifted up the piece, cocking it as he went four or five yards in front of the poor bleeding brute, that seemed, though she could not rise, to know what he was about with the weapon of destruction; cast in the black ee up at him, and looking pitifully in his faced, more used years blace I it no god

When I saw him taking his aim; and preparing too draw the trigger, I turned round my backs not being able to standow; and brizzed the flats of my hands with all my pith, against the opening of my carry nevertheless, Pheard's faint boom; so, heeling round, I observed the miserable bleeding creature lift her head, and pulling up her legs, give them a plunge down again on the divots; after which she lay still, and we all saw, to our satisfaction, that death had come to her relief.

We are not commanded to be the judges of our fellow creatures. but to think charitably of all men, hoping all for the best ; and, though the horse couper was athought suspicious, both in look, speech, dress, and outward behaviour, still, ever and anony we'were bound by the ten commandments to consider him boly in the light of a fellow-creature in distress of mind and poverty of pocket; so we made a superscription for the poor man; and, though he did not look much like one that deserved our charge tv? nevertheless and howseever, maybe he was a bad halfpenny, and maybe not, one thing was visibly teers talif, that he was as poor as Job, i misery being write ten in big-hand letters on his brow. So it behoved each one to open his purse as he could afford it; and though I say not what I put into the hat, proud and I to tell that he collected two or three shillings to as Benjie might take skaith from the smolt-mid alad 3 This job being over to his mind as well as mine, and the money safely stowed into his big hinder coats puckets would be believe it ? ere ver the beast was scarcely cold, just as we were decamping from the place, and buttoning up our breeches pocketsp we saw him casting his coat, and had the curiosity ton stand still for a jiffy, to observe what he was after. I in case, in the middle of his misfortunes, he was bent on some act of desperation; when, lo, and behold he out with a gully knife; and began skinning his old servant, as if he had been only peeling the bark off a fallen tree lift and of behanding of the bark.

One cannot sit at their ingle-cheek and expect, without casting their leves about them, to grow exal perienced in the ways of men, or the ongoings of the world. This spectacle gave me, I can assure you. much and no little insight; and so dowie was I with, the thoughts of what I had witnessed of the selfishness, the sinfulness, and perversity of man, that I grew more and more homesick, thinking never so much in my life before of my quiet hearthstone and, cheerful ingle; and though Thomas Clod insisted greatly on my staying to their head-meeting dinner, and taking a reel with the lassies in the barn; and Tammie Dobbie, the bit body, had got so much into the spirit of the thing, that little persuasion would have made him stay all night, yet, I was determined to make the best of my way home; more betoken as Benjie might take skaith from the night-air, and our jount therefrom might, instead of contributing to his welfare, do him more harm than good, & So. after getting some cheese and bread, to say nothing of a glass or two of strong beer, and a dram at Luckie Barm's, we waited in her parlour as a pastime like, till Benjie wakened; on the which I made Tammie yoke his beast; and, rowing the bit callant in his mother's shawl, took him into my arms in the cart, and drove away.

CHAPTER XV

THE RETURN

That sweet he me along delight;
And thether they report
Communion with their own to hold?
Peacelin as, at the fear of alght,
Two lord feath in growing white Return and o'le groth or,
Thether seeps within the fold
Or like was that seeps within the fold
Or like was that seems handwinest,
Or like was that seems handwinest,
Or like was that seems handwinest,
Or like within the contractions there are
Or like the first supermiss the meat

WILSON

Home more, frame, being den with Die Have mane, bank to by one overtime.

I MAY confess, without thinking shaine that I was glad when I tound our nebs turned homeward and, when we get over the turn of the base at the old quarry-holes to see the blue smoke of our own Dalkeith hanging like a thin cloud over the tops of the green trees, through which I perceived the glit posing myself to the defilement of the world, to the fear of robbers, and to the night air, in the search of health for all dwining laddie; as if the hand that dealt that blessing out was not as powerful at home as it is abroad ... Had I remained at my own labread, the profits of my day's work would have been over and above for the maintenance of my family, outside and inside ; instead of which I have been at the expense of a cart-hire and a horse's un-putting, let alone Tammie's debosh and my own, besides the trifle of threepence to the round-shouthered old horsecouper with the slouched japan beaver hat. The story was too true a one; but alackaday it was instruction of Mr. Wigner thegen of the noisewiten in As I was thus musing, the bright red sun of summer sank down behind the top of the Pentland Hills, and all looked blaish, dowie, and drearie, as if the heart of the world had been seized with a sudden dwalm, and the face of nature had at once withered from blooming youth into the hoariness of old age. Now and then the birds gave a hit chitter; and whiles a cow moved from the fields; and the dew was falling like the little tears of the fairies out of the blue lift, where the gloaming-star soon began save punishment could viling branding branding 898What I had seen and witnessed made my thoughts heavy and my heart sad ; I could not get the better of it and looked round and round mer as we jogged along over the height, down on the far distant countering weathercock on the old kirk steepless Tiams mie boor creature I observed was a whit ree with the good cheer; and, as he sat on the fore-tram! with his whip-hand thrown over the beast's haunches. he sang, half to himself and half-aloud, a great many old Scotch songs, such as the Gaberlunzier" Aiken Drum, "Maki yere Auld Cloak about ye." and, od the Deuks dang ower my Daddie ;" besides, "The Mucking o' Geordie's Byre," and " Ca' the Ewes to the Knowes," and so on but, do what I liked, I could not keep my spirits up, thinking of the woeful end of the poor old horse, and of the ne er do weel loon its maister. Many an excellent instruction of Mr. Wiggie's came to my mind, of how we misguided the good things that were lent as for our use here, by a gracious provider, who Would, however, bid us render a final account to him of our conduct and conversation. If I thought of how many were ave complaining and complaining, myself Whiles among the rest, of the hardships and miseries, and the misfortunes of their lot putting all down to the score of fate, and never once thinking of the plantations of sorrow, reared up from the seeds of our own sinfulness; or how hany thing, save punishment, could come of the breaking of the ten commandments delivered to the patriarch Moses. Perhaps, reckoned I with myself, perhaps in this even I myself may have in this day's transactions erred. "Here am I wandering about in a cart;" expositio myself to the defilement of the world, to the fear of robbers, and to the night air, in the search of health for all dwining laddie; as if the hand that dealt that blessing out was not as powerful at home as it is abroad wolland I remained at my own labread, the profits of my day's work would have been over and above for the maintenance of my family. outside and inside ; instead of which I have been at the expense of a cart-hire and a horse's un-putting. let alone Tammie's debosh and my own, besides the trifle of three pence to the round-shouthered old horsecouper with the slouched japan beaver hat. The story was too true a one but alackaday it was now over late to repent how W TM to noithwestern troAs I was thus musing, the bright red sun of summer sank down behind the top of the Pentland Hills, and all looked blaish, dowie, and drearie, as if the heart of the world had been seized with a sudden dwalm, and the face of nature had at once withered from blooming youth into the hoariness of old age. Now and then the birds gave a hit chitter; and whiles a cow moved from the fields; and the dew was falling like the little tears of the fairies out of the blue lift, where the gloaming-star soon began save punishment, could evilund that glitter bounds bloom wolgen see What I had seen and witnessed made my thoughts heavy and my heart sad ; I could not get the better of its I looked round and round me, as we jogged along over the height, down on the far distant country, that spread out, as if it had been a great big picture, with hills, and fields, and woods; and I could still see to the norward the ships lying at their anchors on the sea, and the shores of Fife far fir beyond, it. It was a great and a grand sight; and made me turn from the looking at it into my own heart, causing me to think more and more of the glory of the Maker's handworks, and less and less of the littleness of prideful man. But Tammie had getten his drappikie, and the tongue of the body would not lie still a moment, so he blethered on from one thing to another, as we jogged along, till I was forced, at the last, to give up thinking; and begin a twa-handed crack with him

Have you your snuff box upon yell said Tam-Henric. How har are we freshonial bean as " Sie

Having given him the box, I observed to him, that, it was beginning to grow dark and dowler?

viff-Deed is't," Isaid: Tammie inff but at body can new scarcely meet on the road will only thing want than themsell. Mony a witch de'il, and bogle, however, did my grannie see and hear tell of, that used to send and scamper hereaway languyne like mankins "mirroto-look rofts". Dan it was six of granninged things are out of the land now; and muckle luck to them. But we have other things to fear newhat think ye of highway robbers have yet it as guzzeld

"Highway robbers!" said Tammie. "Kay, kay;

I'll tell ye of something that I met bin wi mysell. Ac dark winter hight last I bwas disindering hame frae Pathheaderit was pit mick, and about the twall most metal I couldna see my finger afore me what a stupid thocht cam into my head that I wad never wun hame but be either killed, lost, murdered, or drowned, between that and the dawing. All of a sudden I sees a light coining dancing forbit amang the trees a and my hair began to stand up on end. Then, in the next moment, save as a 1.1 I sees antifier light, and fortit forfit they bath cam like the een of some great fiery monster, det loose frae the pit of darkness by its maister, to seek whom it might ded your."

Stop Tammie is said I to him we'll wanken Benjie. How far are we from Dalkeith Bir main Twabmile and a bittock," unswered Tammie. " But waitha wee ... Up gam the two lights snow! snooving nearer and nearer I and I heard distinctly the sound of feet that werena men's clover feet? maybe but inne wheels in Sacreer it can and nearer, till the sweat began to pour owre my een as cauld as ide grandy at lang and lasty I fand my knees beginning to gie way; and, after tot-tottering for half a minute, I felb down, my staff playing bleach out before mean When I cannot mysell, and opened myleen; there were the twidights before me, bleezi bleezing, as if they wad blastomy sight out at And " Highway robbers !" said Tammie. " Kay, kny ;

what did they turn out to be, think ye? The diel or for a' that. He was a jourgement o' klidly , siknings lad, and they had I offer "Her smear Torne me fore a be Naithing mair then," answered Tammie, to hint twa bowets; ane tied to ilka knee of auld Doofie. the half-crazy horse-doctor, mounted on his langtailed naig, and away through the dark by himsell. at the dead hour of night, to the relief of a man's mare seized with the batts, somewhere down about shilling in his loof. Oxenford." I was glad that Tammie's story had ended in this way, when our came another tramping on its heels! bod Do ve see the top of you black trees to the nor-Ward there, on the bracklead put reven rotoob edT J'o and think I do." was my reply laved But how far. think ve, are we from home now ? to vo vbodeen and about a mile and a half bisaid Tammied well, as to the trees, I'll tell ye something about wark, as if amaist nacthing had happened. Mathe and on There was an auld widow-leddy lived lang syne babout the town end of Dalkenhand A sour cankered. and body she's dead and rotten lang agois But what I was gain to say she had a bonny bit hair-"haired, blue-e'ed lassie of a servant-maid, that lodged in the house wi' her, just by all the world Tike a famb wir an wolf; nox bonnier quean, T've heard tell, never steppit in leather shoon; so all the young lads in the gate-end were wooing at her. the puir blackened creatures will be goun down to and fain to have her; but she wad only have ac joe for a' that. He was a journeyman wright, a tradeslad, and they had come, three or four year before, frae the same place thegither; maybe having had a liking for ane anither since they were bairns; so they were gaun to be married the week after Da'keith Fair, and a was settled. But what, think we happened. He got a drap drink, and a recruiting party listed him in the king's name, wi' pitting a white shilling in his loof. Ovenford." When the poor lassie heard what had come to pass, and how her sweetheart had taen the bounty, she was like to gang distrackit, and took to her bed. The doctor never took up her trouble; and some said it was a fever. At last she was roused out o't, but naebody ever saw her laugh after; and frae ane that was as cantie as a lintie, she became as douce as a quaker, though she ave gaed cannily about her wark, as if amaist naething had happened. If she was ony way light-headed before, to be sure she wasna that noo; but just what a decent quean should be, sitting for hours by the kitchen fire her lane, reading the bible, and thinking, wha kens, of what wad become o' the wicked after they died ; and so ed in the house wi' her, just by all theose and ov 1" What light is you?" said I interrupting him, I wishing him like to break affine Toyon . Has bread "Ou, its just the light on some of the coal hills. the puir blackened creatures will be gaun down to their wark. It's an unyearthly kind of trade, turning night intil day, and working like moudiewarts in the dark, when decent folks are in their beds sleeping.—And so, as I was saying, ye see, it happened ae Sunday night, that a chap cam to the back door; and the mistress too heard it. She was sitting in the foreroom wi' her specks on, reading some sermon book; but it was the maid that answered.

"In a while thereafter, she rang her bell, being a curious body, and aye anxious to ken a' thing of her ain affairs, let alane her neighbours; so, after waiting a wee, she rang again,—and better rang; then lifting up her stick, for she was stiff with the rheumaticks and decay of nature, she hirpled into the kitchen,—but feint a hait saw she there, save the open bible lying on the table, the cat streekit out before the fire, and the candle burning—the candle—na, I daur say I am wrang there, I believe it was a lamp, for she was a near ane. As for her maiden, there was no trace of her."

"What do ye think came owre her then?" said I to him, liking to be at my wits end. "Naething uncanny I daur say?"

"Ye'll hear in a moment," answered Tammie;
"a' that I ken o' the matter. Ye see—as I asked ye before—yon trees on the hill-head to the norard;
just below yon black cloud yonder?"

"Preceesely," said I—"I see them well enough."
"Weil, after a' thochts of finding her were gien up, and it was fairly concluded, that it was the auld gudeman that had come and chappit her out, she was fund in a pond among you trees, floating on her back, wi' her Sunday's claes on!!"

" Drowned?" said I to him.

"Drowned,—and as stiff as a deal board," answered Tammie. "But when she was drowned,—or how she came to be drowned,—or who it was drowned her,—has never been found out to this blessed moment."

"Maybe," said I, lending in my word, "maybe she had grown demented, and thrown herself in i' the dark."

"Or maybe," said Tammie, "the de'il flew away wi' her in a flash o' fire; and, soosing her down frace the lift, she landit in that hole, where she was fund floating. But, wo!—wo!" cried he to his horse, coming across its side with his whip; "We maun be canny; for this brig has a sharp turn, (it was the Cow Brig, ye know,) and many a one, both horse and man, have got their necks broken, by not being wary enough of that corner."

This made me a wee timorous, having the bit laddie Benjie fast asleep in my arms, and as I saw that Tammie's horse was a wee fidgety, and glad I dare say, poor thing, to find itself so near home. We heard the water, far down below, roaring and hushing over the rocks, and thro' among the Duke's woods,—big, thick, black trees, that threw their branches, like giant's arms, half across the Eak making all below as gloomy as midnight while over the tops of them, high aboon, the bonnie weel starries were twink-twinkling far amid the blue-But there was no end to Tammie's tengue. !! societ Weel, said heaff speaking o' the bright HI tell you a gude story about that. Auld Jamie Bowiel the potato merchant, that lived at the gate endo had a horse and cart, that met wi' an accident just at the turn of the corner wonder; and up cam a chield sair forfaughten, and a' out of breath to Jamie's door, serving like the prophet Jeremiah to the andd Jews of Rin, rin away down to the Cow Brig ; for your cart's dung to shivers, and the driver's killed as weel as the horse l'on ne's Il'I rewords a exil salool James ran in for his hat ; but as he was coming! out at the door, he met another messenger, such as came running across the plain to King David, to acquaint him of the death of Absalom crying & Rin away down, Jamie, rin away down your cart is! standing wonder, without either horse or driver; for him see to dee; he gied them a 'bbellik died brivedt

"Jamie thanked heaven that the cart was too the fore; then rinning back for his stick, which he dad forgetten, he stopped a moment to bid his wife not greet so loud, and was then rushing out in full birrowhen heranfoul of a third chield, that mostly knocked ed down the door in his hurry. Awfu'news, many awfu'news, was the way o't with this second Elist

phaz the Temanite Your eart and horse ran away, -and threw the driver, puir fellow, clean owre the brig into the waterpool No an crunch of him is to be seen or heard tell of for he was a smashed to 15 1But where's the horse? and where's the cart then all askit Jamie, a thought brisker. 96 Where's the horse and cart then, my man Po Can ve tellime a horse and cart, that met wi' an act tast forthato bisiou, said he suthey're baith doundat the Toll sair forfanghten, and a 'nukwish rish a on reshoot bks That's the best news I've heard the nicht, my man .- Goodwife It say Goodwife; are we deaf vor domiliet & Give this ladua drain's and was attrathery looks like a shower, I'll e'en no go out the nighta as Illiensy manage to find another driver, though half a hundred of the blockheads should get their brains came running across the plain to King Litro bashons affi Is not that a guide lone noo Manurie, laughing. 16 Od Jamie Bowie was a real anel Hes wadnalet them light a candle by his beduside to lette him see to dee; he gied them a curse, and said that wastneedless extravagance fleavel beauties as almost wastneed beauties.

Dog on it, thought I to myself, the farther in the deeper. This beats the round shouthered horse couper with the japan hat, skinning his recking horse, all to sticks; and so I again fell into a gloomy sort of a musing 5 when, just as we came opposite the Duke's gate, with the deers on leach side of its branches, like giant's arms, half across the Esk. making all below as gloomy as midnight a while over the tops of them, high, high aboon, the bonnie weel starries were twink-twinkling far amid the blue But there was no end to Tammie's tengue. Happing "Weel," said he " speaking o' the brig Hil tell you a gude story about that. Auld Jamie Bowiel the potato merchant, that lived at the gate-end had a horse and cart, that met wi' an accident just ato the turn of the corner wonder ; and up cam a chield sair forfaughten, and a' out of breath to Janie's door, serving like the prophet Jeremiah to the auld Jews of Rin, rin away down to the Cow Brig ; for your cart's dung to shivers, and the driver's killed as weel as the horse, 'on me all' rewords a salil salool His James ran in for his hat ; but as he was coming ! out at the door, he met another messenger, such as came running across the plain to King David, to acquaint him of the death of Absalom crying A Rin away doun, Jamie, rin away doun your cart is! standing wonder, without either horse on driver; for they're baith killed i'a medt beig ed ; oeb ot ees mid

"Jamie thanked heaven that the cart was to the fore; then rinning back for his stick, which he dad forgotten, he stopped a moment to bid his wife not greet so loud, and was then rushing out in full birry when he ran foul of a third chield, that mostly knocked ed down the door in his hurry of Awfu news, many awfu news, was the way o't, with this second Elis

phaz the Temanite Your eart and horse ran away! and threw the driver, puir fellow, clean over the brig into the waterood No and crunch of him is to be seen or heard tell of for he was a smashed to But there was no el'assnisad'unive an art !! But there was no el'assnisad university !! But where's the horse? and where's the cart then a laskit Jamie, a thought brisker. Where's the horse and cart then, my man P. Can ve tell me a horse and cart, that met wi' an act tant for thighto bisis Ou, said he sothey're baith donn at the Toll sair forfaughten, and a '. rukwisht ain a only spinor best That's the best news I've heard the nicht, my man .- Goodwife, I say, Goodwife; are ve deaf or dominet & Giventhis ladua drame and mas attreathery looks like a shower, I'll e'en no go out the nighta-I'll easy manage to find another driver, though half a hundred of the blockheads should get their brains came running across the plain to King Dinocheshoons off Is not that all guide lone inob Bill hado, Tammies laughing. 16 Od Jamie Bowie was a real anel Hea wadnalet them light a candle by his beduside to let him see to dee; he gied them a curse, and said that wastneedless extravagance Herrelt bearing as a self-blog on it thought I to myself, the farther in the deeper. This beats the round shouthered horse couper with the japan hat, skinning his recking horse all to sticks; and so I again fell into a gloomy sort of a musing 5 when, just as we came opposite the Duke's gate, with the deers on each side of its two men rushed out upon us, and one of them seized Tammie's horse by the bridle, as the other one held his horse-pistol to my nose, and bade me stop, in the Kine's name!

in the King's name!

"Hold your hand, hold your hand for the sake of mercy!" cried I, " spare the father of a small family that will starve on the street, if ye take my life!! Hae,—hae,—there's every coin and copper I have about me in the world! Be merciful, be merciful; and do not shed blood, that will not, cannot be rubbed out of your conscience. Take all that we have —horse and cart and all if ye like, only spare our lives; and let us away home!"

"De'il's in the man," quo' Tammie, "horse and cart! that's a gude one! Na, na, lads; fire away gin ye like; for as lang as I hae a drap o' bluid in me, ye'll get neither. Better be killed than starve. Do your best, ye thieves that ye are; and I'll hae baith hanged neist week before the Fifteen!"

Every moment I expected my head to be shot off, till I got my hand clapped on Tammie's mouth, and could get cried to them—" Shoot him then, lads; shoot him then, lads, if he wants it; but take my siller like Christians; and let me away with my poor deeing bairn!"

The two men seemed a something dumbfoundered with what they heard; and I began to think them, if they were highway robbers, a wee slow at their trade; when, what think ye did they turn out to be -ziez modt to enobas. In north the bodyn nam owt monty guess? Nothing more nor less than two extense officers, that had got information of some smuggets an elast had got information of some smuggets and the sound side to smuggets and smug

When they quitted us giggling, I could not keep from laughing too; though the sights I had seen, and the fright I had got, made me nervish and cerie; so blithe was I when the cart rattled on our own street, and I began to waken Benjie, as we were not above a hundred yards from our own door.

In this day's adventures, I saw the sin and folly of my conduct visibly, as I jumped out of the cart at our close mouth. So I determined within myself, with a strong determination, to behave more sensibly for the future, and think no more about lime kilms and coal-pits; but to trust, for Benjie's recovery from the chincough; to a kind Providence, together with Daffy's clixir, and warm blankets.

till I got my leard ciapped on Tammie's mouth, and could get cried to them—" Shoot han then, lads; shoot him then, lads, if he wants it; but take my siller like Christians; and let me away with my poor deeing barn!"

The two men seemed a something dumbfoundered with what they heard; and I began to think them, if they were highway robbers, a wee slow at their trade; when, what think ye did they turn out to be

dilemmy; she being away, three days before, on the top of Tammie Trundle the carrier's cart, to Lauder, on a visit to her folks there; her mother, (my gudemother like,) having been for some time ill with an income in her leg, which threatened to make a lamiter of her in her old age, the two dectors there-not speaking of the IVX STATTAHOudry skeely old women-being able to make nothing of the business: so noue happersantevavydoora arte room, saving wee Benjie, who was lying asleep at the back of the bed, with this spearity, bed han : Full, in the gap, and hopes the hanted hear of a se And hears him is the rustling wood, and sees an interest was 1. 1911 Mar wood fluw 91. In 900 animogo His course at distance by the bending trees; ment to And Thinks Here comes my mortal enemy, rid gunov enstomers of myl owthen alllin delum to examosus two stirry but nomple streets one of them a writer's guidool slow end the other a grocer the whole some; and the Nay, never shake thy gory locks at me; very herce and fearsome bibit catutal sams work; swaggering althour th arms as if they had been the king's dragoons; and priming a pair of pistols, which are transported in the surface and and and the surface as a surface of the surface as a surface of the surface as a surface of the surface rest, and was about thinking to bestir myself, that I heard the sound of voices in the kail-yard stretching south from our back windows. I listened—and ing south from our back windows. I listened with your is guitach with the sound with the sound of the argle-barging became more distinct, now in the argle barging became more distinct, now in the argle barging became more distinct, now in the argument of the argument argument and taken place. I some quarrelsome disagreement had taken place. had not the comfort of my wife's company in this

dilemmy; she being away, three days before, on the top of Tammie Trundle the carrier's cart, to Lauder, on a visit to her folks there; her mother, (my gudemother like,) having been for some time ill with an income in her leg, which threatened to make a lamiter of her in her old age, the two doctors there-not speaking of the blacksmith, and Isundry skeely old women-being able to make nothing of the business; so none happened to be with me in the room, saving wee Benjie, who was lying asleep at the back of the bed, with his little Kilmarnock on his head, as sound as a top. Nevertheless, I looked for my claes; and, opening one half of the window shutter, I saw four young birkies, well dressed-indeed three of them customers of my own all belonging to the town; two of them young doctors, one of them a writer's clerk, and the other a grocer; the whole looking very fierce and fearsome, like turkey-cocks; swaggering about with arms as if they had been the king's dragoons; and priming a pair of pistols, which one of the surgeons, a spirity, out-spoken lad, Maister

Blister, was holding in his grip.

I alloused at once what they were after, being now defined bray-had ent in societ to honor out bright bray-had ent in societ to honor out bright a wee up to fire-arms; so I saw that skaith was to home-benefit and that I would be wanting in my duty on four heads—first, as a Christian; second, as a money and the bright of the benefit of the benef quity, as the wanton letting out of human blood : so forth I hastened, half dressed, with my grey stockings rolled up my thighs over my cordurovs. and my old hat above my cowl to the kail-yard of consideration, ma chree, that they will neitnesting, I was just in the nick of time; and my presence checked the effusion of blood for a little but wait a wee. So high and furious were at least three of the party, that I saw it was catching water in a sieve to waste words on them, knowing, as clearly as the sun serves the world, that interceding would be of no avail, Howsoever, I made a feint, and threatened to bowl away for a magistrate, if they would not desist from their barbarous and bloody purpose; but i'fegs, I had better have kept my counsel till it was asked for on denote though no rate asked for on respectively. "Tailor Mansie," quoth Maister Thomas Blister with a furious cock of his eye, he was a queer Eirish birkie, come over for his education, f since ye have ventured to thrust your nose, ma yourneen," said be-"where nobody invited ye, you must just stay," said he, " and abide by the consequences. This is an affair of honour," quoth he ; " and if ye venture to stir one foot from the spot, och then, ma bouchal," said he, "by the poker of St. Patrick, but whisk through ye goes one of these leaden playthings, as sure as ye ever spoiled a coat, or cabbaged broad cloth! Ye have now come out, ye observe, hark ye. said he, " and are art, and part in the business; and, if one, or both, of the principals be killed, poor devils said he, we are all alike hable to take our trial before the Justiciary Court, hark ve and, by the powers, "said he wo I doubt not but, on proper consideration, ma chree, that they will allow us to get off mercifully, on this side of hanging, by a verchecked the effusion of blood fersithelanein to with and Od, I found myself immediately in a scrape ; but how to get out of it baffled my gumption. It set me all a shivering; yet I thought that, come the worst when it would, they surely would not hang the faither of a helpless small family, that had nothing but his needle for their support, if I made a proper affidavy, about having tried to make peace between the youths. So, conscience being a brave supporter, I abode in silence, though not without many queer and qualmish thoughts, and a pit-patting of the heart, not unco pleasant in the tholing! a dirw Blood and wounds !" bawled Maister Thomas Blister, "It would be a disgrace for ever bon the honourable profession of physic, "regging on poor Maister Willy Magneezhy, whose face was as white as double-bleached linen, to make any apology for such an insuft.d Arrah, my honey! Vol hot he to doctor a cat; you not fit to bleed a calf en biss not fit to poultice a pig, after three years apprenticeship, asaid he a stand a winter with Doctor Monro? By the cupping glasses of Pocrates, said he, se and by the pistol of Gallon, but I would have caned him on the spot if he had just let out half as much to me! Look ye, man," said he, folook we, man, he is all shaking ;" (this was a god's truth,) "he'll tuen tail Whim like fire Willy "no source Magneezhy, though sadly frightened, looked a thought brighter; and made a kind of half sten forward Say that ye'll ask my pardon once more, and if not," said the poor lad, with a voice broken and trembling, "then we must just shoot one anso I took a kind of whispering, while the strandto Devil a hit, answered Maister Bloatsheet, "devil a bit Neasir; you must down on your bare knees, and beg ten thousand pardons for calling me out here, in a raw morning; or I'll have a shot at you whether you will or notis onioned nameloso tin" Will you stand that?" said Blister, with eyes like burning coals of By the living jingo, and the holy poker, Magneezhy, if you stand that if you stand that I save I stand no longer your second, but leave you to disgrace, and a caning If he likes to shoot you like a dog, and not as a gentleman, then, shelf ma chree, his will be done "an a him Alans my 51 Nos sir," replied Magneezhy, with a quivering voice, which he tried in vain, poor fellow, to render warlike, (he had never been, in the volunteers, like me,) " (Hand us the pistols then; and let us do or myself was a soldier, and liable, when the horheits -uff Spoken like a hero and brother of the lancet: as little afraid at the sight of your own blood, as at that of other people," said Blister! no Hand over much to me! Look ye, man," said hes slotside off. (dIt was an awful business Gude save us, such goings on in a Christian land! While Mr. Bloatsheet, the young writer, was in the act of cocking the bloody weapon, I again, but to no purpose, endeavoured to slip in alword edgeways an Magneezhy was in am awful case; if he had been already shot; he could not have looked more clay and corpse-like; so I took a kind of whispering, while the stramash was drawing to a bloody conclusion, with Mr. Harry Molasses, the fourth in the spree, who was standing Behind Bloatsheet, with a large mahogany box under his arm, something in shape like that of a licensed packman, ganging about from House to House, through the country side, selling toys and trinkets; or niffering platted carrings, and sic like, with vomig lasses, for auld silver coins, or cracked tearspoons Jude Oh the answered he, very composedly, as if it Had been a canister full of black rapped or black guard, that he had just lifted down from his topshelf, "it's just Doctor Birster's saws, whittles, and big knives, in case any of their legs or arms be blown away, that he may cut them off Little would have prevented me sinking down through the ground, had I not remembered, at the precesse moment, that I myself was a soldier, and liable, when the hours of danger threatened, too be catted out, in murchingorder, to the field of buttlelg But by this time the pistols were fin the hands of the two infatuated young men, Mr. Bloatsheets as fiercet as nachussar draggon, and Magneezby as supple in the knees as if he was all on oiled hinges ; so the next consideration was to get well out of the way, the lookers on running nearly as great a chance of being shot as the principals, they not being accustomed dike me for instance, to the use of rms son which accounts I scongged myself behind a big pear-tree t both being to fire when Blister gave the word " Off !" out I " I had hardly jouked into my hidy hole, when " crack-crack" played the pistols like lightning and, as soon as I got my cowl taken from my een, and looked about, wae's me, I saw Magneezhylclap his hand to his brow, wheel round like a peerie, or to sheep seized with the sturdie, and then play flap down on his broadside, breaking the necks of half-tadozen cabbage-stocks,-three of which were afterwards clean dost, as we could not put them all into the pot at one time. The whole of us ran forward, but foremost was Bloatsheet, who seizing Magneezhy by the hand, said, with a mournful face, " I hope you forgive me? Only say this as long as you have breath; for I am off to Leith harbour in half a We immediately proceeded, and lifted thatuning

The blood was running over poor Magneezhy's eend and drib-dribbling from the neb of his nose, so he was truly in a pitiful state; but he said with more strength than I thought he could have mustered.

"Nest ves, fly for your lifed I am dying without much pain the for your life, for I am a gone man !! hi Bloatsheet bounced through the kail vard Hee a manking clamb over the bit war, and off like mad while Blister was feeling Magneezhy's pulse with one hands and looking at this doctor's watch, which he had inothe other more De verthink that the paor lad instance, to the usemid out bias "Arotoobeeviltlis golfe gave his head a wise shake, and only observed. "I dare say Of will be a hanging business among usadvin what direction do vod think Mansie, we " crack-crack" played the "Andilli skat illa blumla "But I answered bravely, " Flee themothat will Itse flee mane: 1/ If a amota en prisoner, the outer officers maun taken me frae my ain house unbut nevertheless, I trust the visibility of my minocenice will be as plain as a pikestaff to the een of the Man dozen cabbage-stocks,-three of which were 'Hirest oth What then, Mansie, will we do with poor Magneezhvo? Give us your advice in need mo at poq edt you Det it's earry him whown to have own beared and swered I would not desert a fellow-creffing in his dving hour to Help me down with him? and then flee the country as fast as von are able palsend

We immediately proceeded, and lifted the poor lade who had now dwalmed away, upon bout wife's hand barrow i Blister taking the feet and the five outers, whereby I got my waistcoat all Japanned with bloods so when we got him laid light we proceeded to earry him between his alown the blose, just as if he had been a sticked sheep, and in at the back door, which cost us some trouble being harrow, and the barrow betting jammed in but, at long and last, we got him streeked out above the blankers. having previously shooken Benjie, and wakened him ve'll hae to take charge gan admissible and add All this being accomplished and got over Blister deenmied leaving me my fiefn' lane, wexcepting Benine who was next to nobody, in the house with the deeing man. What a frightful face he had; all smeared over with blood and powder and I really aloused, that if he died in that room, it would be haunted for ever mair, he being in a manner a murdered man; so that, even should I be acquitted of art and part, his ghost might still come to bother us, making our house a hell upon earth, and frighting us but of our seven senses. Duto in the midse of my dreadful surmises, when all was still, so that you might have heard a bin fall, a knock knock knock came to the door, on which, recovering my senses, I dreaded first that it was the death-chap, and some that the affair had got wind, and that it was the beagles come in search of me; so I kissed little Benjie, who was sitting on his creepie, blubbering and greeting for his parritch, while a tear stood in my own. ce, as I went forward to lift the sneck to let the officers, as Tthought, haffie our house, by carrying off me, its master; but it was, thank heaven, only Tammie

Bodking coming in whistling to his work, with some measuring papers hanging round his neck ti an taui Mos Ah, Tammie, said I to him, my heart warming at a kent face, and making the laddie, although my bounden servant by a regular indenture of five years, a friend in my need, scome in my man, Lifear ye'll hae to take charge of the business for some time sto come; mind what I tell'd we shout the shaping and the cutting, and no making the guse ower warm ; as I doubt I am about to be barled the deeing man. What a friedtoodlot otherway Tammie's heart swelled to his mouth be to Ah maister," he said, "vere joking, What should ye have done that we should be ta'en to sic an ill dered man; so that, even should I be acquif exelut Ay, Tammie, lad," answered I, "it is but over making our house a hell upon earth, and frighti'surt vo" Weel, weels" quo' Tammie I really thought it a great deal of the laddie "weel, weel, they canno prevent me coming to sew beside ve; and if I can take the measure of customers without, we can cut the claith withing But what is't for maister theorb "Come in here," said I to him, " and believe your ain een. Tammie, my man lo daras ni amos salvasd bog Losh me! cried the poor laddie, glowing at the bloody face of the man in the bed. of Ayrosay maister; save us, maister; ay ay ay you have no clowred his harmpan with the guse? its master; but it was, thank heaven, only Tammie

Ay, maister, maister! whaten in unearthly sight!!! I doubt they'll hang us at, you for doing to and ine on suspicion—and Benjie as art and part, puir things But I'll vin for a doctor. Will I, maister?"

The thought had never struck me before, being in a sort of a manner dung stupid; but catching up the word, I said with all my pith and birry. Ring rin, Tammie, rin for life and death Plag saw all as dand

"Parinnic bolted like a nine-year-old, never looking behind his tail beso, in less than ten minutes, he rectained, had having along old Doctor Peelbox, whom he had wankened out of his bed, by the lug and horn at the very time I was trying to quiet young Benzo jie, who was following me upwand down the house of as I was pacing to and fro in distraction, girning and whinging for his breakfast a shad od as year so that

Bud business, bad business; bless us, what is this?" said the old Doctor, staring at Magneezhy's bloody face through his silver spectacles—" What's the matter?" guidod; bosod was booked blood at the barkened blood was bosod;

The poor patient knew at once his maistering tongue, and, lifting up one of his eyes, the other beding stiff and barkened down, said in a melancholym voice, and Ah, master, do you think I'll get better?

Doctor Peelbox; old man us he was, started backed as if he had been a French dancing master; or had stramped on a hot bar of iron. Tom; Tom, is this you? what; in the name of wonder, has done this ?"

the blood, making him look as decentish as possible,

Then feeling his wrist with two your pulse is quiter to be delined in the blood I will be a seen and partie as art and partie on suspicion—and Benjie as art and partie on suspicion.

"Somewhere about the bairy scalp," answered!
Magneezhy, in their own sort of dingo and I doubt some artery's cut through." and remain a to tros a

The Doctor immediately bade him the quiet, and hush, as he was getting a needle and silken thread ready to sew it up pordering me to have a baspn and water ready, to wash the poor lad's physoguid I did so as hard as I was able, though I was not sure about the blood just old Doctor Reelbox watching over my shoulder with a lighted penny candle in one hand, and the needle and thread in the other, to see; where the blood spouted from But we were ps. daft as wise; so he bade me take my hig sheers, and cut out all the hair on the fore part of the head as bare as my loof; and syne we washed; and better washed; so Magneezhy got the other ee up, when the barkened blood was loosed; looking; though as pale as a clean shirt, more frighted than hurt; until it became plain to us all, first to the Ductor, syne to mel and syne to Tammie Bodkin, and last of all to Magneezhy himself, that his skin was not so much as pecled | So we helped him out of the bed, and blitte was I to see the lad standing on the floor, without a stramped on a hot bar of iron. step awo sid no thod

I did my best to clean his neckcloth and shirt of the blood, making him look as decentish as possible, considering circumstances i land lending thind as the scripture commands, any tartan mand to hide the infirmity of his bloody trowsers and waistcoats. Home went he and his master together; most anding at our close mouth, wishing them a good morning, and blithe to see their backs. Indeed, a condemned thief with the rope about his neck, and the white cowl tied over his een, to say nothing of his hands yerked together behind his back, and on the nick of being thrown over, could not have been more thankful for a reprieve than I was, at the same blessed moment. It was like Adam seeing the de'il's rear marching out of Paradise, if one may be allowed to think such a thing.

The whole business, tag, rag, and bob-tail, soon, however, spunked out, and was the town talk for more than one day.—But ye'll hear.

At the first I pitied the poor lads, that I thought had fled for ever and aye from their native country, to Bengal, Seringapatam, Botany Bay, or Jamaica, leaving behind them all their friends and old Scotland, as they might never hear of the goodness of Providence in their behalf. But—wait a wee.

Would you believe it? As sure's death, the whole was but a wicked trick played by that mischievous loon Blister and his cronies, upon one that was a simple and soft-headed callant. De'il a hait was in the one pistol but a pluff of powder; and, in the other, a cartridge paper full of blood was rammed down

correlessing all constraint calcidand the relegation in the social corresponding to the social configuration of the social institution of the social institution of the control of the social discount of the

The whole business, tag, rag, and bob-tail, soon, however, spunked out, and was the town talk for more than one day.—But ye'll hear.

At the first I pitied thepoor lads, that I thought had fled for ever and aye from their native country, to Ben ral, Seringapatam, Botany Bay, or Jamaica, leaving behind them all their friends and old Scotland, as they might never hear of the goodness of Providence in their behalf. But—wait a wee.

Would you believe it? As sure's death, the whole was but a wicked trick played by that mischievous loon Blister and his eronies, upon one that was a simple and soft-headed callant. De'il a hart was in the one pistol but a pluff of powder; and, in the other.

s cartridge paper full of blood was rammed down

no need of his taking the trouble to call again a Upon which he gave his blacked nieve a desperate thumb on the counter, making the observe, that out of respect for him I might have given his son the preferenced Though I was a web puzzled for an answer I said to him, for want of a better, that having a timberleg, he could not well creuk his hough to the shop-Benjie when he had the chincoughbartduo for brand off Houte touts, asaid Saunders, giving his lips a smacks off Creuk his hough, we hody, you ! Do yed think his timber-leg cannas screw off? That'll no looking body of a creature, had come in with lead Lwas a wee dumbfoundered at this cleverness Soil said more on my guard, - " True, true; Saunes effect, where he could best 'salttih rawds'adduderab Baff Ower little, and be hanged to ve! cried the disrespectful fellow/wheeling about on his heel, as a he grasped the sneck of the shop-door, and gave a girnthat showed the only clean parts of his body, too wito the whites of his een, and his sharp teether I "Qwer dittle !- Pu, purlanHe's like the blackand moor's spigothen, Maister Wauch behe'so like theto blackamoor's pig, the may be ver lettle, but he be tam ould;" and with this he showed his back, clapein ping the door at his tail without wishing a good day; and I am scarcely sorry when I confess, that I never cut cloth for either father or son from that hour to this one, the losing of such a customer being no great for matter at best, and almost clear gain, compared with intricate branches of the business, and learn the newest manner of the French and London fashions, by cutting cloth for the young advocates, the college students, and the rest of the principal tip-top bucks.

Having, though I say it myself, the word of being a canny maister, more than one brought their callants to me, on reading the bill of an apprentice wanted" pasted on my shop-window.

Offering to bind them for the regular time, yet not wishing to take but one, I thought best not to fix in a hurry, and make choice of him that seemed more exactly cut out for my purpose. In the course of a few weeks three or four cast up, among whom was a laddie of Ben Aits, the mealmonger, and a son of William Burlings, the baker; to say little of the callant of Saunders Broom the sweep, that would fain have put his blackit-looking bit creature with the one ee under my wing; but I aye looked to respectability in these matters; so glad was I when I got the offer of Mungo Glen—But more of this in half-a-minute.

I must say I was glad of any feasible excuse to make to the sweep, to get quittof him and his laddie, the father being a drucken ne'erodo-weel, that I wonder did not fall long ere this time of day from some chimney-head, and get his neck broken. So I told him at long and last, when he came papping into my shop, plaguing me every time he passed, that I had fitted myself; and that there would be no need of his taking the trouble to call again Upon which he gave his blacked nieve a desperate thump on the counters making the observe, that out of respect for him I might have given his son the preferenced Though I was a web puzzled for an answer I saids to him, for want of a better, that having a timberleg, he could not well creuk his hough to the shope Benjie when he had the chincoughbarteuo for braod aff Hout, touts, asaid Saunders, giving his lips an smacks off Creuk his hough, we body I von ! Do wed think his timber-leg canna screw off? That'll not looking body of a creature, had come in with skaq Lawas at wee adumbfoundered atathis cleverness to So I said more on my guard, True, true, Sauns effect, where he could best 'teltific reworking the tride erab hall Ower little, and be hanged to vell cried the disrespectful fellow/wheeling about on his heel, as he grasped the snecklof the shop door, and gave a girno that showed the only clean parts of his body, too witto the whites of his een; and his sharp teether ! "Qwer little !- Pu, purlanHe's like the blackand moor's pignithen! Maister Wauch to he'so like theto blackamoor's pigs the may be ver'lettle, but he bew tam ould;" and with this he showed his back, clapeit ping the door at his tail without wishing a good day; and I am scarcely sorry when I confess, that I neverw cut cloth for either father or son from that hour to this one, the losing of such a customer being no great a matter at best, and almost clear gain, compared with a saddling myself with a callant with lonly one econdrone deg; the one having fallen a victim to the dregs of the measles, and the other having been harled off by a farmer's thrashing milling However, I got my self-ploperly suited; but ye shall hear will degood?

- Our neighbour Mrs. Grassie, a widow woman uncolintimate with our wife; and very attentive to Benjie when he had the chincough had a fartaward cousin of the name of Glen, that held out among the howes of the Lammermoor hills, a distant parts of the Country, ve observes and ald Glengua decentis looking body of a creature, had come in with his sheltie, about some private matters of businesssuch as ther buying of a horse, or something to that effect, where he could best fall in with its either at our fairror the Grassmarket, or such like so he had up-pitting free of expense from Mrs. Grassie, on acid count of his relationship & Glen being second cousing to Mrs/ Grassie's brother's wife, which is deceased I might, indeed, have mentioned, that our heighbour herself had been twice married, and had the misery of seeing out both her gudemen but sic was then will of fate, and she bore up with perfect resignad tam onld;" and with this he showed his back, claneit

Having made a bit warm dinner ready for shear was variety body; and knew what was what; shear thought she could not do better than ask in a reputable neighbour to help here friend to cat it; and taked a dheerer with him; asl maybes being a stranger slike; he would not like to use the freedom of drinking by himself, a custom which is at the best an siunsocial one of especially with none but women folk remain him; so she did me the honour to make choice of me though I say it who should not say it :o and when we got our jug falled for the second time, and began to grow better acquainted, ye would just -worlder to see how we became merry, and cracked hway just like two pen-guns. I asked him, ye see, radiout sheep and cows; and corn and hay, and plough--dog and thrashing, and horses and carts, and fallow land mand lambing time, and ha rst, and making - theese and butter, and selling eggs, and curing the sturdie, and the snifters, and the batts, and such plike sorand heain his turn, made inquiry regarding broad and nerrow eloth, Kilmarnock cowls, worsted e comforters, Shetland hose mittens, leather-caps, stuffing and padding, metal and mule-buttons, thorls, o pocket-linings, serge, twist, buckram, shaping and sewing back-splaying, cloth-runds, goosing the labbroad, bodkins, black thread, patent shears, measurding and all the other particulars belonging to our ntrade, which he said, at long and last, after we had -ficked together, was a power better one than the farmling a-head, in Laird Wheatley's barn.

gnifo. Veshould make from son ane then in said I, shift ye think son a Have ye any bairus in all to bue I to Ye've hit the mail, on the head. Od manuif the wasna sae for away. I would bind our auddest callant to yoursell, I'm sae weel pleased wi yere gentlemany manners." But I'm speaking havers."

"Havers here or havers there, what," said I, "is to prevent ye boarding him, at a cheap rate, either with our friend Mrs. Grassie, or with the wife?

Either of the two would be a sort of mother to him."

ter Glen, stroking his chin, which was gey rough, and had not got a clean since Sunday, having had four days of sheer growth, our meeting, you will observe by this, being on the Thursday afternoons. Deed would they. 'Od, I mann speak to the mistress about it."

On the head of this we had another jug, three being cannie, after which we were both a wee tozy mozy; so I dare say Mrs. Grassic saw plainly that we were getting into a state where we would not easily make halt; so, without letting on, she brought in the teathings before us, and showed us a play-bill; to tell us that a company of strolling play actors had come in a body in the morning, with a whole cartful of scenery and grand dresses; and were to make an exhibition at seven o'clock; at the ransom of a shilling a-head, in Laird Wheatley's barn.

Many a time and often and I heard of play acting; and of players making themselves kings and queens, and saying a great many wonderful things; but I had never before an opportunity of making myself a witness to the truth of these hearsays. So Maister Glens being as full of monsense, and as fain to have s his curiosity gratified as myself, we took upon us the -stout resolution to go out together, he offering to Weat me gand I determined to run the risk of Maisster Wiggie, our minister's rebuke, for the transgresesionedioping it would make ne lasting impression on bhis mind, being for the first and only time. Folks Ushould notion all occasions be over scrupulous agost while the door never while of live and breather will de forget what we saw and heard that night; it just looks to me, by all the sworld then I think on it, like a fairy dream The bplace was knowded to the leas Maister Glen and me -baving nearly got our ribs dung in before we found -nesent and they behind were obliged to mount the shack beaches to get a sight be Right to the fore-hand nof us mas a large green curtain, some five or six ells bivides a good deal the worse of the wear, having seen bservice through two three summers; and, just in the afront of its were eight or ten penny candles stuck in - abboard fastened to the ground, to let, us see the players' feet like, when they came on the stage, band even before they came on the stage, for the feurtain being scrimpithinhlengthe we saw legs and refeets moving behind the scenes very meatly ; while ytwo blind fiddlers they had brought with them, played the bonniest ve ever heard of Od the very music was worth a sixpence of itself yeq llad a lo noel

1918 The place, as I said before, was choke full viust otolexcess? so that one could schreek breathenel Indeed I never saw unt part so crowded, not even at a tent-preaching, when Mr. Roarer was giving his dis--courses on the building of Solomon's Temple. 189We -were obligated to have the windows opened for a mouthful of fresh air the barn being as lobse as a baker's oven, my neighbour and me faining our red faces with our hats, to keep us cool; and though all were half stewed, we had the worst of ity the toddy hwe had taken having fermented the blood of our boheard that night; it just, rever tiefrer a bini leathe ed T Just at the time that the two blind fiddlers were Playing the Downfal of Paris, a handbell rango and bayogoes the green curtain; being hauled to the ceiland as I observed with the tail of my endy whirblife at the side, that had hold of a rope of Soyd of the almusic stopping and all becoming as still as that you "might lave heard a pine fall, sin comes a decembrold gentleman at his leisure, well powdered with an old "fashioned coat on, waistcoat with dap-pockets, brown breeches with buckles at the knees and silk stockings with red gushats on a blue groundit Jonever Sawa man in such distress he stamped about, band better stamped about, dadding the end of his staff of the ground, and imploring all the powers of heaven -and earth to help him bol find out his bruin away daughter, that had decemped with some me'er-do-weig loon of a half-pay captain, that keppit her inchis arms from her bedroom window, up two pairs of have said more to one another, or gone grariets Every father and head of a family must have felt for a man in his situation, thus to be robbed of his dear bairnstand an only daughter too, as he told us overband over again, as the salt salt tears dan gusliing down his withered face, and the averblew his nose of his clean calendered pocket mapking But ve ken, the thing was absurd to suppose that we should know anything about the matter, having hew very seen either him for this valual ter between the een before, and notokenning them by headmarks a so; though we sympathized with him as folks ought todo with a fellow-creature in affliction, we thought it best to hold our tongues to see what might cast up better than he expected. So out he went stuniping at the other side, determined, he said, to find them out, though he should follow them to the world's, end, Johnny Great's House, or something to that his manner of speaking, and the rewards he settosits Hardly was his back turned, and almost before ye could cry Jack Robison comes the birline and the very young lady the old gentleman described named and arm together, smoodging and laughing like daft. Dogron it! itavas a shamelessopiece of business As true as death, before all the crowd of folk, the put shis/arm ground herowaist, and called her This sweetheart, and love, and dearie, and darling, and everything that is fine! of If they had been courting in arcloss together on har riday night, they could not have said more to one another, or gone greater lengths I thought such sharpe to be an eye-witness to sic on-goings, that I was obliged at last to hold up my hat before my face; and look down a though, the all that, the woung slad, to be such a blackguard as his conduct showed; was well renough faured) and had a good coat to his back, with double gilto but tons; and fashionable lapells, to say little of a wery well-made pair of buckskins, a little the worse of the wear to be sure; but which, if they had been well cleaned, would have looked abnost as good as new-How they had come rived never could dearny as we neither saw chaise inor gig; but, from his having spurs on his bootsy it is more than likely that they had lighted at the back-door of the barn from a horse, she riding on a pad behind him maybe, with her out, though he should follow tries withhurroblind In The father looked to be a rich old book both from his manner of speaking, and the rewards he seemed to offer for the appreliension of his daughten to but, to be sure in wheir so many of as were present that had an legital right to the sphlzie, it would not be a great deal a thousand pounds when divided, still it was worth the dooking after; so we just bidit a As true as death, before all the crowd of folk, saw In Things were brought to al bearing, howsdever, sooner than dither themselves I dare say, not any body else present seemed to have the least iglimpse of for squst in the middle of their fine goings only the sound of a coming footowas heard, and the lassied taking quilt to hers eried tout of Hide me chide me; for the sake of goodness, for wonder comes my auld centleman-dinna believe him, friendtablis No somer said than done 299 In he stappit her ifine to a closer; and, after shutting the door on her, the sat down apon a chair, pretending to be asleep in m moment. The old father came bounding incland seeing the fellow as sound as a topy he ran forward and gied him such a shake, as of he would have shooken him all sundry which soon made him open his een as fast as he had steeked them at After blackguarding the chield at no allowance cursing hill and down dale, and calling bim vevery name but a gentleman, he held his staff over his crown, and gripping him by the cuff bf the neck; asked him what he had made of his daughter. "Never since I was born did I ever see such brazen faced impureence in The rescal had the brass to say at office. That he had not seen word or wittens withhe lassie for a month though more than a hundred folk sitting in his company had seen him danting ber with his arm round her jimpy warst, not five minutes before! As a man, as a father ans un elder of our Rick, thy corruption was raised, for I ave hated by ing, as a poor cowardly sin, and an inbreak on the ten commandments, and I found my neiboury Mr. Glen, fidgetting on the seat as well as me , soll

thought that who ever spoke first, would have the best right to be lentitled to the reward; whereupons just as he was in the act lof wising up, I took the word out of his mouth, saying of Dinna believe him. auld gentleman-dinna believe him, friendinheis tellingd at parcels of lees and Never saw here for a month! It's notworth arguing, or calling witnesses just open that press-door, and we'll see whether I'm moment. The old father cantentrothirt ginksens b-The old man stared, and looked dumfoundered; and the young man, instead of running forward with his double nieves to strike me, the only thing I was feared for began a laughing, as if I had done him a good turn But hever since I had a being did I ever witness such an uproar and noise as immediately took place. The whole house was so glad that the scoundrel had been exposed, that they set up sicean a roar of laughter and thumped away, at siccan to rate at the boards with their feet, that at long and last, with pushing and, fidgetting, and holding their sides down fell the place they call the gallenys all the folk init being hurl'd topsy-turvvd head foremost among the saw-dust on the floor below at their guffawing soon being turned to howling, each one crying londer than another at the top note of their voices, 15 Murder ! murder ! hand aff me ; murder | my ribs are in murder | I'm killed -H'm speechless!' and other lamentations to that effect : so that a rush to the door took place, in which everything was overturned—the door-keeper being wheeled away like wildfire—the farms stramped to preces the lights knocked out and the two blind fiddlers dung head foremost over the stage, the bass fiddle cracking like thunder at every bruise. Such tearing, and swearing, and tumbling, and squeeting was never witnessed in the memory of man, since the building of Babel : legs being likely to be broken sides staved in, eyes knocked out, and lives lost there being only one door, and that a small one; so that, when we had been carried off our feet that length, my wind was fairly gone, and a sick dwalm came over me, lights of all manner of colours, red blue, green, and orange, dancing before me, that entirely deprived me of common sense; till, on opening my eyes in the dark, I found myself leaning with my broadside against the wall on the opposite side of the closs. It was some time before I minded what had happened; so, dreading skaith, I found first the one arm, and then the other, to see if they were broken-syne my head-and syne both of my legs; but all as well as I could discover, was skin-whole and scart-free. On perceiving this, my joy was without bounds, having a great notion that I had been killed on the spot. So I reached round my hand, very thankfully, to take out my pocket-napkin, to give my brow a wipe, when lo and behold the tail of my Sunday's coat was fairly off and away, docked by the haunch buttons.

So much for plays and play-actors the first and last, I trust in grace, that I shall ever see But indeed I could expect no better, after the warning that Maister Wiggie had more than once given us from the pulpit on the subject; so, instead of getting my grand reward for finding the old man's daughter, the whole covey of them, no better than a set of swindlers, took leg-bail, and made that very night a moonlight flitting; and Johnny Hammer honest man, that had wrought from sunrise to sunset for two days, fitting up their place by contract, instead of being well paid for his trouble, as he deserved, got nothing left him but a ruckle of his own good deals, all dung to shivers.

blue, green, and orange, daileding below that entirely deprived me of common sense; till, on opening my eyes in the dark, I found myself leaning with my broadside against the wall on the opposite side of the closs. It was some time before I minded what had happened; so, dreading skaith, I found first the one arm, and then the other, to see if they were broken-syne my head-and syne both of my legs; but all as well as I could discover, was skin-whole and On perceiving this, my joy was without scart-free. bounds, having a great notion that I had been killed So I reached round my hand, very on the spot. thankfully, to take out my pocket-napkin, to give my brow a wipe, when lo and behold the tail of my Sunday's coat was fairly off and away, docked by the haunc buttons.

put a thimbleful of brandy, Thomas Mixem's real, into my first cup of tea, which had a wonderful virtue in putting all things to rights; so that I was up and had shaped a pair of lady's corsets, an article in which I sometimes dealt, before ten o'clock, though the morning being rather cold, I did not dispense with my Kilmayryyx RATTAHD

At eleven in the forenoon, or thereabouts, maybe five minutes here of all savery real and and comes my crony Maister Glen, rather dazed-like about the een; and with sales wan need melos right seeks diw one; need ter, about half a nailsan didgosolide a seier birAns cheeks, and over the brig of see but and in the brig of appearance; outlandish, and the brig outlandish, and the bright so that I was a throweld manager at what neibours might-susualise concerning our intimacy; but the honest man accounted for the thing in a very feasi-ON the morning after the business of the playhouse happened, I had to take my breakfast in my bed, a thing very uncommon to me, being generally up by cock-craw, except on Sunday mornings whiles, when each one according to the bidding of the Eourth Commandment, has a license to do as he likes ; having a desperate sore head, and a squeamishness at the stomach, occasioned, I jalouse, in a great measure, from what Mr. Glen and me had discussed at Widow Grassie's, in the shape of warm toddy over our cracks concerning what is called the agricultural and manufacturing interests So our wife poor body, put a thimbleful of brandy, Thomas Mixem's real, into my first cup of tea, which had a wonderful virtue in putting all things to rights; so that I was up and had shaped a pair of lady's corsets, an article in which I sometimes dealt, before ten o'clock, though the morning being rather cold, I did not dispense

CHAPTER XMOORAHIN ym diw

At eleven in the forenoon, or thereabouts, maybe five minutes before or after, but no matter, in comes my crony Maister Glen, rather dazed-like about the een; and with a large piece of white sticking-plaister, about half a nail wide across one of his cheeks, and over the brig of his nose; giving him a wauf, outlandish, and rather blackguard sort of appearance; so that I was a thought uneasy at what nei'bours might surmise concerning our intimacy; but the honest man accounted for the thing in a very feasible manner, from the falling down on that side of his head of the of the brass candlesticks, while he was lying on his broadside, before one of the farms in cock-craw, except on Sunday mornings Weiling Hell His purpose of calling was to tellome, that he could not leave the down without looking in upon me to bid me farewell ! more betaken as he intend ed sending in his son Munici by the currier for trial; to see how the line of life pleased him, and how I thought he would answer, mything which I was glad came from his side of the house, being likely to be in the orpshot the best for both parties to Year thought he would find our way of doing so canny and comfortable, that it was not very likely he could ever start objections ; and I must confess, that I looked forward with no small degree of pride seeing the probability of my soon having the son of a Lammermuir farmer sitting cross-legged, cheek for jowlwith me on the board, and bound to serve me at all lawful times, by night and day, by a regular indenture of five years Maister Glen insisted on the laddie having a three months' trial; and then, afters a wee show of standing out, just to make him aware. that I could be elsewhere fitted if I had a mind I agreed that the request was reasonable, and that In had no earthly objections to conforming with it. Soafter giving him his meridian, and a bite of shortbread, we shook hands, and parted in the understanding, that his son would arrive on the top of limping Jamie the carrier's cart, in the course, say of cork-Save us! all at once it gave a thud ittgintrol s

Through the whole of the forepart of the day, It remained rather queerish, as if something was workeding about my inwards, and a droll pain between my centro. The wife saw the case I was in mand advised me, for the sake of the fresh air, to take a step into the bit garden, and try a hand at the spade, their smell of the new earth being likely to operate as all cordial; but no it would not do!; and when I came in at one o'clock to my dinner, the steam of the fresh il broth, instead of making me feel as usual as hungiv

as an hawk, was like to turn only istomen, while the sight of the slicep's head, one of the printest ones In had seen the whole season, made me as sick as a dog ? so I could do not him but take a thin out again, and swig away at the small beer, that never seemed abled to slocken my drouth 29 Ato languished Tast of minded" having heard Andrew Redbeak, the excise officer. say, that nothing ever but him right after a debosh a except something they call a bottle of sodif water ut some wife despatched Benjie to the place where wel knew it would be found; and he returned in a fiffer with a thing like a blacking bottle below his daidly di as he was bidden of There being par wire over offer cork, for some purpose or other, or maybe just to look near we had some dight to get it turnarway but a at last we succeeded and had tabled about for a fuerd and the wife was rummaging for the screw While's Benjie was fiddling away with his fingers at the cork-Save us! all at once it gave a thud like things der, thiving the cork over poor Benjie's head while it spouted up in his een like a fire engine, and Figure only just time to throw downsthe fug; and to with the distile to my mouth sa Duckily, for the sixpence it costs there was a diop left, which tasted! by all the world just like brisk dish-washings but for all's that, it had a wonderful power of setting incluses rights; and my moddle in a while began to clear theo like of March-day after of heavy shower of one on it in I mind very well too on the afternoon of the died vidual same day; that my door-neighbour. Thomas Burlings, popped in land in our two-handed crack over the counter, after asking metingar dry curious ways if he had come by norskaith in the abusiness of the play he said the thing had now spread for and wide, and was making a great noise in the world. I thought the body a wee sharp in his observes presel pretended to take it quite lightly, proceeding in my shaping-out a pair of buckskin breeches which I was making for one of the Duke's huntsmen ; so, seeing he was off the scenty he said; in a more jobose but we see the lang and the short o' the storwisw a Mwell, speaking about buckskins, Vill tell ve in son of them, coing through the that dueday dots bing biff Let us hear't," said Lig for I was in that sort of queerish way that I did not care much about being nature on their usual rations of beef, and yaudnivey suff Vielse gettit as I heard it i'r quo' Thomas ; 68 and it's no less worth telling that it bears a good moral application vin its tail a dafter the same fashion that a blister does good by sugking away the vicious hus mours of the body, thereby making the very paint it gives preciousdian And hered though maybe hit was just my thought the body stroked his ching and gave mes adkind of half gley, as much as saying, " take that to ye, nei'bour." But I deserved it all. and could not take it ill off his hand, being, like myself, one of the elders of our kirk, and an honest enough, precise-speaking man all 998 " zeffoYe see ove ken," said Thomas, "that the Bread albane Fencibles, auwheen Highland binkies were putrintoy campuats Fisherrow links, maybe for the benefit of their douking, on account of the fiddle *--on maybe in case the French should land at the water-mouth or maybe to give the regiment the Benefit of the sea air or maybe to make their bare houghs hardier, for it was the winter time, frost and shawibeing as plenty as yellike, and no sae scarce as pantaloous among the core or for some ither reason, guide bade or indifferent, which distra muckle matters but ye see the lang and the short o' the story is; that there they were encamped, man and mother's son of them, going through their dreels by day, and sleeping by night-the privates in their tents, and the offishers in their marquees, living in the course of nature on their usual rations of beef, and tammiesy and so ommoSo, ye understand me, there was mae such smart ordering of things in the army in those days the men note having the beef is ervedient que them by a butcher, supplying each company brooms panies by a written contract, drawn up between him and the paymaster before b but illumne bringing what pleased him, either tripe; trotters, steaks, cows-cheek, pluck, hough, spar-rib, "take that to ye, nei'bour." But Arof oz ro, jaggii and could not take it ill off his hand, being, like myself, one of the elders of our kirk, and an honest . See Dr. Jamieson - Proposicion de l'accome

"'Qd !" said I, "Thomas, ye crack like a minister. Where did ye happen to pick up all that know-" So, as ye'll pay attention to observe, there aghal

"Where should I have got it, but from an auld half-pay sergeant-major, that lived in our spare. room, and had been out in the American war, having seen a power of service, and been twice wounded, once in the aff-cuit, and the other time in the cuff of in Badenough, or thereabouts; and for having a dead

"I thought as muckle," said I-" Weel, say on, spirituous liquois; ye observe, de dinking "Weel," continued he, " let me see where I was at when ye stoppit me; for maybe I'll hae to begin at the beginning again. For gif ve venterrupt me, or edge in a word, or put me out by asking questions, I lose the thread of my discourse, and canna proceed.

"Ou, let me see," said I, " ye was about the contract concerning the beef." " 'Od. it's diverting. " Preceesely," quo' Thomas, stretching out his fore-finger, " ye've said it to a hair. At that time, as I was observing, the butcher didna supply a company or companies, according to the terms of a contract, drawn up before 'sponsible witnesses, between him and the paymaster; but the soldiers got beefmoney along with their pay ; with which said money. given them, ye observe, for said purpose, they were bound and obligated, in terms of the statute, to buy, purchase, and provide the said beef, twice a-week or oftener, as it might happen; an orderly offisher making hispection of the camp-kettles regularly every forenoon at one o clock of the readbouts. or bib ered W

"So, as ye'll pay attention to observe, there was a private in Captain M. Tavish's company, the second to the left of the centre, of the name of Duncan Mac-Alpine, a wee, hardy, blackaviced, in-knee d creature, remarkable for mething that ever I heard tell of, except being reported to have shotten a gauger in Badenough, or thereabouts; and for having a desperate red nose, the effects, ye observe, of drinking spirituous liquors; ye observe, I daur say, the effects of drinking mail specific.

weel, week after week passed ower, and better passed ower, and Duncan played an his tricks, like another Herman Boaz, the slight-o-hand juggler, him that's suspecket to be in league and paction with the de il. But ye'll hear.

"Od, it's diverting, Thomas, state out in min, and I to him, "Precessely," que Thomas, stretching in gang in an in grange out in the control of the control

Weel, ye see, as I was observing. Let me see, where was I at?—Ou ay, having a paction with the de il. So, when all were watching beside the camplettles, some stirring them with spurtles, or partichsticks, or forks, or whatever was necessary, the orderly offisher made a point and practice of regularly coming bye, about the chap of one past meridian, as I observed to ye before, to make inspection of what ilka ane had wared his pay on, and what he had got simmering in the het water for his dinner.

un So, on the day congerning which I am about to speak, it fell out, as usual, that the happened to ber making his rounds, halting a moment, or two maybe, before ilka pet; the man that had the charge there of, by the way of stirring like, clapping down his lang fork, and bringing up the piece of meat, or whatever he happened to be making kail of to det the inspector see whether it was lamb, book, beefs mutton, or veal. For, ye observe," continued Thomas, giving me, as I took it to myself, another queer side lookal the purpose of the offisher making the inspection was to see that they laid out their pays money conform to military regulation pland not to fyling their stamicks, and ruining baith sowl and body, by throwing it away on whisky, as but ower mony that aiblins should have kenned better, have Weel, what came next?" dune but too often."

off Tischut owentrue," said I till him; fabut the best will fa' intil a faut sometimes. We have a' our failings, Thomas "revenu" need annib I erus m' I "

I "a Just so," answered Thomas a "but where was I at?—Ou, about the whisky. Weel, speaking about the whisky, I where the offishery Lovetenant Todrick, I bilief they called him; had made an observe about Duffan's kettlers so, when he came to him! Duncan was sitting in the lown side of a dyke, with his red nose, and a pipe in his cheek, lon a big stane, glowring frae chim mither way h and, as a linear saying when he came to him he said, of hWeek Duncan MacAlpine, what have we in speak, it fell out, as usual. Slambyah add shipshorivey offyAnd Duncan orinning downd his dang forks and swered in his ain Highland brogue way filleased your honours, just my hilld favourite, tripe off you to 10" ADeed Duncanell said Lovetenant Todrick or whatever others can'd him sit is an auld favourite, surely, ford have never seen be have onything elses mutton, or yeal. For, ye observe. nem rennibl' way not alffe Every man to his taste; please your honour to answered Duncan MacAlpine to let ilka ane please! her namesell, so hanling up a screed half a yard lange 'allka manato his daste, please your honour, Loven fyling their stamicks, and ruining balairbe Wannet 1946 Odyman," said I to himy "97 Odyman, we're ad dencon rattetellingual storyblu Yle'ren al queen handar Weel, what came next?" dune but too often." sits What think ye should come mext?" I que Thobest will fa' intil a faut sometimes. We haviirb' sum "I'm sure I dinna ken," answered Hood T spailiel ans Weels" said hearfall telbe but where was I I at ?-Ou, about the whisky. Weel, speaking abbins Nor Ou Tab the observe of Lovetenant Todrick, out what they can'd him about the tripe; and the an-I swer of Duncan MacAlpine on that head, at That was sitting in the lown sidestate nis sitting in the lown sidestating sidestating in the lown sidestating sidestating sidestat Two Verastrue said Lavetenant Todrick, but lift it out a thegither on that dish, till I get my spees ong when he came to him he said, for inever since I was born; did Luever see shefore boiled (tripe with shittons and button-holes (intillital) Aboth's A set tib arlandlanghing which I could not delpothough it was like to split my sideshibut Thomas Burlings bade me whisht till I keard him full of wickedness and a' manner of cheatrie." boll & Buttonstand button-holes II' quo' Dimdan Mac-Alpine. 'Look again, Wilvivere specs of for vere suzely Wrang a Lovetenant Todrield' ev bellet I 22 19 % Buttons and button boles bland deed Island surely idight Duncan lanswered bthey Lovetenant Todrick, I taking his specs deliberately off the brigon his nose, and faulding them thegitherinas he bout them firsteinto his blordeco case, land "syne into his pocket .- Howsomever; Duncan MacAlpine, Ellipass ye ower for this time, egifove take my twaning and for the future in yare voud pay Imoney on wholesome butcher's meattalike at Christiany and nothe trying to delude your alinistamickeandi your offisher's rema by holding ups on a forkesitch wheathenish make up for a dishuas the leg of a pair o' buokskin breebhes Bluos " Buckskin breeches Tonsaid the and udid the

really and actually boil siccan trash to his dinner?"

of Mae san far south as that yet; friend, "answered thomas deffi Dunkan was not so bowed in the intelligent as ye imagine, and had some spice of algorithm about this queen manageners. Eat sibban trashe to his dinner bake yemair, Mahsie, than tye intend to yem obe the discount had been discounted and which the had been discounted and the south as the s

"I telled ye before, Ifrien, I answered from as, Inthat he was a deboched creature grands like ower many in the world, likit weel what didna do himlony good a It is alweavy furthings that whick late wishoff could be banished to Botany Bay Much bus , eson aid aff It is that, "Isaid Las "Muche and machithesth does it breed and produce out this world." — tellough for I mighad, "quoth Thomas, estroking down this chin inta sleenway, "It meghad the guilty should see the folly o their him ways rife the first step, eye kend till amendmentife—and indeed I tell to Maister Wight gie; when he sent me dere, that I could almost be conference guid for your being main wary of your conducts for the future time I to come? endowed a list world."

This was like a thunder clajito ule, and I did her know, for a hifflie, what the feell think; or do, faire than perceiving that it was a piece of devilish cruelty on their parts, taking things! on this strict. Was for myself, I could freely take sacred onth on the Book, that I had not shid a draft, in myself of for four months before; the knowledge of which made my Corruption the lite lightning, as a minute bye brave twhen he is minocent; she giving my powdroit scart, in this work, or over a liter some session business in this work, are we may non-remove a brown

"Ye've just guessed it," answered Thomas But-Yings, sleeking down his front hair with his fingers, off a sober way! We we mad a meeting this northword; and it was resolved ve should stand a public rebuke the Relief Styll velbring ho Berick- enite met in ym defrang me, if of the grandswered I, than blug nly billeve about with all my might which the recurrer, and Throwing back thy cowl Behind the tinto a comie. -46 No, finant pataded Is shapping with glear patrany other and the house of the har seems as for all the and the same and elders that ever were decknes of hely hiav do their best , and sve may tell their so, if ye like. Tawasqborn antree man; bridge in layfree Country: I am the subject of a nee king and consti-"tution"; and I'll be shot before I submit to such rank would go back and plead before then the libilidialf. qual Hoof and fairly," quoth Thomas, staring a wee astonished like, and not a little surprised to see only birse up in this marrier , for, when he thoughe apon shearing at lamb, he found he had catched a fartar; softalming down as that as ve like, hersaid, a Hoof and fairly Mansie, open Maister Wauch, P Believe. he did me the nonday told can me, you they it may be no be sae hard as they threaten. But ye ken, int friend, I'm speaking to ye as a brither; it was an

nnce-like business for an elder not only to gang till a play, which is one of the deevil's tenderouses, but to gang there in a state of liquor; making yoursell a world's wonder—and you an elder of our kirk!!

Liput the question to yourself, soberly?" His threatening I could despise, and could have fought, suffed, and kicked with all the ministers and elders of the General Assembly, to say nothing of the Relief Synod, and the Burgher Union, before I would have demeaned myself to yield to what my inward spirit plainly told me to be rank cruelty and injustice; but ah ! his calm, brotherly, flattering way I could not thole with, and the tears came rapping into my een, faster than it cared my manhood to let be seen; so I said till him, "Weel, weel, Thomas, I ken I have done wrong ; and I am sorry for't : they'll never find me in siccan a scrape again." adid Thomas Burlings then came forward in a friendly way and shook hands with me; telling that he would go back and plead before them in my behalf. He said this over again, as we parted, at my shop door, and, to do him justice, surely he had not been worse than his word, for I have ave attended the kirk as usual, standing, when it came to my rotation at the plate, and nobody, gentle or semple, ever spoke to me on the subject of the play-house, or minted the matter of the Rebuke from that day no be sae hard as they threaten. But ye kaidtat friend. I'm speaking to ve as a brither; it was an

was something genty and delicate-like about him. having a pale sharp face, blue een, a nose like a hawk's, and long yellow hair hanging about his haffets, as if barbers were unce scarce cattle among the howes of the Lammermur hills. Having a peneral experience of human nature. I say that I would have something to detective arright of the protection of illustration. The Mark And Training the best with the same of the what something his opportunities he had been well educated and I liked his appearance on the whateher this wife with the same appearance on the whateher this wife wife and I liked his

To divert history washing is abelian my sould a revite of this cold drops of sweathang on my trembling flesh; the with the first bull 127 of 170 or min on the word to sweathang on my trembling flesh; the with borror.

One near to such the word on the word to such a such a such as the word to such a such as the word to such milk, to let him see the town, and all the unces about it. I told Benjie first (chart see the model with the letter in the see the see that I kink to the see the see that I kink to the see the see the see the see that I kink to the see the see the see that I kink to the see the see that I kink to which is see all the fifth stew stood ban williard till as for nason-worken khodefured and thousand the fearth should mellow-nessen: and at the heat of the conner colt's belly min ni to liet grand affais daynging bergindly as sishi namatuo irke a of morning For sixed diving coals were the symbols and a -- we direct His teeth were calcined, and his tongue was so drawn-live If rathled sgainst them as though you should try To play the piano in thimbles. nustens and seed hanging up on clecks, in reasting and boding pieces -spor-rib figget, shoulder, and In the course of a fortnight from the time I parted with Maister Glen, the Lander carriers Imping . Jamie, brought his callant to our shop door in his hand. He was a tall, slender laddie, some foorteen years old, and, some grown away, from his closs. There was something genty and delicate-like about him, having a pale sharp face, blue een, a nose like a hawk's, and long yellow hair hanging about his haffets, as if barbers were unco scarce cattle among the howes of the Lammermuir hills. Having a general experience of human nature, I saw that I would have something to do towards bringing him into a state of rational civilization; but, considering his opportunities he had been well educated, and I liked his appearance on the whole not that ill-

To divert him a while, as I did not intend voking him to work the first day, I sent out Benjie with him, after giving him some refreshment of bread and milk, to let him see the town, and all the uncos about it. I told Benjie first to take him to the auld kirk, which is one wonderful ancient building; and as for mason-work, far before anything to be seen or heard tell of in our day, syne to Lugton brig, which is one grand affair, hanging over the muckle water like a rainbow-syne to the Tolbooth, which is a terror to evil-doers, and from which the Lord preserve us all! -syne to the Market, where ye'll see lamb, beef. mutten, and yeal, hanging up on cleeks, in roasting and boiling pieces-spar-rib, jigget, shoulder, and heuk bane, in the greatest prodigality of abundance ; miand syner down to the Duke's gate, by looking through the bonny white painted iron stanchels of which yell see the deer running beneath the green strees; and the palace itself, in the inside of which dwells one that needs not be proud to call the king heard him greeting to himself in the driguoz sid, Brawly did I ken, that it is a wee after a laddie's being loosed, from his mother's apron string, and hurried from home, till the mind can make itself up to stay among fremit folk ; or that the attention can be roused to anything saids or done however simple in the uptake. So after Benjie brought Mungo home again, gey forfaughten and wearied-out like, I hade the wife give him his four hours, and told him he might go to his bed as soon as he liked. Jalousing also, at, the same time, that creatures brought ap in the country have strange notions about them with respect | to supernaturals such as | ghaists. brownies, fairies, and bogles to save nothing of witches, warlocks, and evil spirits, I made Benjie take off his claes and lie down beside him las I said, to keep him warm t but, in plain matter of fact (between friends a that the callant might sleep sounder. finding himself in a strange bed, and not very sure as to how the house stood as to the matter of a good ample is better than precept, as James Battepmen skenning by my lown common sense, and from long experience of the ways of a wicked world, that there is nothing like industry, I went to Mangols bedside in the morning, and wakened him betimes. Indeed I'm leeing there I need not call it wakening him - for Benjie told me, when he was supping bis parritch out of his luggie at breakfast-time that he never winked an eg all night, and that sometimes he heard him greeting to himself in the darkingsuch and so powerful is our love of home, and the force of natural affection Howsbever, as I was saving, I took him ben the house with me, down to the workshow where I had begun to cut out a pair of hankeen trowsers for a young lad, that was to be marmed the week after to a servint maid of Maister Wingie's arrigomean, that afterwards made him of good wife, and the father of a numerous small might go to his bed as soon as he liked. Jaytimir In Speaking of nankeen, I would advise every one, as a friend, to buy the Indian, and not the British kind the expense of outlay being ill hained, even at sixpence a vard—the latter not standing the washing, but making a man's legs, at a distance, look take off his class and lie down sailfoybwolley b sail -9dIt behaved me now as a maister, bent on the improvement of his prentice, to commence learning Munga some few of the mysteries of our trade has having showed him the way to crook his hough, (example is better than precept, as James Batter 1061serves.) I taught him the plan of holding the needle; and having fitted his middle-finger with a bottomless thimble of our own sort, I set him to sewing the cotton-lining into one leg, knowing that it was a part not very particular, and not very likely to be seen so that the matter was not great, whether the stitching was exactly regular, or rather in the rigg zighthe Mast customary with all new beginners, he made a desperate awkward handaime, and or which I would of course have said nothing, due that we chanced to brog this thimb and completely soiled the whole breter dry work with the stails of bloude batchile was was word of the control of the hold being been search for another, was an unticky oneit in a compliment to manifag being a feet of hadden of Everyman should be on his guardo This was us lesson parded where I was the believe butteers one the time Bonaparte was expected to Tant down at Danui Bar. Luckily for mes in this case, of mid, by some foolish mistake I of atlattler, made an allowance of a Half-ward; over this above what I found Peoble mant age to shape or hose I both will be up any blind at call but the piece altogether, It within in the back The that business I trust I slowed the interest a good tradesman, having managed to do it so neat IV. that it could not be horiced without the harrows est inspection; and having the Havanthee of house ering by the coat-flaps, Had indeed no chance of Being glazed cover, was yell shaw baredesh no desperate my Gran sit this distant galife galife and which this and hicky mischance anappened, ban accident almost as Bad Befelf, though not to the, farther than that every one is bound, by the Ten Commandments, tomay nothing of his own conscience, to take a part in the his desperationod ish wood visit fired said short ship

Ju Willen The voice of man was wheisht, and all was

snak in the sound sleep of midnight, it chanced that Lyas, busy dreaming that I was sitting one of the spectators, looking at another, play-acting piece of business Before coming this length, howsoever, I should by right have observed, that before going to bed I had eaten for my supper part of a black pudding, and two sousages, that widow Grassie had sent in a compliment to my wife, being a genteel woman and mindful of her friends so that I must have had some sort of night mare, and not been exactly in my seven senses relse I could not have been even dreaming lof siccan a place Well as I was saying, in the playhouse I thought I was; and all at once, I heard Maister Wiggie, dike one crying in the swilderness, halloging with a loud voice through the window, bidding me flee from the spares, traps, and gin nets of the Evil One; and from the terrors of the weath to come and was in a terrible funk; and just as I was trying to rise from the seat that seemed somehow glued to my body, and would not letime to teresch down my hate which with its glazed cover, was hanging on a pin to one side, my face all red, and glowing like a fiery furnace, for shame of being a second time caught in deadly sin-I heard the kirk-bell jow-jowing, as if it was the last trump summoning sinners to their long and black account mand Maister Wiggie thrust in his arm in his desperation in a whirlying of passion, claughting hold of my hand like a vice to drag me out

head foremost Even in my sleep, howsever, it appears that I like free-will, and ken that there are no slaves in our blessed country; so I tried with all my might to pull against him; and gave his arm such a drive back! that he seemed to bleach over on his side, and raised a hullaballoo of a vell, that not only wakened me, but made me start upright in univ open, and their een staring with fright; while, bed Por all the world such a scene buildwife was roaring, " Murder, murder !- Mansie Wauch, will ve no wanken?-Murder, murder! ve've felled me wi' ye're nieve, ve've felled me outright, b I'm gone for evermain my haill teeth are down inv throat will ve no wanken, Mansie Wauch ? will ve no wanken ? Murder, murder! hal say murder! murder, murder murder tott ni lis sow awo mo of www.Wha's murdering ons 2th cried Loithrowing my cowl back on the pillow, wand rubbing my cen in the hurry of a tremendous fright Wha's murdering us ?-where's the robbers? send for the townme, who was likely to be intimately concerned asitto and Oh; Mansie ! oh, Mansie !! vsaid Nanse in a kind of greeting tone, "I daursay ye've felled me but me matter, now I've gotten ive roused. Do ve no see the haill street in a bleeze of flames? Bad is the best : we mann either be burned to death, bor out of house and hall without a rag to cover our nakedness Where's my son't where's my dear I and I could see nothing if signal variable

In a most awful consternation, I jumped at this out to the middle of the floor, hearing the causeway all in an uprear of voices; and seeing the fichtering of the flames glancing on the houses in the opposite side of the street, all the windows of which were filled with the heads of half-naked folks, in round-eared mutches, or Kilmarnocks; their mouths open, and their een staring with fright; while the sound of the fire-engine, rattling through the streets like thunder seemed like the dead-cart of the plague, come to hurry away the corpses of the deceased, for interment in the kirk-yard-in mey 'w Never such a spectacle was witnessed since the creation of Adam. I pulled up the window, and looked out and lo, and behold the very next house to our own was all in a low from cellar to garret; the burning joists hissing and gracking like mad; and the very wind that blew along, as warm as if it had been out of the mouth of a baker's even by virial It was a most awful spectacle! mair by token to me, who was likely to be intimately concerned with it; and, beating my brow with my clenched nieve like a distracted creature, I saw that the labour of my whole life was likely to go for nought; and me to be a rifined man toall the earnings of my industry being laid out on my stock in trade, and on the plenishing of our bit house. The darkness of the latter days. came over my spirit like a vision before the prophet Isaiah; and I could see nothing in the gears to come but beggary and starvation; myself a fallen-back old man, with an out-at-the-elbows coat, as greasy hat, and a bell pow, hirpling over a staff, requeeshing an awmous—Nanse a broken hearted beggar wife torn down to tatters, and weeping like Rachel when she thought on better days; and poor wee Benjie going from door to door with a meal-pock on his back, not thus a take the su good years.

The thought first dung me stupid, and then drove me to desperation; and not even minding the dear wife of my bosom, that had fainted away as dead as a hering, I pulled on my trowsers like mad, and rushed out into the street, bareheaded and barefoot as the day that Lucky Bringthereout brought me into the world, and the paid and purpose world, and the paid and purpose of the paid and purpo

The crowd saw, in the twinkling of an eyeball, that I was a desperate man, fierce as Sir William Wallace, and not to be withstood by gentle or semple. So most of them made way for me; they that tried to stop me finding it a bad job, being heeled over from right to left, on the broad of their backs like flounders, without respect of age or person; some old women, that were obstraphlous, being gen sore hurt, and one of them with a pain in her hainch even to this day. When I had got almost to the door cheels of the burning house. I found one grupping me by the back like grim death; and, in looking over my shoulder, who was it but Nanse herself, that, rising up from her faint, had pursued me like a which wind. It was a heavy trial, but my duty to myself in the first place, and to my neibours in the second, roused me up to withstand m; so, making a spend like a greyhound, I left the hindside of my shirt in her grasp, like Joseph's garment in the meve of Potiphar's wife; and up the stairs head foremost among the names.

Mercy keep us a'! what a sight for mortal man to grow at with his hving cent The bells were tollmg amid the dark, The a summons from above for the parish of Dalkeith to pack off to another world; the drums were beat-beating as if the French were coming, thousand on thousand, to kill, slay, and devour every maid and mother's son of us! the areengine pump-pumping like daft, showering the water like rambows, as if the windows of Heaven were opened, and the days of old Woalf come back again Pand the rabble throwing the good furniture over the windows like ingan peelings, where it either felled the folk below, or was dung to a thousand shivers on the causeway? I chied to them, for the love of goodness, to make search in the beds, in case there might be ony wears there, human life being still more precious than human means; but hot a Hving soul was seen but a cut, which, being raised and wild with the din, would on no consideration allow itself to be catched. Jacob Dribble found that to his cost ; for, right or wrong, having a drappie in his head, he swore like a trooper that he would catch come but beggary and starvation; myself a fallenback old man, with an out-at-the-elbows coat, a greasy last, and a bell pow, hirpling over a staff, requeeshting an awmons—Nanse a broken-hearted beggar wife, torn down to tatters, and weeping like Rachel when she thought on better days; and poor wee Benjie going from door to door with a meal-pock on his back, roll thus a tank has a queen year.

The thought first dung me stupid, and then drove me to desperation; and not even minding the dear wife of my bosom, that had fainted away as dead as a herring, I pulled on my trowsers like mad, and rushed out into the street, bareheaded and barefoot as the day that Lucky Bringthereout brought me into the world, one that a did unique-quant-quant enigns

Therewed saw, in the twinkling of an eyeball, that I was a desperate man, fierce as Sir William Wallace, and not to be withstood by gentle or semple. So most of them made way for me; they that tried to stop me finding it a bad job, being hesled over from right to left, on the broad of their backs like flounders, without respect of age or person; some old women, that were obstrapulous, being gey sore hurt, and one of them with a pain in her hainch even to this day. When I had got almost to the door-cheek of the burning house. I found one grupping me by the back like grim death; and, in looking over my shoulder, who was it but Nause herself, that, rising up from her faint, had pursued me like a whilewind. 'It was a heavy trial, but my duty to myself in the first place, and to my neibours in the second, roused me up to withstand it; so, making a spend like a greyhound, I left the hindside of my shirt in her grasp, like Joseph's garment in the meve of Pottphar's wife, and up the stairs head foremost among the names.

Mercy keep us a'! what a sight for mortal man to glow at with his living cen. The bells were tollmy amid the dark, The a summons from above for the parish of Dalkeith to pack off to another world; the drums were beat beating as if the French were coming, thousand on thousand, to kill, slay, and devone every maid and mother's son of us; the fireengine pump-pump-pumping like daft, showering the water like rambows, as if the windows of Heaven were opened, and the days of old Noah come back again To and the rabble throwing the good furniture over the windows like ingain peelings, where it either felled the folk below, or was dung to a thousand shivers on the causeway! I cried to them, for the love of goodness, to make search in the beds, in case there might be ony wears there, human hife being still more precious than human means; but not a Hving soul was seen but a cat, which, being raised and wild with the din, would on no consideration allow itself to be catched. Tacob Dribble found that to his cost ; for, right or wrong, having a drappie in his head, he swore like a trooper that he would catch her, and carry her down aneath his oxter; so forwardbohe diweired, her tinto tas corner, accounting on his bunkers or Her had much better have let of alone; for it fuffed over his shoulder like wildfire. and scarting his back all the way down jumped like a lamplighter head-foremost through the flantes, where in the raging and roaring of the devouring element, its pitiful cries were soon hushed to silence for eyer and every Amen dward bon sheed, dead ym At long and last, a woman's cry was heard on the street, lamenting, like Hagar over young Ishmaelin the wilderness of Beersheban and crying that her old grannie, that was a lamiter, and had been bedridden for four years come the Martinmas following, bwds hurning to a cinder in the fore-garretis My heart was like to burst within me, when I heard this dist mal news, remembering that I myself had once an old mother, that was now in the mools; so I brush ed, up the stair like a hatter, and burst open the door of the fore-garret, for in the hurry I could not find the succke and did not like to stand on ceremony I could not see my finger before me, and did not ken my right hand from my left, for the smoke; but I groped round and round; though the reek mostly cut my breath, and made me cough at no allowance, till at last I catched hold of something cold and claimmy, which I gave a pull, not knowing what it was, but found out to be the old wife's brose. be bried out as loud as I was able for the poor creature to hoize herself up into my arms ; but, receiving no answer of perceived in a moment that she was sufficied the foul air having gone down her wrong hause ; and, though I had ave a terror at looking at far less handling a dead corpse, there was something brave within me at the moment, my blood being up a so I caught hold of her by the shouthers, and harling her with all my might out of her bed got ther lifted on my back, heads and thraws, in the manner of a boll of meal, and away as fast as my legs could carry street, lamenting, like Hagar over young Ishmacein bl There was a providence in this haste ; for ered was half way down the stair, the floor fell with a thud like thunder; and such a combustion of sout, stour, and spanks arose, as was never seen or heard tell of in the memory of mant since the day that Sampson pulled over the pillars in the house of Dagon, and smoored all the macking Philistines as flat as flounders ... For the space of a minute, I was as blind as a beetle, and was like to be choked for want of breath; however, as the dust began to clear up, I saw an open window, and hallooed down to the crowd for the sake of mercy to bring a ladder, to save the lives of two perishing fellow-creatures, Tor now, my own was also in imminent despardy of They were long of coming, and I did not ken what to do; so thinking that the old wife, us she had not spoken. was maybe dead already, I was once determined just to let her drop down upon the street; but I knew that the so doing would have cracked every bone in her body, and the glory of my bravery would thus have been worse than lost. I persevered, therefore, though I was fit to fall down under the dead weight she not being able to help herself, and having a deal of beef in her skin for an old woman of eighty : but I got a lean, by squeezing her a wee between me kind whatsoever, in half a second, soffey adthus I thought they would never have come for my shoeless feet were all bruised, and blooding from the crunched lime and the splinters of broken stones d but, at long and last, a ladden was hoisted up and having fastened a kinch of ropes beneath her outers; I let her slide down over the upper step, by way of a pillyshee, having the satisfaction of seeing her safely landed in the arms of seven auld wives, that were waiting with a cosey warm blanket below- Having accomplished this grand manceuvre, wherein I such ceeded in saying the precious life of a woman of eightwi that had been four long, years bedridden, I tripped down the steps myself like a nine-year-old, and had the pleasure when the roof fell in, to ken, that I for one, had done my duty and that to the best of my knowledge, no living greature, except, the poor cats had perished within the jaws of the devouring eleup to me by means of a rope, I swashed down such But, bide a wee; the work was as netwouly half done. The fire was still roaring and raging every puff of wind that blew, through the black firmement.

drivingdthe red boarks ment into the air, where they died away tike che tall of a comet, of the train of a skyrocket; the joisting, crazing, eracking, and turned ling down plant now and then the bursting cans. playing fiew in a hundred finders from the chimney heads. One would have haturally enough thought that our engined could have drowned bout a life of ony kind whatsoever, in half a second, scores of follis driving about with pitcherfulls of water, and scaling half of itserbene another and the sauseway in their ort no dud valantor bels hinter showohnd stonend fed heustones that whizzed fike from in a shiday trong red, de sood as It was darkness and shoke in I let her slightfork in Veritherther stew they sayly one globe bad by the the the second second second and selling my best for my wei bours, it behoved me now, he had turne to try and see what T could do for hive dities notwithstanding of the Parish the Stanton of the St Jonles Batterown on Wanse, Remail That bare feet. had sent lour to seek me, with a pair of shoon in his hand mand, whoy in scratching his head, mostly rue god but every hast of his wife with sheet vexation and run of tende mounted the ladder a vecond time, and streeteded, which make the speeking, in getting upon theotopist the day if the day is the theotopist in the theotopist is the theotopist in the theotopist up to me by means of a rope, I swashed down such showels on the top of the flames, that I soon did more good in the space of five millutes, than the enof the direction will be so the charte the chart bearing perspiration with pumping it did the whole night over to say nothing of the multitude of drawers of waters ment wives, and weans, with their cudies. leglins pitchers pails, and water-stoups having the satisfaction, in a short time, to observe levery thing getting as black as the crown of my hat, and the gable of my dwn house growing as cool as a cuwould have deafened a cannon; and, thoughedmus Being a man of method, and acquainted with business, I could have liked to have given a finishing stitch to my work before coming down; but dosh me! sic a whinging, girning, greeting, and roaring, got up, all of a sudden, as was never seen or heard of since bowed Joseph raised the meal-mob and burned Johanie Wilkes in offigy; and bloking down, I saw Benjie, the baird of my own Heart, and the callant Glen my apprentice on trial, that had both been as soutid as tops till this blessed moment, standing in their night-gowns and their little red cowls, rubbing their een, cowering with cold and fright and making an awful uproar, crying on me to come downs and not be killed hThe voice of Beifie especially pierced through and through my heart, like a two-edged sword, and I could on no manner of accounts suffer myself to bear them any longer, and de jaloused the baim would have gone into convulsionfits if I had not heeded him; so, making a sign to them to be quiet, I came my ways down taking hold of one in ilka hand, which must have been a father

ly sight to the spectators that saw usive After waiting on the crown of the causeway for half an hour to make sure that the fire was extinguished, and all tight and right, I saw the crowd scaling and thought it best storigo in too, carrying the two youngstors along with me to When I began to move off how ever, siccan a cheering of the multitude got up as would have deafened a cannon; and, though I say it myself, who should not say to they seemed struck with a sore amazement at my heroic behaviour, fola lowing me with loud cheers neven to the threshold me! sic a whinging, girning, greetiamob nivosym do b From this felk should condescend to take a lesson seeing that, though the world is a bitter bad world, vet that good deeds are not only a reward to themul selves, but call forth the applause of Jew and Gentiled for the sweet savour of my conduct butthis memorable night, remained in my nostrils for goods! ness kens the length of time, many praising my brave humanity, in bublic companies, and assemblies def the people, such as strawberry ploys, council meetings, dinter parties, and so forthe and many in private conversation nat their own ingle-cheek, by way of two handed brack | in stage coach confab, and in causeway talk if the forenom, before going in to take their meridians. Indeed, between friends the business proved in the upshot of no small advanta tage to me; bringing to me a sowd of strange faces! by way of customers, both gentle and semple that I

When we got to the ingle-side, and starring then door, saw that all was sart, at who now three in the morning of sowe thought It by intiche the best way i of managing, not to think of sleeping any thore, but? to be on the look ofit star we average used the whenis walking sellery in the willingers an case the names should by ony mischancy accident or other, mappend to break out again. My Wife blanded my harded hood muckle, and the rashness with which I had ventured at once to places Whereleven masons and sclaves ers were afraid to that foot on, yet I saw, in the mud terim, that she looked on me with a prouder ee de kenning herself the helphate of one that had courbe ageously risked his neck, and every bone in his skin, in the cause of humanity. Tsaw this as plain as a pikestaff, as, with one of her kindest looks, she mid sisted on my putting on a better happing to screen me from the cold, and on my taking something common fortable inwardly towards the dispelling of had contain sequences. So, after half, a minute's stand-out, by way of refusal like, I agreed to a cupful of het pints and thought it would be a thing Mungo Glen might never have had the good fortune to have tasted; and as it might operate by way of a cordial on the calculated begins who kept eye smally and in a dwining way. Mo somer said than done and off Manser brushed in a comple of hurries to make the bet pint.

After the small been was put into the pan to boil, we found, to our great mortification, that there were no eggs in the house sand. Benija was sent out with a candle to the hon-house, to see if any of the hens had laid since gloaming, and detch what he could get I have middle of the mean time. I was expandentiating to Mungo on what taste it would have, and how he had never seen anything fiver than it would be when in ran Benija, all out of breath, and his face aspale as a dishclout. Mean in ran benija, all out of breath, and his sace aspale as a dishclout.

""What's the matter. Benjie, what's the matter book said. I to him stising up from suyle that in a great hurry of a fright; "Has onybody killed ye? or is the fire hroken out again? or has the French landed or have ye seen a ghaist don't hear of the mind."

"Ele grifty!" gried Benjie, coming till his mind.

thereity horized Benjie coming till his mind a street affancock and hens and a terres and in the corner in thing left but the notten nest egg in the corner in the corner

2062

This was an awful dispensation, of which more hereafter. In the midst of the desolation of the fire—such is the depravity of human nature—some ne'er-do-weels had taken advantage of my absence to break open the hen-house door, and our whole stock of poultry, the cock along with our seven hens—two of them tappit, and only stillfed were carried away bodily, stoup and roup.

On this subjects howsever. I shall say not more in this chapter, but merely observe in conclusion, that, as to our het-pine, we were obligated to make the best of a bad bargain, making up with whisky what it wanted in eggs; though our bonquet could not be called altogether a merry one, the joys of our escape from the horrors of the fire, being damped, as it were, by a wet blanket, on account of the nefarious pillaging of our hen-house.

To serry the Catasitanzie on.
Labow sive ing and grook my knees,
And the second of serrous my ee.
And the control of the serve of the lane,
When we shall be morely and sing-

KING JAMES V

THE SITUATION of me and my family at this time, affords an example of the truth of the old proverb, that "ae eval never comes its lane;" being no sooner quit of our dread concerning the burning, that we overe doomed by Providence to undergo the disaster of the rookery of our hen-house. I believe I have

This was

This was an awful dispensation, of which more hereafter. In the midst of the desolation of the fire—such is the depravity of human nature—some ne'er-do-weels had taken advantage of my absence to break open the hen-house door, and our whole stock of poultry, the cock along with our seven hens—two of them tappit, and on the surface of them tappit, and only.

On this subjects does servery labely exprension, that, this chapter, but merely observe in conclusion, that, as to our het-pinder week by different sells the hand best of a bad harding making the which what it wants who have not because the amount of the person of an energy one, the joys of our to be called a week as the fire, being damped, as it were, by a well-shimmer in the forms of the fire, being damped, as it were, by a well-shimmer in the large sellow be sellow for the fire only damped, as our pillaging of our fleshing sellow be sellow be sellow be sellow be sellow be sellow.

To carry the Gaberlunzie on.
I'll bow my leg and crook my knee,
And draw a black clout owre my ee,
A cripple or blind they will ca' me,
While we shall be merry and sing.

KING JAMES V.

THE situation of me and my family at this time, affords an example of the truth of the old proverb, that "ae evil never comes its lane;" being no sooner quit of our dread concerning the burning, than we were doomed by Providence to undergo the disaster of the rookery of our hen-house. I believe I have these of persels of the property of the project of the project of the persels of the project of the persels of the persels of the project of the persels of

Most fortunately for my family in this matter in so, happened, that by paying in half a grown a rearries is a society for prosperitions. I was a regular member of a society for prosperitions all whom it might concern, that dabbled with foul all whom it might concern, that dabbled with foul all whom it might concern, that dabbled with foul all whom it might concern, that dabbled with foul fingers in the sighth commandment at who allowanced and drawing on their heads not not with a passing punishment of this world, by way of banishment to. Botany, Bay, or harding subthed, but the threatened vengeance of even that will last for ever and ever able to the story.

Accordingly, putting on my hat about nine o'clock, or the reabouts, when the breakfast chings were negroup from the bit table be poppit out win the first and foremest instance, to take a wizzy of the idepress dation the dames had made in our neighbourhood. Losh keep use, what a spectacle of wheck and mine ation. The roof was clean off and away as if a thunderbolt from heaven had knocked it down

Tribinate the content of the content

Third satisfied my eed with bringlight view of the terrible devistation. To went away reducely applications are street, with only mandadinishly breeks positively applicating the scene in my mind with the modern of Babylon the Great, and Sadom and Gonolan, and Tyle and Sidom, and Tribe and Sidom, and Tribe and Sidom, and Tribe and Sidom, and all the lave of the great towns that had fallen to decay, according to the foretening of the sacred prophets, but I reame to the footon of Donald Cleig, the head of the Fiel Society, to whom I related, from beginning to end, the whole business of the heat scanning. Of he was a meetile bothe of a creatine, far north, Abeldeenbawi like, and looking at two sides of a bawbee; but, to give the dell his diffe, in this metalic he behaved a wood it bestoom bad never a mort ilodesbund.

Ito me like a gentleman Not only did Donald send through the drum in the course of half-an-hour offering a reward for the apprehension of the offenders of three guineas names concealed, but he got a warrant granted to Francie Deep, the sherry-officer, to make search in the houses of several suspicious took care to examine them one at a time, senorage The reward offered by tuck of drum failed nobody making application to the crier; but the search succeeded as, after turning everything topsy-turvy, the feathers were found in a bag, in the house of an auld woman of vile character, who contrived to make out a way of living by hiring beds at twopence anight to Eirish travellers South-country packmen. sturdy beggars, men, and women, and weans of them - Vetholm tinklers - wooden-legged sailors. without Chelsen pensions dumb spaewomen keepers of wild beast shows dancing dog folk spunkmakers, and such like pick-pockets. ab The thing was as plain as the loof of my hand, for besides great suspicion, what was more, was the finding the head of the muffed hen; to which Leguld have sworn; lying in a bye corner; the body itself, not being so kenspecle in its disjasket state, as it bung twirling in a string by its legs before the fire, all buttered over with swine's seam, and half roasted ranges and awAfter some little ado, and baving called in two men that were passing to help us to take them prisat the culprits, were never seen since Adam was a boists in case of their being refractory; we carried to said the order of the off the

a Except the fact of the stown goods being found in their possession, it so chanced, ve observe, that we had no other sort of evidence whatsbever plant we took care to examine them one at a time, the fane no hearing what the tither said; so, by dint of crossquestioning by one who well kenned how to bring fire out of flint, we soon made the guilty convict themselves, and brought the transaction home to two wanf-looking fellows that we had got smoking in a corner que From the speerings that were put to them during their examination, it was found that they bried to make a way of doing by swindling folks at fairs bybthe game of the garter. Indeed, it was stupid of me not to recognize their faces at first sight, having observed both of them leitering about our back bounds the afternoon before; and one of them, the tall one with the redollead and fustian juckety having been in my shop in the fore part of the night, about the gloaning liked asking me as a favour for a yard or two of spare runds, or selvages. I ve ave heard that seeing's believing; and that youth might take a warning from the punishment that sooner or later is ave tacked to the tail of crime. I took Benjie and Mungo to hear the trial; and two more rueful faces than they put on, when they looked at the culprits, were never seen since Adam was a boy. It was far different with the two Eirishers, who showed themselves so hardened by a long course of sin and misery, that, instead of abasing themselves in the face of a magistrate, they scarcely almost gave a civil answer to a single question which was speered at them. Howsoever, they paid for that at a heavy ransom, as ye shall hear bye and bye.

Having been kept all night in the cold tolbooth on bread and water, without either coal or candle to warm their toes, or let them see what they were doing, they were harled out amid an immense crowd of young and old, more especially wives and weans, at eleven o'clock on the next forenoon, to the endurance of a punishment which ought to have afflicted them almost as muckle as that of death itself.

When the key of the jail door was thrawn, and the two loons brought out, there was a bumming of wonder, and maybe sorrow, among the terrible crowd, to see fellow-creatures so left alone to themselves, as to have robbed an honest man's hen-house at the dead hour of night, when a fire was bleezing next door, and the howl of desolation soughing over the town like a visible judgment. One of them, as I said before, had a red pow and a foraging cap, with a black napkin ropined round his weasand, a jean jacket with four pouches, and square tails; a velveteen waistcoat, with plaited buttons; cordured breeches, buttoned at the knees; rig-and-fur stockings; and heavy, clanking wooden clogs. The other, who was little and round-shouldered, with a bull neck, and bushy black whiskers, just like a shoebrush, stuck to each cheek of his head, had on a low-crowned, plated beaver hat, with the end of a peacock's feather stuck in the band; a lang-tailed and black coat, as brown as a berry, and as bare as my loof, to say nothing of being out at both elbows. His trowsers, I dare say, had once been nankeen; but as they did not appear to have seen the washing-tub for a season or two, it would be rash to give any decided opinion on that head. In short, they were two awful-like raggamutins.

Women, however, are ave sympathizing and merciful; so, as I was standing among the crowd, as they came down the tolbooth stair, chained together by the culfs of the coat, one said, Wae's me! what a weel-haur'd fellow, wi'the red head, to be found guilty of stealing tolk's hen-houses!—And another one said, Hech, sirs! what a bonny black-a-viced man that little ane is, to be paraded through the streets for a warld's wonder! But I said nothing, kenning the thing was just, and a wholesome example, olding Benjie on my shoulder to see the poukit hens tied about their necks like keeking-glasses. But, puh! the fellows did not give ae pinch of snuff; so off they set, and in this manner were drummed through the bounds of the parish, a constant walking at each side of them, with Lochaber

axes, and the town-drummer row-de-dowing the thief; a marchat the had a shawall washbadunish the road to Edinburgh, where their wives and wetagis

My heart was wae, notwithstanding the ills they had done me and mine, by the nefarious pillaging of our hen-house, to see two human creatures of the same flesh and blood as myself, undergoing the righteous sentence of the law, in a manner so degradus ing to themselves, and so bitiful to all that beheld them But, nevertheless, considering what they had done, they neither deserved, nor did they seem to care for commiseration, holding up their brazen I faces as if they had been taking a pleasure walk for the benefit of their health, and the poulit hense that dangled before them, ornaments of their bravery. The whole crowds young and old, followed them from ae end of the town to the tither, liking to ding one another over, so anxious were they to get a sight of what was going on ; but when they came to the gateend they stopped and gave the ne'er-do-weels three cheers. What think ye did the ne'er-do-weels do in return ? Fie shame ! they took off their old scrapers and gave a huzza too, clapping their hands behind them, in a manner as deplorable to relate, as it was it before, far from being robustwous inbloded of gnidoods

Their chains, the things ye ken that held their cuffs together, were by this time taken off, along with the poukit hens, which I fancy the town-offshers took home and cooked for their dinner; so they shook hands with the drummer, wishing him a good a day, and a pleasant walk home, brushing away on the road to Edinburgh, where their wives and wears, who had no doubt made a good supper on the spuilzie of the hens, had gone away before, maybe to have something comfortable for their arrival, their walk being likely to give them an appearatise round a remain an appearatise round a remain and appearatise round a round and appearatise round and a only left the bantams, on which they must have found but desperate little eating, and the muffed one, I would have cared less; it being from several or constances a pet one in the family, having been brought in a blackbird's cage by the carrier from Lauder, from my wife's mother, in a present to Bendjie on his birth-day. The creature almost grat him self blind, when he heard of our having seen it roast ing in a string by the legs before the fire, and found its bonny muffed head in a corner, no guing an and well.

But let abee likings, the callant was otherwise a loser in its death, she having regularly laid a calleregg to him every morning; which he got along with his tea and bread, to the no small benefit of his health, being as I have taken occasion to remark before, far from being robusteous in the constitution.
I am sure I ken one thing, that I would have willingly given the louns a crown piece to have preserved it alive, hen though it was of my own; but no, the

took home and cooked for their dinner; so they

bloody deed was over and done; before we were aware that the poor thing's life was sacrificed on to Parithenames of the two Eirishers were John Dochart. and Dennis Flint, both, according to their own deponement, from the county of Tipperary; and weela-wat the place has no great credit in producing two such bairns. Often, after that, didd I look through that part of the Adverteezer newspapers, that has a "list of all the accidents, and so on, o just above the Births, marriages, and deaths, which I liked to read regularly! Howsbever, it was two year before I discovered their hames again, having, it seems, during a great part of that period, lived under the forged name of Alias: and Tisaw that they were both shipped off at Leith, for transportation to some country called the Hulks, for being habit and reporte Thieves, and for having made a practice of coining Bad silver. The thing, however, that condemned them, was for having knocked down a drunk man in a beastly state of intoxication, on the King's higho had bedder gnived bus halfyld blood and very or year his hat, wig, and neckeloth, an upper and under vest, a coat and great coat, a pair of Hessian boots, which Ve he had on his legs, a silver watch, with four brass seals and a key, besides a shaff box made of boxwood, with an invisible hinge, bue of the Lawrence-Burk breed, a pair of specs, some odd ha pennies, and a Camperdown pocket hapkinsim red no viiq creature, though plain in the lugs, that I had not the 919 But of all months of the year or maybe indeed of my blessed lifetime, this one was the most adventurous. It seemed, indeed, as if some especial curse of Providence hung ower the canny town of Dalkeith, and that, like the great cities of the plain, we were net long and last to be burnt, up from the face of the dearth with a shower of fire and brimstone ind dous a salust three days after the drumming of the two Eirish ne'er do-weels, a deaf and dumb woman came bin prophesying at our back door, offering to spae fortanes She was tall and thin, an unco witch-lookping creature, with a runkled brow, sun-brunt haffits, band two sharp-looking een, like a hawk's, whose Iglance went through ye like the cut and thrust of a otwo-edged sword On her head she had a tawdry sebrownish black bonnet, that had not improved from ortwo three years tholing of sun and wind; a thin rag bof a grey duffle mantle was thrown over her shoulders, mibelow which was a checked shortgown of gingham stripe, and a green glazed manco petticoat. Her to shoon were terrible banchles, and her grey worsted stockings, to hide the holes in them, were all dagooned down about her heels, On the whole, sahe was rather, L must confess an out-of-the-way reature; and though I had not muckle faith in these - bodies that pretend to see farther through a millstone schan their nei hours. I somehow or other, taking pity on her miserable condition, being still a fellowcreature, though plain in the lugs, that I had not the heart to huff her out; mair by token, as Nanse, Benife, and the new prentice Mungo, had by this time got round me, all dving to ken what grand fortunes waited them in the years of their after pilerimage. Sinful creatures that we are! not content with the insight into its ways that Providence affords us, but diving beyond our deeps, only to flounder into the whirlpools of error. Is it not clear, that had it been for our good, all things would have been revealed to us ; and is it not clear, that not a wink of sound sleep would we ever have got, had all the ills that have crossed our paths been ranged up before our een, like great black towring mountains of darkness? How could we have found contentment in our goods and gear, if we saw them melting from us next year. like snaw from a dyke; how could we sit down on the elbow-chair of ease, could we see the misfortunes that may make next week a black one; or how could we look a kind friend in the face, without tears, could we see him, ere a month maybe was gone, lying streiked beneath his winding-sheet, his eyes steiked for evermore, and his mirth hushed to an awful silence! No, no, let us rest content that Heaven kens what is best for us : let us do our duty as men and Christians, and every thing, both here and hereafter, will work together for our good.

Having taken a piece of chalk out of her big, greasy, leather pouch, she wrote down on the table, "Your wife, your son, and your prentice." This was rather curious, and every one of them, a wee thunderstruck like, cried out, as they held up their hands, "Losh me! did onybody ever see or hear tell of the like o' that? She's no canny !"-It was gey droll I thought; and I was aware from the Witch of Endor, and sundry mentions in the Old Testament, that things, out of the course of nature, have more than once been permitted to happen; so I reckened it but right, to give the poor woman a fair hearing, us; and is it not clear, that not a havraeah ada an

"Oh!" said Nanse to me, "ye ken our Benjie's eight year auld; see if she kens; ask her how auld he is?" I had scarcely written down the question, when she wrote beneath it, "The bonny laddie, your only son, is eight year old : He'll be an Admiral yet."

"An Admiral," said his mother, "that's gey and extraordinar. I never kenned he had ony inkling for the seafaring line; and I thought, Mansie, you intended bringing him up to your ain trade. But, howsoever, ye're wrang ye see. I tell't ye he wad either make a spoon or spoil a horn. I tell't ye, ower and ower again, that he wad be either something or naething; what think ye o' that noo? - See if she kens that Mungo comes from the country and where the Lammermuir hills is?" an initially bus When I had put down the question, in a piffic she wrote down beside it, "That boy comes from the high hills, and his name is Mungo."

Dog.on it! this astonished us more and more, and fairly bamboozled my understanding , as I thought there surely must be some league and paction with the Old One; but the farther in the deeper bahe -then pointed to me wife, writing down, o Your name is Nancy," Mand turning to me, as she made some dumble signs, she catalked down, Your manne is Mansie Wanch, that saved the precious life of an auld, bedridden woman from the fire; and will soon get a lottery ticket of twenty thousand pounds." of Morning the truth of the rest of what she wad bsaid, I could not help jumping on the floor with joy, and seeing that she was up to everything, as plain as if it had happened in her presence. The good news set us all a louping with general joy, my wife and The laddies clapping their hands, as if they had "found a fiddle; so, jalousing they might lose their discretion in their mirth, Lturned round to the three, bholding up my hand, and saying, "In the name o Gudeness, dinna mention this to ony leeving sowl; "as, mind ve, I havena taken but the ticket yet? The doing so might not only set them to the sinful entyding of our good fortune, as forbidden in the tenth Sconfinandment, but might lead away oursell, tobe egulting dur nin before webget themen a no gairth benne Mind then, wand Nahse, be about your bromise to me, concerning the silk gown, and the pure ad" oil " Wheesht, wheesht, gudewifie, "wansweredid I. alled There's a braw time coming or We must not be in ower great a harry some of thing it mile the great of into S W

I then bade the woman sit down by the ingle cheek, and our wife to give her a piece of cold beef, and a shave of bread, besides, twopence out of my own pocket. Some, on hearing sicean sooms mentioned, would have immediately strucken work, but, even in the height of my grand expectations, I did not forget the old saying, that "a bird in the hand is worth twa in the bush ;" and being thrang with a pair of leggins for Eben Bowsie, I brushed away ben to the workshop, thinking the woman, or witch, or whatever she was, would have more freedom and pleasure in eating by herself. That she had, I am now bound to say by experience benegged bed if it Two days after, when we were sitting at our comfortable four-hours, in came little Benjie, running out of breath-just at the dividual moment of time my wife and me were jeering one another, about how we would behave when we came to be grand leddies and gentlemen, keeping a flunkie maybeto tell us, that when he was playing at the bools, on the plainstanes before the anld kirk, he had seen the deaf and dumb spacwife harled away to the talbooth, for stealing a pair of trowsers, that were hanging drying on a tow, in Juden Elshinder's back closs. I could scarcely credit the callant, though I kenned he would not tell a lee for sixpence, and I said to him, "Now be sure, Benjie, before ye speak. The tongue is a dangerous weapon, and apt to bring folk into trouble—it might be another woman in 19wo olas It was real cleverality in the callant? He said. and Av, faither, but it was her; and she contrived to bring herself into trouble, without a tongue at at? 10 III could not help laughing at this, it showed Benlie to be siccan a genius ? so he said, a most ent ni Juo We oncedna daugh, faither to for it's as true's death, it was her. Do ye think I didna ken in a minute our cheese toaster, that used to him beside the kitchen fire; and that the sherry-offisher took Sout frae beneath her grey cloak wing yd gninesm The smile gaed off Nanse's cheek like lightning, and she said it could not be true; but she would go to the kitchen to see! Pfegs it was ower true; for She never came back to tell the contrary ne somen to This was really and truly a terrible business; but the bruth for all that, the cheese toaster casting up not an hour after, in the hands of Daniel Search, to whom I gave a dram. The loss of the tin cheese touster would have been a trifle, especially as it was broken in the handle, but this was an awful blow to the truth of the fief dumbie's grand prophecy. Nevertheless, it seemed at the time gey puzzling to me, to think how a deaf and dumb woman, unless she had some wonderful wift; could have told us what she did not but gniOn the next day, the Friday I think, that story was also made as clear as daylight to us; for being banished out of the town as a common thief and vitgabond down on the Musselburgh road, by order of a justice of the peace, it was the bounder duty of

Daniel Search and Geordie Sharp, to see her safe past the kennel, the length of Smeaton It They then tried to make her understand by writing on the wall, that if ever again she was seen or heard tell of in the town, she would be banished to Botany Bay; but she had a great fecht it seems, to make out Daniel's bad spellin's he having been very ill yedigrated, and no ideacon at the penasada and atunim door Houseever they get her to understand their meaning, by giving her a shove forward by the shoulders, and ave pointing down to Inveresk. Thinking she did not hear them, they then took apon themselves the liberty of calling her some ill names, and bade her good day as a bad one; but she was upsides with them for acting, in that respect, above their commission; for she wheeled round again to them; and snapping her fingers at their moses, gave a curse, and bade them go home, for a empleref dirty Scotch vernings, shirt a need evad to The two men were perfectly dumbfoundered at hearing the tongue-tied wife speaking as well as thenselves; and could not belp stopping to look after her for a long way on the road, as every now and then she stuck one of her arms in her side, and gave a dance round in the whirling-jig may longing like daft, and lilting like a grey lintie. From her way of speakings they also saw immediately that ashe too wast an Einsher They must be at bonny family when they are all at home of at he soitsui a

Eirish ne'er-do-weels, who paid so sweetly for their pranks,—and lastly, the hoax, the thieving of the cheese-toaster without the handle, and the banishment of the spaewife.

These were nwful signs of the times, and seemed to say that the world was fast coming to a finis; the ends of the earth Laye ATT TAHLY combined in a great Popish plot of villany. Every man that had a heart to feel/AH269MUM TRAMAED amid these threatening, judgment-like, and calamitous events. As for my twen to see the like, and calamitous events which most of the sate that sair amelos and the nations, which most of the set swell with the world must say fell heavily over: bed worms the thinking of them endoe arithmed fring when the house-tops of which the said such the fill house to so which the same and an approximation of the same and the same and

PERHAPS, since I was born, I do not remember such a string of casualties, as dappened to me! Ind mine, allowithin the operiod of rone show forthight. To say nothing connected with the play acting business; which was immediately before, a first came Mango Glen's misfortune with regard to the blood soiling of the new nankeen trowers, the foremost of his itransactions, and in bad omen, mextanthe sind, and allits wonderfuls, the saving of the old abduride denovements precions life, and the destruction of the people at a syne the robbery of the heal-house by the

Eirish ne'er-do-weels, who paid so sweetly for their pranks,—and lastly, the hoax, the thieving of the cheese-toaster without the handle, and the banishment of the spaewife.

These were awful signs of the times, and seemed to say that the world was fast coming to a finis; the ends of the earth appearing to have combined in a great Popish plot of villany. Every man that had a heart to feel, must have trembled amid these threatening, judgment-like, and calamitous events. As for my own part, the depravity of the nations, which most of these scenes showed me, I must say fell heavily over my spirit and I could not help thinking of the old cities of the plain, over the house-tops of which, for their hemous sins and iniquitous abominations, the wrath of the Almighty showered down fire and brimstone from heaven, till the very earth melted and swallowed them up for PERHAPS, since I was born, I do may been been by ba These added to the number uto be sure that hot that I had never before seen signs and wonders in my time! all had seen the friends of the people and the scarce years, wand the bloody gulleteening over bye among the French blackgrards and the busi4 ness of Watt and Downie mearer home sat dur rown doors almost, in Edinburgh dikey and the calling out of the volunteers, and divers sea fights at Came perdown and elsewhere, and land battles countless to and the American war, part of to and awfal murdersg mand mock-fights in the Duke's Parks, and high-way robberies, and breakings of all the Ten Commandments, from the first to the last; so that, allowing me to have had but a common spunk of reflection. I must, like others, have cast a wistful eye on the on-goings of men; and, if I had not strength to pour out my inward lamentations. I could not help thinking, with fear and trembling, at the rebellion of sicean a worm against a Power whose smallest word could extinguish its existence, and blot it out in a twinkling from the roll of living things.

was a great deal more. From the days in which he had lain in his cradle, he had been brought up in a remote and quiet part of the country, far from the bustling of towns, and from man encountering man in the stramash of daily life; so that his heart seemed to pine within him like a flower, for want of the blessed morning dew; and, like a bird that has been catched in a girn among the winter snows his appetite failed him, and he fell away from his meat and class.

Jan June 10 Ju

Friend Mrs. Crassie about him, and she was so motherly as to offer to have a glass of port wine, stirred with best jesuits barks, ready for him every forenoon at twelve o'clock , for really nobody could be but interested in the laddie, he was so gentle and modest, making never a word of complaint, though biffelting like show off a dyke; and, though he must have suffered both in body and mind, enduring all with a silent composure, worthy of a holy martyr. bas Perceiving things going on from bad to worse, I thought it was best to break the matter to him, as he was never like to speak himself; and Tasked him in a friendly way, as we were sitting together on the board, finishing a pair of fustian overalls for Maister Bob Bustle a riding clerk for one of the Edinburgh spirit shops, but who liked ave to have his claes of the Dalkeith cut, having been born, bred, and educated in our town, like his forebears before him if there was anything the matter with him. that he was ave so dowie and heartless? Never shall I forget the look lie gave me, as he lifted up his een, in which I could see visible distress painted. as plain as the figures of the saints, on auld kirk windows; but he told me, with a faint smile, that he had nothing particular to complain of, only that he would have liked to have died among his friends, us he could not live from home, and away from the life he had been accustomed to all his days. od, I was touched to the quick; and when I heard him speaking of death in such a calm, quiet way, I found something, as if his words were words of prophecy, and as if I had seen a sign that told me he was not to be long for this world. Howson ever, I hope I had more sense than to let this be seen, so I said till him, of Ou, if that be a', Mungo, ve'll soon come to like us a' weel eneuch. Ye should take a stout heart, man; and when your prenticeshipls dune, we'll gang hame and set up for a great man, making coats for a' the lords and lairds in broad the blue waters streaming ower thriumrammaL and Na, na, na, manswered the callant, with a trembling voice; which mostly made my heart swell to my mouth, and brought the tear to my eye, "I'll never see the end o' my prenticeship, nor Lammerit was to wake in the still morning, whais additing Judd Hout touts man, " quo' Lou" never speak, in that sort o' wave it's distrustfu and hurtful Live in hope, though we should die in despair. When we gang hame again, ye'll be as happy as every animb neff Eh na never, never, even though I was to gang hame the morn. I'll never be as I was before. I lived and lived on never thinking that such days were to come to an end but now I find it can and must The otherwise of The thoughts of my heart have been broken in upon, and naething can make haill what has been shivered to pieces,"Had right

This was to the point, as Dannie Thummel, said to his needle; so just for speaking's sake, and to rouse him are able, I said by Kehpimans what breed ve care sae muckle about the country? halt'il heren be like our bonne streets, willias the brawshop wine dows, land the vailet kirk annderhet stunds will the hornistoons and linguiss and a'the leans on the blue Av. but masster wanswered Mungoo stope was never brought and in belie country weye mevers kelet What it was to wander about met he simmer glens; wie haething but the warra sun docking above courses the blue waters streaming ower their braes, which birds singilig, and the air like vo grow sick wi' the breath of Blooming birks land howers of all colours! and "wilds themes stickings fulget beeks humaning vin joy and thank follows it I've never kent, midister, what it was to wake in the still morning, when dooking but, we saw the snaws lying frammiles round about ve on the hills, breast theep; shatting ve out firmethie World, Vas it were; "theb foot of man never coming during the storm to wour deer, nois the woice of a stranger heardd frae ac month's rend-till the lither. See at is coming on whalf the now, and me mother with his sister grange burrange and about dury brithers, will be looking out into the drifts and onissing me away for the first time frae thely freside of The will The a dream winter but breaking their hearts for me -their ballants and them stories will mever volliste funny aguin Tand in Reard is breaking for them." at hwith this, the square prun prapped down his cheeks, but his pride bade him turn his head round to hide them from me. A heart of stone would have felt for him.

I saw it was in vain to persist long, as the laddie was falling out of his claes, as fast as leaves from the November tree; so I wrote home by limping Jamie the carrier, telling his father the state of things, and advising him, as a matter of humanity, to take his son out to the free air of the hills again, as the town smoke did not seem to agree with his stomach; and, as he might be making a sticked tailor of one who was capable of being bred a good farmer; no mortal being likely to make a great progress in any thing, unless the heart goes with the handiwork.

Some folks will think I acted right, and others wrong in this matter; if I erred, it was on the side of mercy, and my conscience does not upbraid me for the transaction. In due course of time, I had an answer from Maister Glen, and we got everything ready and packed up, against the hour that Jamie

Mungo got himself all dressed; and Benjie had taken such a liking to him, that I thought he would have grutten himself senseless, when he heard he was going away back to his own home. One would not have imagined, that such a sincere friendship could have taken root in such a short time, but the bit creature Benjie was as warm-hearted a callant as ye ever saw. Mungo told him, that if he would not cry, he would send him in a present of a wee ewemilk cheese, whenever he got home; which promise pacified him, and he asked me if Benjie would come out for a month, gin simmer, when he would let him see all worthy observation along the country-side.

When we had shaken hands with Mungo, and, after fastening his comforter about his neck, wished him a good journey, we saw him mounted on the front of limping Jamie's cart; and, as he drove away, I must confess my heart was grit. I could not help running up the stair, and pulling up the forewindow to get a long look after him. Away, and away they wore; in a short time, the cart took a turn, and disappeared; and, when I drew down the window, and sauntered, with my arms crossed, down to the workshop, something seemed amissing, and the snug wee place, with its shapings and runds, and paper-measurings, and its bit fire, seemed, in my een, to look doulf and gousty.

Whether in the jougging of the cart, or what else I cannot say, but it's an unco story; for, on the road, it turned out, that poor Mungo was seized with a terrible pain in his side; and, growing worse and worse, was obliged to be left at Lauder; in the care of a decent widow woman, that had a blind eye, and a room to let furnished.

It was not for two three days that we learnt these awful tidings which greatly distressed uscall a and Ligave the driver of the Lauder coach threeperice to himself, itobring his word every morning as he passed the door, howlthelladdie was going onice ni beneit emlelearned shortly, that his faither and mother had arrived which was see comfort; but that matters with poor Mungd were striding on from had to wouse, being pronounced, by a skeely doctor, to befin a galdopping consumption and not able to be removed home, a thing that the laddie freaked and pined for hight and days bAt length, heaving for certain that the had not long to live! Inthought myself bound to be at the expense of taking a mide out on the top lof the coach thought I was aware of the danger of the -niachines whiles coupling, if it were for no more than worts and thosebib bloms fastered arthoridated ediltawasia cold cloudy daylin February, and every thing on the road looked thowie and cheerless; the very scows and sheep that forowded cowring beneath the trees in the panks) seemed to be grieving for some diseaster and hanging down their heads like mourners at al burial of The rain whiles obliged me to put up my enimbrella, and other eswast nor body on the top beside med save abdeaf woman bthat aversaid stay" to every In the stion It speered, and with whom I found it but of bthe power of man to darry on any rational conversa-I tion tasb Irwas bbliged to sit glowing from side to raide at the bleaky bare fields and the plashing grass rewalndthe igloomy dull woods and the gentlemen's houses of which De knews not thed names and the fearful rough hills, that put me in mind of the wilderness and of the abomination of desolation mentioned in scripture de believebin Ezekield The serrandel was going on to be sure, helped to make me mair was aland I could not but think on human life. without agreeing with Solomon what 61 allows livebeing pronounced, by a Stiride docnoitaxevelinesytinbevAttlong and dast, when we came to our journey's ends and Irlouped off the top of the coach, Maister Glen came out to the door, and had me haste me, if of wished to vseet Mungol breathing no Sauf Just eto think that a poor young thing was too be taken uway from life, and the cheerful sun, thus suddenly, and be laid in the cold damp mools, among the moudieworts and the green banes, where there is ho work vor device." TBut what'll we vsay there? its was I the will of Him, who knows best what is for his creatures, and to whom we should wand must submitte I was just in time to see the last rows of his glazing seen, that then stood still for ever, as he lay, with his face vas pale as clayuon the pillow, his mother holding his hand, and sob-sobbing with the refacebleant on othe vied, as if sher hope awas it departed, trands here heart, twould breakit Hogaed roundlabouts and took held of -the other one for a moment robut it was clammy said ogrowing cold with the coldness of grind death out I scould hear my heart beating pobute Mungo's heart stood still, like a watch that has mulaitself down.

Maister Glen sat in the easy chair, with his hand before his een, saying nothing, and shedding not a tear; for he was a strong, little, black a viced man, with a feeling heart, but with nerves of steel. The rain rattled on the window, and the smoke gave a swurl, as the wind rummelled if the lum. The houn spoke to the soul, and the silence was worth twenty sermons; or the light to rains do so and

They who would wish to knew the real value of what we are all over apt to prize in this world, should have been there too, and learnt a desson not soon to be forgotten. I put my hand in my controlled for my napkin, to give my een a wipe, but found it was away, and feared muckle I had dropped it on the road, though, in this, I was happily mistaken, having, before I went to my bed, found that on my journey I had tied it over my neckeloth, to keep away sore throats.

It was a sad heart to us all, to see the lifeless creature in his white night-cap and een closed, lying with his yellow hair spread on the pillow; and we went out, that the women-folk might cover up the looking-glass and the face of the clock, ere they proceeded to dress the body in its last class—class that would ne'er need changing; but, when we were half down the stair, and I felt glad with the thoughts of getting to the fresh air, we were obliged to turn up again for a wee, to let the man past, that was bringen ing in the dead-deal.

But why weave a long story out of the materials of sorrow? or endeavour to paint feelings that have no outward sign, lying shut up within the sanctuary of the heart? The grief of a father and a mother can only be conceived by them who, as fathers and mothers, have suffered the loss of their barns,—a treasure more precious to nature than silver or gold, home to the land-sick sailor, or daylight to the blind man, sitting beaking in the heat of the morning sunary and meaning of the morning sunary and meaning the same of the morning sunary and meaning the same of the same of the morning sunary and meaning the same of the same o with all hastel two men brought it in on their shoulders betimes on the following morning; and it was a sight that made my blood run cold to see the dead corpse of poor Mungo my own prentice, hoisted up from the bed, and laid in his black-handled, narrow housie. All had taken their last looks, the hid was screwed down by means of screw-drivers, and I read the plate, which said, "Mungo Glen, aged 15." Alas! early was he cut off from among the living a flower snapped in its spring blossom and an awiful warning to us all, sinful and heedless mortals, of the uncertainty of this state of being.

In the course of the forenom, Maister Glen's cart's was brought to the door, drawn by two black horses with long tails and hairy feet, a tram one and a leader. Though the job shook my nerves, I could a not refuse to give them a hand down the stair with the coffin, which had a fief-like smell of death and saw-dust; and we got it fairly landed in the cart, among clean straw. I saw the clodhapper of a plow-man ave dighting his een with the sleeve of his big-coat.

The mother, Mistress Glen, a little fattish woman, and as fine a homely body as ye ever met with, but sorely distracted at this time by sorrow. sat at the head, with her bonnet drawn over her face. and her shawl thrown across her shoulders, being a blue and red spot on a white ground of It was a dist mal-like-looking thing to see her sitting there, with the dead body of her son at her feet; and, at the side of his kist with his class, on the top of which was tied not being room for't in the inside like, (for he had twelve shirts, and three pair of trowsers, and a Sunday and every-day's coat, with stockings and other things) his old white beaver hat, turned up behind, which he used to wear when he was with me. His Sunday's hat I did not see, but most likely it was in among his claes, to keep it from the rain, and preserved, no doubt, for the use of some of his little brothers, please God, when they grew

Seeing Maister Glen, who had cut his chin in shaving, in a worn-out disjasket state, mounted on his sheltie, I shook hands with them both; and, in my thoughtlessness, wished them "a good journey," knowing well what a sorrowful home-going it would be to them, and what their bairns would think when they saw what was lying in the cart beside their mother. On this the big plowman, that wore a broad blue bonnet and cordured cutikins, with a grey big-coat slit up behind in the mainer I commonly made for laddies, gave his long whip a crack, and draws off to the centured and drove off to the eastward. and as has to waste precious time in relating how I returned to my own country, especially as I may be thankful that nothing particular happened, excepting the coach wheels riding over an old dog that was lying sleeping on the middle of the roads and, poor brute, nearly got one of his fore paws chacked off. The day was sharp and frosty, and all the passengers took a loup off at a vill house, with a Hielandman, on the sign of it, to get a dram, to gar them bear up against the cold; yet kenning what had but so lately happened, and having the fears of Maister Wiggie before my een I had made a solemn vew, within myself, not to taste liquor for six months at least; not would I here break my word, the much made a fool of by an Englisher, and a fou Eirsiben, who sang all the road, contenting myself, in the best way I could, with a tumbler of strong Seeing Maister Glen. sakid-rattud owt busingsod

It is an old proverh, and a true one, that there is no sest to the wicked; so when I got home. I found business crying out for me, loudly, having been twice wanted to take the measure for suits of class. Of course, kenning that my two customers would begwehrvinge to immediately cut mydsticke to btheir houses, and promised without fail to have inv-work done-against the inext Sabbathuo Whether from but hurry, or my grief for poor Mungo, bor mayberfrom bothed found on the Saturday night when the class were sent whome on other arms of Tammie Bodkin. whond I was obliged too hire by way of a foresmand that some newful mistake thad occurred to the coabsof the die having been made for the back of the other? the one being long and tall, the other thick and shorts southat Maistern Petern Pole's Coffsudid not reach above half-way down his arms, and the Itails sended at the small of the back previdering him a sperfect fright; while Maister Watty Firldn's new coat hang on thim like a threadnought the sleeves coming over the nebs of his fingers and ithe haunch buttons hanging down between his heels, making himresemble a mouse below a firlbth With some persuasion, howevers there being but small difference in the value of the cloths, the one being a west of England bottle-green; and the other la Manchester blues I caused them to niffer, and hushed up the business; which, had they been obstreperous, would have made half the parish of Dalkeith stand on end.

After poor Mungo had been beneath the mools, I daresay a good month, Benjiey as he was one forenoon diverting himself dozing his tap in the room where they sleeped happened to drive it in below the bed, where, scrambling in on his hands and feet, he found a half sheet of paper written over in Mangois hand-writing the which he brought to mien and por looking over it. Whound it dingled in metre dikes the hurry, or my grief for poor Mungobive Golamlage so Having no skeel in these matters I sent lipithe closs for James Batter, who being a member of the fifteen-pence-a-quarter subscription book-clubuched readcappower bevallosorts of things, sacred and profaneto James las che livas humming it governiwith dis specs abulislabenky igave individude their gaithumpedi His thigh, saying & Print print man, dife, primes good, scapital 3 dand so on, which astonished ind much, kerning awhod had awritten ditd-ad callant athat that sleepeth with our Benjie, and/ could hot liave shaped as pair nofindeggins, sthought we ohad offered him of the the nebs of his fingersmodghish serift and to myors - Seeing what it was thought of by one who kent what was what and could distinguish the difference between an Brand Bull's foot, Landgedoit necessary for me to take a copy of it which, for the benefit of them that like poems, I do not scruple to tag to the caused them to niffer, and husbedratquisted to dist which, had they been obstreperous, would have made that the parish was but belt with with the parish was but belt with with with the

After poor Margaeboulrae see algimutante mools, I daresay a good medievada pakid yanedest was one foremoon diverting himself sile in your one; sid room the room where, the glocy ad the learned and the side of the bed where, screen longing as a side of the learned below the bed, where, screen longing as the learned seed where, screen longing as the learned seed, where, screen longing as the learned seed, where, screen longing as the learned seed where learned seed where the learned seed where seed where the learned seed where seed where the learned seed where seed wh

That's poor Musicon with and James Batter, and the defending speed of the Acceleration of the Acceleration of the Sand non-defending speed of the Acceleration of the Sant of Robert Party himself hydron been spared. Some may judgement house, stimulation to be the nature; but I was attended in the Act of the Acceleration of th

There are busy crowds around me
On ilka lang dull street;
Yet, though sae mony surround me,
I kenna ane I meet.
And I think on kind, kent faces,
And o' blithe and cheery days,
When I wander'd out, wi' our ain folk,
Out-owre the simmer brace.

Wae's me, for my heart is breaking!
I think on my brithers sma',
And on my sister greeting,
When I came frae hame awa;
And oh! how my mither sobbit,
As she shook me by the hand;
When I left the door o' our auld house,
To come to this stranger land!

There's nae place like our ain hame;
Oh, I wish that I was there!—
There's nae hame like our ain hame
To be met wi' ony where!—
And, oh! that I were back again
To our farm and fields so green;
And heard the tongues o' my ain folk,
And was what I hae been!

That's poor Musero's potent should be and James Batter, and the destruction are should not far short of Robert Burns himself, bad, he been spared. Some may judge otherwise, out of bad taste or ill nature; but I would bus think them to write a better at their feiture. meants a sill empse more

There are busy crowds around me
On alka lang dull street;
Yet, though sae mony surround me.
I kenna ane I meet,
And I think on hind, kent faces,
And o' blithe and cheery days,
When I wander'd out, wi' our ain folk.
Outcowre the simm of praces.

Wae's me, for my heart is breaking?
I think on my brithers sma'.
And on my sister greeting,
When I came frac hame awn,
And oh! how my muher sobbit.
As she shook me by the hand,
When I left the door o' our auld house.
To come to this stranger laud!

There's nac place like our ain hame;

Oh, I wish that I was there'—
There's nac hame like our ain hame
To be met wi' ony where '—
And, oh! that I were back again
To our farm and fields so green;
And heard the tongues o' my am folk
And was what I hae been'

on me with a full stream was tremendous, enabling me-who say't that should not say't-to lay bye a wheen bawbees for a sore head, or the frailties of old age. Somehow or other, the claes made on my shop-board came into great vogue through all Dalkeith, both for neatness of shape, and nicety of workmanship; and dixxxuggiquerran of other masters did not think themselves perfected, or worthy a decent aron the arrelander their houghs for three months in my service. With regard to myself, somethey bedsets agata indot bedsets bed better, that if I had gone into Edinde but to dand on ord tune, I could have cut that the trade out and maybe right and maybe in grant and maybe right and marker of the trade of the control of the c himself; but I just heard them speak, and kept my wheisht. Everne transmebre no michemia be the best judge of his own privated meremed but agh, to be sure, the advice of a true first and speak and precious state rubies, and sweeter than rubies, and sweeter than rubies.

It was about the mandrios blanch in the year of grace anno domini eightlein richtersofthat the whole country treubled; and a grant into the ague, under the consternation of Bonaparte, and all the French to trace the bar survivage with a surface of the French of the property of the first the first of the

on me with a full stream was tremendous, enabling me-who say't that should not say't-to lay bye a wheen bawbees for a sore head, or the frailties of old age. Somehow or other, the claes made on my shop-board came into great vogue through all Dalkeith, both for neatness of shape, and nicety of workmanship; and the young journeymen of other masters did not think themselves perfected, or worthy a decent wage, till they had crooked their houghs for three months in my service. With regard to myself, some of implacquaintances told me, that if I had gone into Edinburgh to push my fortune, I could have cut half the trade out of Breath, and maybe risens in the course of nature, to be Lord Provost himself; but I just heard them speak, and kept my wheisht. Every man has a night to be the best judge of his own private matters, though, to be sure, the advice of a true friend is often more precious than rubies, and sweeter than the Balm of Gilead.

It was about the month of March, in the year of grace anno domini eighteen hundred; that the whole country trembled, like a giant ill of the ague, under the consternation of Bonaparte, and all the French wagabonds emigrating over, and landing in the Firth. Keep us all 1 the folk doith bodies put less confidence than became them in what our volunteer regiments were able and willing to do; though we had a remnant among us of the true blood, that with loud laughter laughed the creatures to sepur; and I.

for one kept up my blucks like a time Hielander-Does any living soul believe that Scotland could be loonguered, and the like of insysold like Dayptinn slaves, into captivity to Figure I despise such haiversa Are we not descended, faither and son, from Robert Bruce and Sir William Walkeet baving the bright blood of freemen in our veins, and the Penttland Hills, as well as jour own dear homes and firesides; to fight for ! The rescal that would not give cuttand-thrust for his Country, las flong as he had a breath to draw or a leg to stand on should be tied neck and heels without benefit of clergy, and thrown over Beith pier to swift for his life like a mangy on the bloody field of battle, all slaughtered gob en Hard doubtless it he and I freely confess it to be called by sound of bugle, or tack of drum, from the counter and the shop-board - ment that have been born and bred to peaceful callings, to mount the red facket, bean the bair, buckle on the buffbelt, doad with ball-cartridge, and screw bayonets; but it's no use talking the were ever the free British ; and before we would say to Frenchmen that we were their humble servants, we would either twist the very noses off their faces, or perish in the their spentacles of prophecy, that a. slygirtsfelfortoly bellt was ove the opinion of the Opposition folk, the Whigs, the Black-nebs, the Radicals, and the Friends of the People, together with the dest of the clanjamphreyethat itsivis and one battles and that Bonaparte would hickens back and side an All this was in the heart and heat of the great war, when we were struggling like drowning men, for our very life and existence, and when duradours were nailed to the mast-head. One would have thought they were a set of prophets, they were all so busy prophesving and hever anything good at They kent (believe them) that we were to be smoter hip and thigh ; land that to oppose the vile Corsican was like men with straitjackets out of Bedlam They could see nothing brewing around them but death, and disaster, and desolation, and pillage, and national bankrupton our brave Hielanders, with their heads shot off, lying on the bloody field of battle, all slaughtered tola manti our sailors, thand-cuffed and shackled husing in French prison on the by-past days of Camperdown, and of Lord Rodney breaking through the line, with all their fleets sunk to the bottom of the salt sea, after being raked fore and aft with chainshot, and our timber, sugar, tea, and treacle merchants, all fleeing for safety and succouradown to lodgings in the Abbey-strand, with a wellow stocking on the lae leg, and a black one on the other like a wheen mountebanks. Little could they foresee, with their spentacles of prophecy, that a hattle of Waterldo would ever be fought, to make the conformled fugies draw in their horns, dand stelle dup their of the People, together withreveroresdeglighting and do not pretend to be a politician, thaving been bland to the tailbring like syne ever I was a callant. and not seeing the Adverteezer Newspapers, goolthe Edinburgh Evening Courante save and except at an orra time! -sont shall say dib more; nor pretend to be one of the thousand and one wise men able and willing to direct his Majesty's Ministers on all matters of importance regarding Church or States One thing, how soever, altrust b kengand that is any duty to my Kings asi hisodoval subject, to rold Scotland, as her ganworthyl son, and to thy family, as their prop! support, and breadwinners so I shall stick to all three (under Heaven) asolong lase I have a drop of iblood birmy precious veinsid But the truth is and broil Metrit out and shame thet de'il athat I could not help miking these general observations, (as Maister Wiggie acalls they spiritualeezing of his discourses,) as what I have to relate inight well make my principles suspected overethey not known to all the world to be as firm as the foundations of the Bass Rock broke shall nevertheless judge for yourselves again to tsom

It was sometime in the blasty month of March, the weather being rawish and rainy, with shorp frosty brights that left all the window-soles whitewashed ever with frost rindy in the mornings, that last I was going out in the dark, before I ving down in my bed, to give a look into the lieushouse door, and lock the boal-cellar so that I might hand the bit key on the nail behind our room windoweshutter. I happened to give a keek in, and, lo and behold! the awful apparition of a man with a yellow jacket, dving sound edsleep on a great lump of pabrot-coal rings cornert as Inthe firstaburay of myoterpoinand supprise at edecing a mam with any ellow sacket and a blue forage ing-cap in such a situation, hi was dike to drop othe agood twopenny reandle / and faint clean awayor but, coming to myself in a juffie, Indetermined, ingease it might be a highway robber, to thraw about the key, rand, running up for the firelock, shoot him through the head instantly, if found necessary to In turning eround the key, the lock, being in want of ha feather tob oil, made a noise, land wakened the poor wretch, liwhd, jumping to the soles of his feet in despair oried gout in a voice that was like to break my heart, though -Lichard make out one word of his paraphernally. At minded me, by all the world, tof a wheen cats fufefing and fighting through other, and whiles someothing that sounded like off Sugar, sngar, measure the ocord, Hand & dabble dabble ish It was worse than the most outrageous Gaelic ever spoken in the height of It was sometime in ranshkalandilth yd nolazad, vte6f Ohod? thinks Lief friently vercannot be a Chris-Itidafrom your lingo, that's onething poz; and lawfuld wager tippence yournan Frenchybni-Whotkens; keep. uscallabut ve may die Bonaparte dimselfain disguise, seinne over in a dat-bottomed boat, to sply the maked ness of the land of Souve may just rest content, and okdep your duarters good till the morn's morning Plan give a keek in, and, lo and behold! the awful ap-

It was a wonderful business, and enough to happen to a man in the course of his lifetime, to find Mounseer from Paris in his coal-neuk, and have the end my of his country ship under lock und key Hso, while he kept rampaging, fulling, stumping, and diabbling away, I went in, and brought out Bentle, with a blanket rowed round Him and my journeys man, Tommy Stavtage, who being an sorphan, I made a kind of parlour-boarder of, he sleeping on a shake down beyond the kitchen fire to hold a donsultation, and be witness of the transactionin a wod mid egot my misket, and Tommy Staytape drined himself with the goose, a deadly weapon, whoever may get a clour with it, and Benjie took the poker in one hand and the tongs in the other, and out we all marched briskly, to make the Frenchman, that was locked up from the light of day in the coalhouse, surrender ba After hearkening at the door for a while, and finding all quiet, we gave a knock to rouse him up, and see if we could bring anything out of him by speering him cross questions buffommy and Benjie trembled from top to togutike aspen leaves, but fient a word could we make commin sense of at all or I wonder who veducates these foreign creatures? it was in vain to follow him for he just gab-gabbled away, like one of the stone midsons at the tower of Babelo At first I was completely bamboozled, and almost dung stopid, though Jokdat simple creature a chance of escape; reckoning that, one word of French which I wanted to put to bim, so I cried through, ff Canna you speak Scotcha. seer from Paris in his coal-neuk, and havenessement He bad not the politeness to stop and make an swer, but just went on with his string of haivers, without either rhyme or reason, which we could make neither top, tail, nor main of bewor takeld a diw I It was a sere trial to us all, putting us to our wit's end, and how to come on was past, all visible comprehension; when Tommy Staytape, giving his elbow a rub, said, " Od, maister, I wager something, that he's broken loose free Pennicuick. We have him himself with the goose, a dealer a ni nattor is sail 19 On Pennicuick being mentioned, we heard the foreign creature in the coal-house groaning out, ff och" and "ahone," and parblen," and Mysie Rabble," that I fancy was his sweetheart at home, some bit French quean, that wondered he was never like to dome from the wars and marry her. I thought on this for his voice was mournful, though I could not understand the words; and kenning he was a stranger in a far land, my bowels yearned within me with compassion towards him but seven leaves 989 I would have given half arcrown, at that blessed moment, to have been able to wash my hands free of hims but I swithered; and was like the cuddle between the two bundles of have At long and last a thought struck me, which was to give the deluded simple creature a chance of escape; reckoning that, if he found his way homes he would see the shame and folly of fighting against us any more; and mar-Tying Mysic Rabble, Live a contented, and peaceful life, under his own fig and bay tree So wishing him a sound sleep, I cried through the door, "Mounseer, gooda nighta;" decoying away Benjie and Tommy Staytape into the house Bidding them depart to their beds, I said to them, after shutting the door, "Now; callants, we have the precious life of a fellow creature in our hand, and to account for. Though he has a yellow jacket on, and speaks nonsense, yet, nevertheless, he is of the same flesh and blood as ourselves ... Maybe we may be all obliged to wear green foraging-caps before we die vet! Mention what we have seen or heard to no living soul informay her if he were to escape, we would be all taken up on suspicion of being spies, and hanged on a gallows as high, as Haman." After giving them this wholesome advice, I despatched them to their beds like lamplighters, bidding them to never fash their thumbs but sleep like tops as I would keep a sharp look out till morning we berebis As soon, howsoever, as I heard them sleeping, and playing on the pipes through their moses, I cried first "Tommy," and syne "Benjie" to be sure; and, glad to receive no answer; from either, I went to the aumrie and took out a mutton bone, gey sair pyked, but fleshy enough at the mouse end, and putting a penny row beside it, crap out to the coalHouse on invitibles. MAID was quite as pussie, i so Ishop them through the hole at the corner hade for letting the beatstings and by aland giving a tirl. aried worth throughout Hallon, Montiseer, there's voin suppera ford woud; brir I dard sava vou mire seer, gooda nighta;" decoying away Benitiquisyd me The poor chiel commenced again to grunt and grane, and group and yelp, and cry ohone than all make such woeful lamentations; that heart of man could not stand it; and I found the warm tears prab-Before being put to this Will of my strength, I thought that, if ever it was my fortune to forgather with a Frenchman, either him of me should do or die put, Ffegs, one should not track so crouse before they are but to the test and. though I had taken a prisoner without fighting at all though he had come into the coal-house of the Philistines of his own accord as it were, and was as safe as the spy in the house of Rahab at Jericho.di and, though we had him, like a mouse beneath a firlot, shug under Eastody of Thek and Rev, vet I considered within myself, With a pitiful consideration, that, although he could not speak well, he might ver feel deeply that he might have a father and mother, and sisters and brothers, in his ain country, weeping and wearying for his return; and that his tractive Mysle Rabble might wine away like a snapt pyked, but fleshrash halord by sil bus rawbh bad putting a penny row beside it, crap out to the coal-

Being a volunteer and so one of his Majesty's chiffdential vservants I swithered tremendously between my duty as a man and a soldier; but. de What voil like, nature will ave be uppermost! The scale weighed down to the side of pity. Thearken ed to the scripture that promises a blessing to the merciful in heart, and determined, come of it what would to let the French take his chance of falling him, half an hour the piece, time shired redto office "Having given him a due allowance by looking at my watch, and thinking he would have had enough of time to have taken his will of other muttone bone in the way of pyking. I went to the press and brought but a bottle of swipes, which I also shoved through the hole; although, for lack of tanker there being none at hand, he would be obliged to lift it to His head and do his best To show the creature Hid not want sense; he shoved when he was done the empty plate and the toom Bottle through beneath the door, mumbling some trash or other, which me living creature could comprehend, but which, I dare say. Trom the way it was said was the telling me how much he was obliged for this supper and Book Holding Prome my kindness towards him, ble grew more composed to but as the went back to the corner to lie down, I heard him give two three hear vy sicks. I could not thel'to mortal fee though the man was of mine, so I gave the key a canny thraw Moosey'll maybe hae a pistol; and, if his birse be round in the lock, as it were by chance; and wishing him a good night, went to my bed beside between my duty as a man and a soldier; beans At the dawn of day, by cock-craw, Benjie, and Tommy Staytape, keen of the play, were up and a stir, as auxious as if their life depended on it to see that all was safe and snug, and that the prisoner had not shot the lock. They agreed to march sentry over him, half an hour the piece, time about, the one stretching himself out on a stool beside the kitchen fire, by way of a bench in the guard-house, while the other went to and fro like the ticker of a clock. I dare say they saw themselves marching him, after breakfast time, with his yellow jacket, through a . mob of weans, with glowring egu and gaping mouths, being none at hand, he would be dindlo T ada at qu The back window being up a jink, I heard the two confabbing. "We'll draw cuts," said Benjie, "which is to walk sentry first; see, here's two straws, the longest gets the choice; "I've won," cried Tommy; if so gang you in a while, and, if I need ve or grow frightened; I'll beat leather-typatch wit my buckles on the back-door. But we had better see first what he is about, for he may be howking a hole through aneath the foundations; thee fiefs can work like moudiewards " I'll slip forrett" said Benjie, "frand gie a peap." +" Keep to avside, vacried Tommy Staytape, Sufor, adog on it, Moosev'll maybe hae a pistol; and, if his birse be up he would think nice mair or shooting ve as dead as a midwkit than Lawould donof taking my breaks had come against Tommy's teeth, he took holdest reffilal rin past, and gie a knock at the door wie the take tent : theigue Beaken's quelmideshorotentage su ToComes awayd then! answered of Tommys Sound ye'll hear him gie a yowl, and commence gabbling I jaloused at once that this was nonse usoogud solid bluAs albithis was going on I rose and took a vizzy between the chinks of the window shutters a sonjust as digot mainebato the hole, I saw Benjies as he flew past nigive the door a drive. His consternation, on finding-it sheed half open, I may be easier simagined thaw described respecially was on the door, dunting to again, it being soofle in the chinges; they both plainly-lieardean fistling ewithin me Neither of them lever got such a fleg since they were borne for experting the Frenchman to bounce out like a rearing lims they hurried like mad into the house, couping the creek over one anothers Tommos spraining his thumb against the back door, and Benjie's foot going Into Toning's coat packet which it carried away went a dunt on the causelabras atolo deskik, tindtien -neAt the noise of this stramash I Vtook opportunity to come fleeing down the stair of with the ganein my handadin the first blace tto show them I was not frightened to handle firegrass and sin the second making iprefence that Lethought at was Mounsper with his green foraging tops making an eathernpt at housebreaking to Benjieiewas in Authriblewpickles and though his loss was blooding with the drive he had come against Tommy's teeth, he took holdsof my arm like grind dath, brying, ball ake tent, faither, take tent; the door is appen, quouthe drawnic wicker hiding himself behindvits. Healt brains some Of us with a house of court, and the proportion of the work and the proportion of the large with a large of the large with a large of the large with the the large

I jaloused at once that this was nonsensen judging that, by all means of rationality the creature would be off and away like light wing too the sea shore, and over to France in some thonest mad's fishing boat, down by at Fisheriow; but to throw stoure in the een of the two callants, I loaded with wheen draps in their presence; and warily priming the pan, went to again, it beinglosoftled in sperdent with what of mortaning and Benjie came behind me while, pushing the door wide open with withenfuzzle was of held my finger at the tricker of criedus Stand or be shote? when young Cursecowl's big nilly mastiff-dog, with the bare mutton bone in fits weethe bolted through between my legs like a fury and with such a force as to heel me over on the braid of my backy While I went a dunt on the causeway that chade the guntigo off and riddled Nanse's best washing tub in a manner that laid it on the isuperannuated list las to the matter of holdingodn waterould Therigoose, athab was ditting and her eggs among release straw, limthegin side of M. was also bendered addmiter for difemillant to What became notather French valgrant was never seen or heard tell of from that day to this ... Maybe he was catched, and, tied neck and heels, hurried back to Pennicuick, as fast as he left it ; of maybeas one of the Fisherrow oyster-boats was amissing next morning he succeeded in giving our brave fleets the slip, and rowing night and day against wind and tide got home in a safe skin a but this is all matter of surmise, mobody kensus wow rafte 198 On making search in the coal-house at our leisure afterwards we found a boxful of things with black dots on them; some with one, some with two, and four, and six, and so on, for playing at an outlandish game they call the dominoes wilt was the handiwork of the poor French creature, that had no other Christian employment, but making these and such like, out of sheep-shanks and marrow-liones I never liked gambling all my life, it being contrary to the Ten Commandments; and mind of putting on the back of the fire the old pack of cards, with the Jack of trumps among themothat the deboched fourneymen tailors, in the shop with me in the Grassmarket; used to play birkie with when the maister's back was turned. This is the first time I have acknowledged the transaction to alliving soul ; had they found me out at the time, my life would not have been worth a pinch of snuffim But as to the dominges, considering that the Frenchy must have deft them as a token of gratitude, and as the only payment in his power for a bit comfortable supper, it behoved intention so I thought Inot to turn the wrong side of my face altogether on his present, as that would be unmannerly towards a poor strangered Nevertheless and notwithstanding all these reas sons, the dominoes, after everything that can be said of good anent them were varblack sight; and for months and months produced a scene of riot and idle set after working hours othat went far to lender our liousie, that was before a picture of decorum and decency, a tabernacle of confusion, and a hell upon earth. Whenever time for stopping work came about, down we regularly all sat, night after night, the wife! Benjie, Tomay Staytape, and myself, playing for a halpenny the game, and growing as anxious ofieree, and keen about it, as if we had been earning the bread of life of After two three months trial I saw that it would never do of for all subordination was fast coming to an end in our bit house, and for lack of looking after, a great humber of small decounts for clouting elbows, piecing waistcouts, and mending leggins, remained unpaid da great number of wanf customers crowding about as be way of giving as their change, but without intention of ever paying a single fractionivil The wife, that med to keep every! thing bein and snug, behaving therself like the sober mother of a family began to funk on being taken through hands, and grewt obstrapulous with ther tonguel Instead of following my directions who was this home maisterd in whe contringed and shaping linera Tommy Staytape pretended to set up aligudamentdefelisodin, and disfiguredosome playmen's lackets in a mariner most hideons to behold; while, to crown all, even Absalom, the very callant Benjie my only bairn, had the impudence to contradict me more than once and began to think himself as clever as his fatheranoSaveo hs all ladt was a terrible business but I determined come what would to give it ithe our granted at his hands was likely thatits gnidsidil ad Elvery mighty being dworse than another L did not wait long for an opportunity of letting the whole of thein ken my mindy jand that, whenever I chose! Lecould make them wheel to the wight about So ithchanced, has hwe never employing as that in I o was him primetsbacky dirsts rooking the bre and syne the other, and I saw them twisting land screwing theirs mouths about as sififthey were chewing Hitterosloes Finding that they were on the point off being beaten roup and stoup, they all three rose unoffembthe chairs crying with senervoiced thatiel was a cheat -An elder of Maister Wiggie's kirle to be called a cheat! . Most awfulb! Flesh and blood could not stand it more especially when I thought one who had dared to presume to ball me such ; son ind owhirlwind of furyal swept upotwo nievefuls of deminoes off the table, band made them fleelinto the bleezing fire cowhere after fizzing and cracking like a wheen squeebs, the whole toty except about half! a-dozeno which fell into ithe porritch pot which was

onbloiling vatother finite, were reduced to a beap of greyraizles. 9 I csoonshowed them who was the top of the tree and whatothey swere likely to make of crown all, even Absalom, the verynoillsday Infittebnu Somuch for a Mounseer's legacy dibeing in a kind of doubt, whether, according to the riot not and the carticles of warse I shad a scleave conscience an letting thim awayyd could not expect that tany fave our granted at his hands was likely to prosperidal in fighting, liters weilekent to themselves and rall the world that they have no tearthly chance with as tiso they are reduced to the necessity lof doing what they can, by coming too our firesides in sheep's clothing. and throwing fram-pushion among the family broth They had better take care that they do not get their other, and I saw them twisting bebasesraging - Having given the dominoes their due, and washed myohands freesof a gambling I trustiffor everimone; Laurned myself to a better business, which was the going, leaf by deaf, back through our bit day books where I founda/tremendous sould of wee outstanding debts. bd daresay, not to tella lee, there were fifty of them, from a slilling to eighteen pencet and so one but small and small reckpned up by simple adso dition amount to a round sum ; while to add to the misery of the matter, Infound we were lentangline ourselves to work to a wheen ugly customers, skemps that had not wherewithal to pay lawful debts and downright rascals, raggamaffins, latid ne'er-do-weels. According to the articles of indenture, drawn up between me and Tommyo Staytape, by Rory. Sneck-drawer, the penny writer, when he was bound a prentice to me for seven years. I had engaged myself to bring him up to be a man of business. Though now a journeyman, I reckoned the obligation still binding; so, tying up two dockets of accounts with a piece of twine, I gave one pancel to Tommy and the other to Benjie, telling them, by way of encouragement, that I would give them a penny the pound for what silver they could bring me in by hook or crook.

After three days toil and trouble, wherein they mostly wore their shoon off their feet, going first up one closs, and syne down another, up trap-stairs to garrets, and ben long trances that led into dirty holes,—what think ye did they collect? Not one bodle—not one coin of copper! This one was out of work;—and that one had his house-rent to pay;—and a third one had an income in his nose;—and a fourth was bedridden with rheumatics;—and a fifth one's mother's auntie's cousin was dead;—and a sixth one's good-brother's nevoy was going to be married come Martymas;—and a seventh one was away to the back of beyond to see his granny in the Hielands; and so on. It was a terrible business, but what wool can ye get by clipping swine?

The only rational answers I got were two; one of them Geggie Trotter, a natural simpleton, told

Absorded the transportant of indefitive quivers the problem of the confidence of the

After three days toil and trouble, wherein they mostly wore their shoon off their feet, going first up one closs, and syne down another, up trap-stairs to garrets, and ben long tranees that led into dirty holes,—what think ye did they collect? Not one bodle—not one coin of copper! This one was out of work;—and that one had his house-rent to pay;—fourth was hedridden with rheumatics;—and a fitth one's mother's auntie s cousin was dead;—and a sixth one s good-brother's nevoy was going to be married come Martymas;—and a seventh one was away to the back of beyond to see his granny in the Hielands; and so on. It was a terrible business, but what wood can ye get by clipping swine?

The only rational answers I got were two; one of them Geggie Trotter, a natural simpleton, told

addition and the multiplication-table, even to vulgar fractions, and all the lave of them.

At the yearly examination of the school-room by the Presbyter; and Master Wiggie, he are sat at the bead of the form and never fulled getting a clap on the head and a wheen carries. They that are fathers will not and a wheen carries. They that are fathers will not and a wheen carries and as a pencock; but when they asked his name, and found whose sol-knar ni ron asked his name, and cease being knad no not askitch in one it nobody could suppose that; the name asked to suppose that; the name and suppose that the should that when a should that all should that a should one, being of that a should one, being of that and, that a should that a should one, being of that and that a should that a should one, being of that a should one, being of

It is a most wonderful thing to the eye of a philosopher, to make observation how youth gets up, notwithstanding all the dunts and tumbles of infancy—to say nothing of the spaining-brash and the teeth-cutting; and to behold the visible changes that the course of a few years produces. Keep us all! it seemed but yesterday to me, when Benjie, a wee bit smout of a wean, with long linty locks and docked petticoats, toddled but and ben, with a coral gumstick tied round his waist with a bit knittin; and now, after he had been at Dominie Thresh em's for four years, he had learned to read Barrie's Collection almost as well as the master could do for his lugs; and was up to all manner of accounts, from simple addition and the multiplication-table, even to vulgar fractions, and all the lave of them.

At the yearly examination of the school-room by the Presbytery and Master Wiggie, he ave sat at the head of the form, and never failed getting a clap on the head and a wheen carvies. They that are fathers will not wonder that this made me as proud as a peacock; but when they asked his name, and found whose son-he was, then the matter seemed to cease being a business of wonder, as nobody could suppose that an only bairn, born to me in lawful wedlock, could be a dult. Folk's cleverness-at least I should think so-lies in their pows; and, that allowed, Benjie's was a gey droll one, being of the most remarkable sort of a shape ve ever saw; but, what is more to the purpose both here and hereafter, he was a real good-hearted callant, though as gleg as a hawk and as sharp as a needle. Everybody that had the smallest gumption prophesied that he would be a real clever one; nor could we grudge that we took pains in his rearing-he having been like a sucking-turkey, or a hot-house plant, from far away, delicate in the constitution—when we saw that the debt was likely to be paid with bank-interest, and that, by his uncommon cleverality, the callant was to be a credit to our family.

Many and long were the debates between his fond mother and me, what trade we would breed him up to; for the matter now became serious, Benjie being in his thirteenth year pland, though a wee bowed in the near leg, from a suppleness about his knee-joint. hevertheless las active as a hatter, and fit for any ealling whatsoever under the sun. One thing I had determined in my own mind, and that was, 'that he should never with my will go abroad. The gentry are no doubt philosophers enough to bring up their bairns like sheep to the shughter, and despatch them as dadies to Bengal and the Cape of Good Hope as soon as they're grown up to when ploo and behold, the first news they hear of them is in a let teruspaled with black waxs telling how they died of the diver complaint, and were buried by six blacks him in our sleep, as one that was wastla anodigwt 28 That was one thing settled and scaled so no more need be said about it; byet, notwithstanding of Nanse's being satisfied that the spaewife was a dez ceitful gipsyd perfectly untrustworthy, shedwould ave have a finger in the pie and try to persualle me in as boaxing way itsue of im Isure my she would say "ane withhalf an ee may see that our son Benjie has just the physog of an admiral. It's a great shame Nanse ran but the house, and syntal guitalbartato sds Po,opo," answered I, gaiwoman, wedinna ken what we're saying. . Do ye imagine that, if he were made a sed-admiral, we could ever live to have any comfort in the son offrour bosom? He Would heared! think ye, be obliged with his ship to sail the salt seas, through foul weather and fair; and, when he met the French, to fight, hack and hew them down, lith and limb, with grape-shot and cutlass si till some unfortunate day or other after having lost a leg and an arm in the service, he is felled as dead as a doornail wi' a cut and thrust over the crown by some furious rascal that saw he was off his guard, glowning win his blind ee another way & style speak haivers. Nanse; what are a the honours of this world worth to No worth this pinel of snuff I have between my finger and thumb no worth a bodle, if we never saw our Benjie again, but the was ave ranging and rampaging far abroad, shedding human blood; and when we could lonly ave dream about him in our sleep, as one that was wandering night and day blindfold down the long, dark, lampless avenue of destruction, and destined never more to visit Dalkeith again except with a wooden stump andoa brass virl now to have his head blown diff his shoulders, mast high, like ingan peelings, with some exploding earthquake of combustible gunpowder. Cal in the laddie, I say, and see what he wad like to just the physog of an admiral. It's a grillszmidad

Nanse ran but the house, and straightway brought Benjies who was playing at the bools, ben oby the Benjies who was playing at the bools, ben oby the lug and hormal had got a glass, so my spirit was up. Stand there, I said the Benjies look main the face, be obliged with his ship to said the "seld when he was, through foul weather and fair; and, when he

Inge Trade ?" answered Benjie, "I would like to be a gentleman." ... ". am 'e datab ed ad bew Dog on it; it was more than I could thole, and I saw that his mother had spoiled him; so, though I liked to give him wholesome reproof rather than lift my hand, I broke through this rule in a couple of hurries, and gave him such a verk in the cheek with the loof of my hand, as made, I'm sure, his ldgs ring, and sent him dozing to the door, like a Marquis of Lothian up by, or sic like, ye may sireso THE Ye see that," said I, as the laddie went ben the house whinging so" ye see what a kettle o' fish ye kirk. And if no kirk casts up-white sham synd huss Weel, weel," answered Nanse, a wee startled by my strong, decisive way of managing, "ye ken best, and I fancy; maun tak the matter your ain wayed But we can had nae earthly objection to making him a lawer's advocattd" aroled sleen out to flux ad 65 Litwad see him hanged first;" answered A. What do do you imagine I would set a son of mine to be a sherry offisher ganging about rampaging through the country taking up fiefs and robbers. and suspicious characters wi' wauf looks and waur daes; exposed to all manner of evil communication from bad company in the way o' business ; and rouping out puir creatures, that canna find wherewithal to pay their lawful debts, at the Cross, by warrant o' the Sherry, wi' an auld chair in ac hand and an eevery hammer in the ither as Sicean a sight a gentleman." wad be the death o' me." I be What think ve then of the preaching line?" saw that his mother had spoiled him sarah baka The preaching line in quot I WiNo, no, that'll hever do. Not that I want respect for ministers, who are the servants of the Most High ; but the truth is, that unless ve have great friends and patronage of the like of the Duke down by nor the Marquis of Lothian up by, or sic like, ye may preach yoursell as hoarse as a corbie, from June to January, before ony body will say, " hae, puir man, there's a kirk.' And if no kirk casts up-which is mair nor likely what can a young probationer turn his hand He has learned no trades so he can neither work nor want of He daurna dig nor Idelve, even though he were able, or he would be hauled by the cuff of the neck before his betters in the General Assembly, for having the impudence to go for to be so bold as dislandir the cloth, and though he may get his bit orra half-a-guinea whiles, for holding forth in some bit country kirk, to a wheen shepherds and their dogs, when the minister himself, stabing With the fat of guide living and little work, is lying all of a bile fever, or has the gout in his muckle the vet he has ave the miseries of uncertainty to encounter, his cout grows bare in the cuffs, greasy in the neck, afield brown between the shouthers; his faw bones they have dissected a' the red flesh off them, into a get long and lank, his een sunk, and his head grey wi' vexation, and what the wise Solomon calls 'hope deferred; so at long and lasts friendless and pennyless, he takes the incurable complaint of a broken heart, and is buried out of the gate in some bit true as ye are sitting brey-krik and for range generate Stop, stop, gudeman," cried Nanse, half greeting, "that's an awfu' business; but I daursey it is ower true. But mightna we breed him a doctor? It seems they have unco profits, and, as he's sac clever, he might come to be a graduit "rived a nam a "Doctor!" answered I "Kay kay let that flee stick i the wa ; it's a ye ken about it, o If we was only aware of what doctors had to do and see. between dwining weans and crying wives, ye would have thought twice before we let that out ... How do ye think our callant has a heart within him to look at folk blooding like sheep, or to sew up cutted throats with a silver needle and silk thread, as I would stitch a pair of trowsers ; or to trepan out pieces of cloured skulls, filling up the hole with an iron plate; and pull teeth, maybe the only ones left, out of auld women's heads, and so on, to say nothing of rampaging with dark lanterns, and double-tweel dreadnoughts, about gousty kirk-yards, among humlock and long nettles, the baill night over, like spunkie-shoving the dead corpses, winding sheets and all, into corn-sacks, and boiling their bones, after they have dissected a' the red flesh off them, into a big chodron, to get out the marrow to make odrogs of the westion, and what the wise Solomon calls 'sign'

Eh, stop, stop, Mansie !" cried Nanse, holding nyless, he takes the incurable complainshift is liqui id "Na," continued I, to but it's a true bill it's as true as ye are sitting there. And do ye think that any earthly compensation, either gowpins of gowd by way of fees, or yellow charlots to ride in, with a black servant sticking up behind, like a sign over a tobacconist's door, can ever make up for the loss of a man's having all his feelings seared to iron, and his soul made into whinstone, year into the nethermillstone, by being art and part in sic dark and dewiltshaborhinations 210 Go away wi sicean downright honsense. "Hearken to my words, Wanse, my dear. The happiest man is he that can live quietly and soberly on the earlings of his industry, pays his day and way works not only to win the bread of life for his wife and wears, but because he kens that idleset is sinful, keeps to pure heart towards God and man. and caring flot for the fashion of this World, departs from the nopedragoing, through the merits of out of auld women's heads, ist better, when a women's all loov Yeldrehight after an said Nanse, giving me a pat on the shouther, and kilding who was her masterus well as sponse the fill wad it become me to gang for to gie advice to my betters. "Tak vour all, igto corn-sacks, and boiling their bones, after will of the business guideman is and if ye dinna make him an Admiral, just make him what eye like."

no Now is the time, thought I to myself, to carry my point, finding the drappikie I had taken with Donald M Naughton, in settling his account for the green jucket, still working in my noddle, and giving me a power of words equal to Mr. Blouster the Cameronian preacher, now is the time, for I still saw the unleavened pride of womankind wambling within her, like a serpent that has got a knock on the pow, and been cast down but not destroyed; so, taking a hearty snuff out of my box, and drawing it up first one nostril, their another, syna dighting my finger and thumb on my breek knees, on What think ye?" said I, " of a sweep? Were it not for getting their faces blacked like savages, a sweep is not such a bad trade after a'; though, to be sure, going down lows six stories high, head foremost, and landing upon the soles of their feet upon the hearth-stone, like a kittlin, is no just so pleasant." Ye observe, it was only to throw cold water on the unthrifty flame of a mother's pride that I said this, and to pull down uppishness from its heathenish temple in the lieart. head foremost. So I looked to her, to hear how she a bit daigh, half an ounce weight, pind smost filnow Haivers, haivers," said Nanse, birsing up like a cat before a colley so Sweep, say ve? I would about in't? Just naething ava ;-and consider on a sooner send him up wi Lunardi to the man of the moon for see him banished, shackled neck and heels, to Botany Bay." like." A week a week, answered L "what notion have we of the packman line? We gould fill his box with needles and prins, and tape, and hanks of worsted, and penny thimbles, at a small expense ; and, putting a stick in his hand, send him abroad into the wide world to push his fortune." redaesor namorem The wife looked dumbfoundered b Howsoever ff On breed him a rowley-poley man," continued I, "f to trail about the country frequenting fairs; and dozing thro'the streets selling penny cakes to weams. out of a basket slung round the neck with a leather strappand parliaments, and quality, brown and white, and snaps well peppered, and gingerbread nits, and solon. The trade is no a bad ane, if creatures would only learn to be careful, of deposit ; a rafte about noff Mansie Wauch Mansie Wauch, hae ye gane out of yere wuts, eried Nanse, " are ye really sekittlin, is no just so pleasant." Ye observe, suoix I saw what I was about, so went on without pretending to mind her. - SOr what say ye to a pennypie-manit "I'fags, it's a cory birth, and ane that gars the cappers birl down What's the expense of a bit daigh, half an ounce weight, pirled round wi' the knuckles into a case, and filled half, fully salt and water, wi twa or three nips o braxy doating about in't? Just naething ava ;-and consider on a winter night, when ice shockles are hinging from the tiles, and stamachs relish, what is warm and tasty; what a sale they can get, if they go about jingling their little bell, and keep the genuine article. Then ye ken in the afternoon, he can show that he bast two strings to his bow, and have a wheen cookies, either new baked for ladies, tea parties, or the yesterday's auld shopkeepers, het up, i' the oven again, or which is all to se purpose, bus, sint brot ym to estat and believe my ain central could almost imagine some warlock had thrown glamour into them, said.

Name, staring me broad in the face and guites on

"Take a good look, gudewifes for seeing's believing," quo' I; and then continued, without drawing breath or bridle, at full birrane N beirg "Joe W

There he'll see life in all its variorums. Losh keep us a' what an insight into the secrets of roasting, brandering, frying holling, baking, and brewing-nicking of peece's craigs, backing the necks of dead chickens, and cutting out the tongues of leeving turkeys in the what a steaming o' fat soup in the nostric land siccan ar collection of fine smells, as would persuade a man that he could fill his stomach thro his nose! No weather can reach such cattlenote may be a storm of suow, twenty feet deep or am even-down pour of rain, washing the very cats off the

looke tops, when a weaver is shivering ut his folm, with not a drop of blood at his finger halls, and a tailor like myself, so humb with cauld, that instead of driving the needle this of the Claith, he brogs it that has an thumb—then, flent a hair care they but, standing beside a rifiting, roaring, parrot coal fire, in a white airon, and a gingham packet, they pour sance out of he pan into another, to said the taste of my lord this, and my lady that, turning, by their legardemain, list into fowl, and fowlinto flesh; till, in the long run, man, woman, and weam, a chew and champ laway, without kenning more what they are eating than we ken the day yell dee, or whether the Witch of Ender were a demity failderal, or a manco putilibut. "bountage and but I oup "an

"Weel," cried Nanse, half rising to go ben the house, "I have have larger to hear ye gabbling non-sense like a magnicul Mak Benjië what ye like her ye li hak me greet the een out o my head and a woman had hear me out," so, giving her a pat on the shoulder, the sat her ways down, and I resumed my discourse you and no guitto has analom hear mouth, that he has made up his mind to follow out the trade of a gentleman, who has pitt such outrageous notions in his head I'm sore I'm not pretend to guess at he having never myself being labore daily bread, and constant work when I could yet it."

dare not presume to speak from experience; but this Tean say, from having some acquaintances in the line, that, of all easy lives, commend me to that of a gentleman's centlemanus It's true he's cua'd a flunkvi which does not sound quite the thing; but what of that? what's in a name? pugh! it does not signifu a bawbee not her that pinch of snuff: for wif we descend to particulars, we're relalinflunkies together. except his Majesty on the throne Then William Pittis his flunky and half of the House of Commons are his flunkies doing what he bids them, right or wrong, and no daring to disobey orders, not for the hair in their heads then the Earl waits on my Lord Duke-Sir Something waits on my Lord Somebody and his tenant, Mr. so and so, waits on him wand Mrb so and so has his butler and the butler has his flunky and the shoeblack brushes the flunky's jack! et and so one We all hang at one another's tails like adrope of ingans sorve observe, that any such objection in the sight of wphilosopher like bur Benjiey would not weigh a straw's weight as dier sile be Then consider, for a moment, Liust consider, gudewife, what company a flunky is every day taken up with, standing behind the chairs, and helping to clean plates and portergo and the manners he cannot help learning, if he is in the smallest gleg in the uptakey so that, when out of livery, it is the toss up of a halfpenny whether yeufind out the difference between the man and the master wolle learns, in fact, everything To He learns French, he learns dancing in all its branches, he learns how to give boots the finishing polish, he learns how to play at cards as if he had been born and bred an Early-be learns, from pouring the bottles, the names of every wine brewed abroad, the learns how to brush a cost, so that, after six months' tear, and wear, one without spectacles would imagine it had only gotten the finishing stitch on the Saturday night before; and he learns to playon the flute, and the spinnet, and the piano, and the fiddle, and the bagpines and to sing all manner of songs. and to skirl, full gallop, with such a pith and birr. that though he was to lose his precious eve-sight with the smallpox or a flash of forked lightning, or fall down a three-story stain dead downky and smash his legs to such a degree that both of them required to be cut off above the knees half an hour after so fur all right and well- for he could just tear off his shows ther-knot, and make a perfect fortune in othe one case in being led from door to door by a ragged laddie, with a string at the button-hole, playing to Ower the Border, The Hen's March, Donald Me Donald, f Jenny Nettles, and such like grand times on the clarinet por in the other lease, being drawn from town to town, and from door to door, only thurs dle, like a lord, harnessed to four dogs of all colories, at the rate of two miles (in the hour, exclusive of stoppages. What say vergudewife him wanner had a Nanse gave a mournful dook, as if she was fright

ed I had grown demented, and only said, "Tak' your ain way, gudeman pye'se get your ain way for me, I fancy "g year year aldesing a large room.

-Seeing her in this Christian state of resignation I determined at once to hit the nail on the head, and puts andend to the whole business as I intended "Now, Nanse," ono' I, 155 to come to close quarters willye, tell and candidly and seriously what ye think? of a barber ? Every one must allow it's a canny and course of nature. And then they go frot shert sixos dis Aubarber; that shaves beards l'asaid Nansed "10d, Mansie, be're surely gain gyte. Ye're surely chins with seented-soap, or "pemitient keernognishoi Joking Banswered I smoothing down my chine which was gevan rough, -if Joking here or joking there be should not think the settling of an only bairn, in an honourable way o' doing for all the days of his natural life, is any joking businesse We dinna ken what ve're saving, woman. Barbers ! i'fegs, to turn up your nose at barbers; did ever living hear such nonsense; but to be sure, one can blame nobody if they speak to the best of their experience I've heard tell of barbers, woman, about London, that rode up this street, and down that other street, in coaches and four jumping out to every one that halloo'd to then sharping razors both on stone and strap, at the ransom of a penny the pair; and shave ing off men's beards, whiskers and all, stoop and roop, for a three-ha's pence. wo Speak of barbers Hit's

and being by all laws, divine and human, the head

357 ed I had grown demented, and only said, " Tak" allive ken about it to Commend me to a saferemployer ment, and a profitable. They may give others, an nick; and draw blood, but eatch them hurting themselves he They are not exposed to colds and rheuma-I tics from least winds and raint weathen; for they situ in white aprense plaiting hair into wigs for walld folks that have bell-pows, or making false ourls for ladiesy that would fain tlike sto look Ismart diad theo course of nature. And then they go from house too house, like igentlemen in the morning ; reracking with Maister this, ort Madam that, as they soap fleir chins with scented-seap, or putritheir hair uprito marching order either for kilk or playhousen Then, aptheir leisure, when they're not thrang at hidnidy theyo can pare rebrus to the igentry, loungive plowed monts heads the bicker-out for a penuve and the haird into the bargaing ford stuffing ychairs swith go and beto tween us; who knows many rottener ship has comed todand mibit that sime zenty! Misso fond of plays; poems, and novels, may ufandy oour Benjie owhen the is giving her red hairoa twist with the tortuning hironsyl and bun laway with himy almost whiether he will of I that rode up this sevel placed and for brunders striction Heremaking an end of my discourse, and halting to draw dreath, I olbaked Namer broad in the floo, last much as to say, of Contradictane if owou dang and; "Mehat thinks your sthat now Mem The man is not worth bisdlugs that allows his wife storbe maisterer

and being by all laws, divine and human, the head

of the house, I aye made a rule of keeping my putt good. To be candid, howsoever, I must take leave to confess, that Nanse being a reasonable woman, gave me but few opportunities of exerting my authority in this way. As in other matters, she soon came, on reflection, to see the propriety of what I had been saying and setting forth. Besides, she had such a motherly affection towards our bit callant, that sending him abroad would have been the death of her.

To be sure, since these days-which, alas, and woe's me! are not vesterday now, as my grey hair and wrinkled brow but too visibly remind me-such ups and downs have taken place in the commercial world, that the barber line has been clipped of its profits and shaved close, from patriotic competition among its members, like all the rest. Among other things, hair-powder, which was used from the sweep on the lum-head to the king on the throne, is only now in fashion with Lords of Session, and valy-deshambles; and pig-tails have been cut off from the face of the earth, root and branch. Nevertheless, as I have taken occasion to make observation, the foundations of the cutting and shaving line are as sure as that of the everlasting rocks; beards being likely to and reached his fourteenth years and reached his fourteenth years bar sand reached his fourteenth years bar sand reached his fourteenth years both that his apprenticeship could not be gone through with at home, in that first-rate style which would enable of the house, I are made a rule of keeping my putt good. To be candid, howsoever, I must take leave to confess, that Nanse being a reasonable woman. gave me but few opportunities of everting my authority in this way. As in other matters, she soon came. on reflection, to see the property of what I had been saying and setting forth. Headers, she had such a motherly affection towards our bit callant, that sending him abroad would have been the death of her.

It was visible in a twinkling to us both that his apprenticeship could not be gone through with at home, in that first-rate style which would enable him to reach the top of the tree in his profession vet it gave us a sore heart to think of sending away, at so tender an age, one who was so dear to his mother and me, and whom we had as it were, in a manner made a pet of 1, so we reckened it best to article him for a twelvementh with Ebenezer Packwood at the corner, before finally sending him off to Edinburgh, to get his finishing in the wig false curl, and hair-baking department under Urquharte Maclaughlan, or Connal Accordingly L sent for Eben, to come and gat an eggowith me, matters were entered upon and arranged Benjie was sent on trial; and, though at first he funked and fought refractory, he came to the astonishment of his master and the old apprentices in less than no time to cut hair without many visible shear marks wand. within the first quarter, succeeded, without so much! as drawing blood, to unbristle for adwager of his master's, the Saturday night's countenance of Daniel Shoebrush himself, who was as rough as a badger. out

Haying thus done for Benjie, it now beloved meto have an eye downds myself: for having tunned the corner of manhood. I found that I was beginning to be wearing away, down the hill-side of life. Customers, who had as much faith in me as almost in their Bible, with regard, to everything connected with my own department, and who could depend on their cloth being cut according to the newest and most approved fashions, began now and then to return a coat upon inv hand for alteration, as Being quite out of date; while my daily work, to which in the days of other years I had got up blither as the lark, instead of being a pleasure, came to be looked forward to with trouble and anxiety, weighing off my heart as a care, and on my shoulders as a burden. of Finding but too severely that such was the case," and that there is no contending with the course of nature I took sweet counsel together with James Batter over a cup of tea and a cookie, concerning what it was best for a man placed in my circumwere entered upon and sor alexand shared or resents Idas industry ever has it own reward, let me with out brag of boasting be allowed to state, that on my own case, it did not disappoint my exertions. Thad satodown a tenent, and I was now not only the land! lord of my own house and shop, but of all the Backy tenements to the head of the garden as also of the remorf one-story houses behind, facing to the loan, in the centre of which Lucky Thompson keeps up the sign of the Tankard and Tappit Hen unit awas also a relief to my mind, as the head of my family. that's we had cut Benjiedloss from his mother's appoint string, poor fellow, and set himb adrift an an Konest way of doing to baffet the stormy ocean of life 79 80,3 every thing considered, it was found that enough and to spare had been haid past by Nanse and me to spend the evening of Bur days by the found dyked most approved fashions, begatolino Sitsamob to shis

In Tommy Bodkin, to whom I trust I had been a dutiful, as I know I was an honoured master, I found a faithful journeyman, he having served me in that capacity for nine years; so it is not miraculous, being constantly during that period under my attentive eye, that he was now quite a deacon in all the departments of the business. As an eident scholar he had his reward; for customers, especially during the latter years, when my sight was scarcely so good, as a seminard and to have been added to the been at length to be not very scripulous as to whether their cloth was cut by the man or his master. Never let filial piety be overlooked;—when I first patronized Tommy, and promoted him to the dignity of sitting cross-legged along with me on the working-board, he was a hatless and shoeless raggamuffin, the orphan lad of a widowed mother, whose husband had been killed by a chain-shot, which carried off his head, at the bloody battle of the Nile, under Lord Nelson. Tommy was the oldest of four, and the other three were lasses, that knew not in the morning where the day's providing was to come from, except by trust in him who sent the ravens to Elijah. By allowing Tommy a trifle for board-wages, I was enabled to add my mite to the comforts of the family, for he was kind, frugal, and dutiful, and would willingly share with them to the last morsel. In the course of a few years he became his mother's bread-winner, the lasses being sent to service. I myself having recommended one of them to Deacon Burlings, and another to Springheel the dancing-master; retaining Katie, the youngmessages when required.

Providence having thus blessed Tommy's efforts

in the paths of industrious sobriety, what could I do better-James Batter being exactly of the same opinion-than make him my successor, giving him the shop at a cheap rent, the stock in trade at a moderate valuation, and the good will of the business as a

Having recommended Tommy to public patronage and support, he is now, as all the world knows, a thriving man; nor, from Berwick Bridge to Johnny Groat's, is it in the power of any gentleman to have his coat cut in a more fashionable way, or on more moderate terms, than at the sign of the Goose and the Pair of Shears rampant.

Leaving Tommy to take care of his own matters, as he is well able to do, allow me to observe, that it is curious how habit becomes a second nature, and how the breaking in upon the ways we have been long and long accustomed to through the days of the years that are past, is as the cutting asunder of the joints and marrow. This I found bitterly, even though I had the prospect before me of spending my old age in peace and plenty. I could not think of leaving my auld house—every room, every nook in the was familiar to my heart. The garden trees seem-end belong the service of the second property of the second property of the service of the second property of the second property

ed to wave their branches sorrowfully over my head as bidding me a farewell; and when I saw all the scraighing hens catched out of the hen-house I had twenty wears before built, and tiled with my own hands, and tumbled into a sack, to be carried on limping Jock Dalgleish's back up to our new abode at Lugton, my heart swelled to my mouth, and the mist of gushing tears bedimmed my eye-sight Four of Thomas Burlings' flour carts stood laden before the door with our furniture, on the top of which were three of Nanse's grand geraniums in flower-pots. with five of my walking sticks tied together with a string and, as Lipaced through the empty rooms. where I had passed so many pleasant and happy hours, the sound of my feet on the bare floor seemed in my ears like an echo from the grave of On our road to Lugton I could scarcely muster common sense to answer a person who wished us a good day; and Nanse as we daundered on armi-in-arms never once took her napkin from her een. Oh, but it was Headstones and bendstones aroundsenizudayreswa

mReing in this sober frame of mind allow me to wind up this chapter the last entastrophe of my eventful life that I mean at present to make public with a few serious reflections; as it fears me, that, in much of what I have set down ill natured people may see a good deal scarcely consistent with my character for dougeness and circumspection; but if many wonderfuls have fallen to my share, it would be well to remember, that a man's lot is not of his as bidding me a farewell; and when I guidanilawo bu Musing within myself on the chances and changes of time, the uncertainties of life, the frail thread by which we are tacked to this world, and how the place that now knows us shall soon know us no more, I could not help, for two or three days previous to my quitting my dear old house and shop, taking my stick into my hand, and wandering about all my old haunts and houffs and need I mention that among these were the road down to the Duke's south-gute with the deers on't, the water-side by Woodburn, the Cow-brigg, up the back street, through the flesh-market, and over to the auld kirk in among the headstones. For three walks, on three different days, I set out in different directions ; vet. strange to say ! I ave landed in the kickyard !- and where is the man of woman born proud enough to brag, that it shall not be his fate to land there at once took her napkin from her een. Oh, but if tesh

Headstones and headstones around me? some newly put up, and others mossy and grey; it was a hombling yet an edifying sight, preaching, as forcibly as ever Maister Wiggie did in his best days, of the vanity and the passingness of all human enjoyments. Mouldered to dust beneath the turfs lay the blithe laddies with whom I have a hundred times played merry games on moulight mights; some were some out off; others grew up to their full estate; and there stood I, a grey haired man, among the weeds and flettles, mourning over times hever to return !! lio The reader will no doubt be anxious to hear & few words regarding my son Benjle, who has turned out just as his friends and the world expected. JAfter his time with Ebenezer Packwood in Dalketh, he served for four years in Edinburgh, where he cut a distinguished figure, having shaved and shorn lots of the nobility and gentry; among whom was a French duchess, and many other foreigners of distinction. In short, nothing went down at the principal hotels but Mr. Benjamin the barber; and, had he been so disposed, he could have commenced on his own footing, with every chance of success; but knowing himself fully young, and being anxious to see more of the world before settling, he took out a passage in one of the Leith smacks, and set sail for London. where he arrived, after a safe and prosperous voyage, without a hair of his head injured. The only thing that I am ashamed to let out about him is, that he is now, and has been for some time past, principal shopman in a Wallflower, Hair-powder, and Genuine Macassar Oil Warehouse, kept by three Frenchmen, called Moosies Peroukey.

But, though our natural enemies, he writes me, that he has found them agreeable and chatty masters, full of good manners, and pleasant discourse, first-rate in their articles, and, except in their language, almost Christians.

and Lave thought Benjie was a genius; and he is beginning to shew himself his father's son, being in thoughts of taking put a patent for making hair-oil from rancid butter. If he succeeds it will make the callant's fortune But he must not marry Madamon alle Bergukey without my especial gensent, as Napse says, that her having a French woman for her daughdistinguished free death of her he lainguistib of the nobility and gentry; among whom was a French duchess, and many other foreigners of dis-In short, nothing went down at the principal hotels but Mr. Benjamin the barber : and, had he been so disposed, he could have commenced on his own footing, with every chance of success; but knowing himself fully young, and being anxious to see more of the world before settling, he took out a passage in one of the Leith smacks, and set sail for London, where he arrived, after a safe and prosperous voyage, without a hair of his head injured. The only thing that I am ashamed to let out about him is, that he is now, and has been for some time past, principal shopman in a Wallflower, Hair-powder, and Genuine Macassar Oil Warehouse, kept by three Frenchmen, called Moosies Peroukey.

But, though our natural enemies, he writes me, that he has found them agreeable and chatty masters, full of good manners, and pleasant discourse first-rate in their articles, and, except in their language, almost Christians.

ing cross-legged on the board; and if I do not stop at this critical juncture—to wit, my retiring from trade, and the settlement of my dear and only son Benjie in an honourable way of doing; as who dares to deny that the barber and hair-cutting line is a safe and honourable employment;—I do not know when and honourable employment;—I do not know when I might get to the COLSULY COLST.

I might get to the very reasonable man must take in the extraordinary doven they down they are traordinary doven they down they are sold they have dears, might be grievously made they be and though the garrulity of alleme but as and do again the

Perhaps Leundryel of whole web add when I say, that the whole world cannot fail to be interested in the occurrences of my life; for, since its creation, sonOk first commencing this memoir of my life, I put pen to paper with the laudable view of handing down to postericy to day schildren, and to their children sichildreno the accidents, adventures, and mischances that may fall to the lot of a man, placed by providence even in the loundest situation of life. where her seemed to lie sheltered in the bield of peace and privacy , and, at that time, it was my intention to have carried down my various transactions to this dividual day and date. My materials, however, have swelled on my hand like summer corn under summy showers, one thing has brought another to remembrance; sowds of byepast marvels have come before my mind's eve in the silent watches of the night, concerning the days when I sat workbetter when they come to see us, or bide at home.

ing cross-legged on the board; and if I do not stop at this critical juncture—to wit, my retiring from trade, and the settlement of my dear and only son Benjie in an honourable way of doing; as who dares to deny that the barber and hair-cutting line is a safe and honourable employment?—I do not know when I might get to the end of my tether; and the interest, which every reasonable man must take in the extraordinary adventures of my early years, might be grievously marred and broken in upon through the garrulity of old age.

Perhaps I am going a little too far when I say, that the whole world cannot fail to be interested in the occurrences of my life; for, since its creation, which was not vesterday. I do not believe and James Batter is exactly of the same mind-that there ever was a subject concerning which the bulk of mankind have not had two opinions. Knowing this to be the case, I would be a great gomeril to expect that I should be the only white swan that ever appeared; and that all parties in church and state, who are for cutting each others throats on every other great question, should be unanimous only in what regards me-Englishmen, for instance, will say that I am a bad speller, and that my language is kittle; and such of the Irishes as can read will be threaping that I have abused their precious country; but, my certificinstead of blaming me for letting out what I could not deny, they must just learn to behave themselves better when they come to see us, or bide at home.

Being by hature a Scotchman Lbeing I say of the blood of Robert Bruce and Sir William Wallace and having in my day and generation buckled on my sword to keep the battle from oun gates in the hourtof danger, ill would it become me to speak but the plain truth, the whole truth, and any thing but the truth. JaNo, although bred to a peaceable ocenpation, I am the subject of a free king and constitution; and oif I have written as I speak, I have just spokenicas Lethought and Therman of clearning, that kens mollanguage saving Greek, and Gaelie, and Hebrew will doubtless laugh at the curiosity of my dialect; but Livould just recommend him, as he is a philosophera to considera for a wee, that there are other things, in mortal dife and in human nature; worth a moment's consideration, besides old Pagan Heathers pot-hobks and hangers the asses bridge and the weary walls of Troy; which dast city for all that has been said and sung about it, would be found, I would stake my life upon it, could it be seen at this moments not worth half a thought, when compared with the New Town of Edinburgh of all towns in the world, however, Dalkeith for my money. Hytherignorant are dombfoundered at one of their ownkidney loa tailor daddie, that got the feek of his small teducation leathered into shim, at Dominie Threshtem's school thinking himself an author. I would just remind them that seeing is believing and that they should keep up at good heart, as it is impossible to say what may yet he their own fortune before they died The rich man's apology Inwould beggiff in this humble narrative; in this detail of manners almost hidden from the sphere of his observation, the have in any tinstance trainpeditors the tender toes of good breeding por given just offence in breadth of expression, or vulgarity of language! Letothis however be my apology, othat the tonly value of my wonderful history donsists in its being asuitrue das death La circumstance Which it could have slender pretensions to had Locoined stories or coloured them to please my own fancy and that of the world of In that case it would have been very easy for me to have made a Sinbad the Sailor's talk out of it to have shewn myself up a man such as the world has hever seen except on paper to have made Cursecowl behave like a gentleman, and the Frenchman from Pennicuick crack like a Christiahl And to the poor man, him whom the wise disposer of all events has seen fit to place in a situation sinis ilar to that in which I have been placed, ordaining him to earn daily bread by the dabour of his hards and the sweat of his brow, if my adventures shall afford an hour or two's pleasant amusement, when, after working hours, he sits by his bleezing ingle with a barrn on each knee, while his oldest idaughteris sewing her seam; and his goodwife with her right foot birls round the spinning wheel, then my purpose is gained; and more than gained; for it is my firm belief behat no man, who has by head or hand in any way lightened an ounce weight of the load of human misery, can be truly said to have been unprofitable, in his day, or disappointed the purpose of his creation. For what more can we do here be low; and the God who formed us; breathing into our nestrils the breath of life, is, in his almighty power and wisdom, far removed beyond the sphere of our poor and pality offices. We are of the clay, and report and pality offices. We are of the clay, and report turn to the elements from which we were formed. He is a spirit without beginning of days or end off years. The extent of our limited exertions reaches no farther than our belief in and our duty towards. Him a which in my humble opinion, can be best shown by us in our love and charity towards our fellow, creatures—the master work of his hands,

I would not willingly close this record of my life. without expressing a few words of heartfelt gratitude towards the multitude, from whom, in the intercourse of the world, I have experienced good offices; and towards the few, who, in the hour of my trials and adversities, remained with faces towards me steadfast; and unalterable, scorning the fickle who scoffed, and the Levite who passed by on the other side. Of old hath it been said, that a true friend is the medicine of life; and in the day of darkness when my heart was breaking, and the world with all its concerns seemed shaded in a gloom never to pass away, how deeply have I acknowledged the truth of the maxim! How shall I repay such kindness? Alas! it is out of my power. But all I can do, I do. I think of it on my pillow at the silent hour of midnight: my heart burns with the gratitude it hath not may hever! have an opportunity of shewing to the world come I pat up my prayer in faith to Him who seeth in secret, that he may bless and reward them openly Sorrows and pleasures are inseparably mixed up in the cup set for man's drinking; and the summest day liath its cloud. lo But Thave made this observand tion, that, if true happiness, or any thing like true happiness, is to be found in this world, it is only to be purchased by the practice of wittee Things will fall out who it bath been ordained in this scene of trial even to the Best and purest of heart, which must carry sorrow to the bosom, and bring tears to the evelids: and then, to the wayward and the wicked, bitter '9s their misery as the waters of Marah. But never can the good man be wholly unhappy; He has that within which passeth shew; the anchor of his faith is fixed on the rock of ages; and when the dark cloud bath glided over and it will glide it leaves behind it the blue and unclouded heaven 19V If, concerning religious matters, a tone of levity at any time seems to infect these pages, I cry ve mercy; for nothing was farther from my intention; yet," though acknowledging this, I maintain that it is a vain thing to look on religion as on a winter night, full of terror, and darkness, and storms. No one, it strikes me, errs more widely than he who sup poses that man was made to mourn that the sance tity of the heart is shewn by the length of the face, my pillow at the silent hour of midnight: my heart and that mirth, the pleasant mirth of innocent hearts. is sinful in the sight of Heaven. I'll never believe that. The very sun may appear dimitto such folks as choose only to look at him through green spectacles; as by the poor wretch who is dwining in the jaundice, the driven snow could be sworn of as a bright yellow. Such opinions, however, lie between man and his Maker, and are not for the like of us to judge of. For myself I have enjoyed a pleasant run of good health through life, reading my Bible more in hope than fear; our salvation, and not our destruction, being I should suppose its purpose. So, when I behold bright suns and blue skies, the trees in blossom, and birds on the wing, the waters singing to the woods, and Earth looking like the abode of them who were at first formed but a little lower than the angels, I trust that the overflowing of a grateful heart will not be reckoned against me for unrighteousness.

THE END.

RDINBURG

PRINTED BY JOHN JOHNSTONE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF CAPIL THORNTON

The part of the second ----

٠.

